PUBLIC NOTICES.

A patriotic rally will be held in Old St. Paul's Church, near the Borough Hall Subway Station, Brooklyn, this (Thursday) evening, Ascension night and the rector's anniversary. A special war service will be held and parishioners will each bring a red rose to the memory of the Allies' dead in France and place them at the foot of an altar presented by a resident of Paris. The altar has the lilies of France around it emblazoned in gold, and in it are enshrined the patron saints of France. Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. McComas, vicar of Old Trinity, New York, and Captain Cornelius of the British Army.

To whom it may concern: This notifies you I am no longer connected with firm known as Rocklin-Stevenson; undersigned will not be responsible for any debts contracted by H. S. Stevenson.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The northern disturbance of the last few days is central tonight over New Brunswick, with decreased intensity, and the attendant rain area within the last twenty-four hours covered New England, the Middle Atlantic States, and the Ohio Valley lightly, and Tennessee, the Carolinas, and the northern portions of the East Gulf States more substantially.

Another well defined disturbance is central over Colorado, with rapidly rising pressure to the northward, and from this general rain resulted west of the Rocky Mountains, with some snow in extreme Western Montana, and there were also showers in the upper Mississippi Valley and the Northwest.

It is considerably cooler from Lake Huron eastward and throughout the rain area in the extreme West, while in the lower Missouri Valley, the Plains States, and the Southwest temperatures are very high for the season, with a maximum of 96 degrees at Oklahoma, the highest reading for the month of May.

FORECASTS—TODAY AND FRIDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair, cooler in the extreme south portion Thursday; Friday, partly cloudy and warmer, probably showers in the interior.

Southern New England—Fair Thursday; Friday, partly cloudy, probably showers in western Massachusetts; warmer in the interior.

New Jersey—Fair, cooler on the coast Thursday; Friday, warmer and fair except for probable showers in the northwestern portion.

Western New York—Fair Thursday, showers at night or Friday.

Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Thursday; Friday, partly cloudy and warmer, probably showers in the northern portion.

Northern New England—Fair Thursday, cooler, near the coast Thursday; Friday, fair except for showers in Vermont, warmer in the interior.

3 A. M.	42	66	4 P. M.	51	78
6 A. M.	44	65	6 P. M.	50	74
9 A. M.	45	69	9 P. M.	48	63
12 M.	47	75	11 P. M.	46	55

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 66; for the corresponding date last year it was 47; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 57. The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 66, at 8 P. M. it was 68. Maximum temperature, 78 degrees at 4:15 P. M.; minimum, 55 degrees at 11 P. M. Humidity, 72 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 31 per cent at 8 P. M. The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.72 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.78 inches.

Education Notes.

Miss Frances F. De Ligards, assistant to the Principal of P. S. 41, the Bronx, an annex to P. S. 13, is dead.

There are more than thirty candidates for the principalship of Morris High School, which will become vacant in September, when John H. Denbigh becomes President of the Packer Collegiate Institute, Brooklyn. District Superintendents William J. O'Shea, Edward W. Stitt, Benjamin Veit, and Charles W. Lyon are among those named to succeed Dr. William L. Ettinger as Associate Superintendent.

District Superintendent Jenkins, in charge of evening schools, will make an address today in Philadelphia.

One of the most worthy enterprises of De Witt Clinton High School is a Vocational Guidance and Placement Bureau, formed under the supervision of Edward C. Delaney, an instructor of History at that school. He is aided in his work by some eight or ten students, who devote their spare time to the betterment of the conditions of their schoolmates. A large percentage of the students of the New York City high schools are forced to leave because of financial difficulties. In Clinton, however, this problem has been partly solved. When a boy applies for his discharge from the school because of financial pressure, he is instead placed in a position where he earns from $3 to $10 a week, according to his needs and abilities. Many are thus enabled to continue their education. Readers of THE TIMES are asked, if they have a job of any kind that can be done on school days or all day Saturday, and all day every day during the Summer, to address De Witt Clinton High School, Fifty-ninth Street and Tenth Avenue, telephone Columbus 4175.

The Board of Aldermen has authorized the Board of Education to enter into contract without public letting for the completion of the repairs to the heating and plumbing plants in sundry school buildings.

Darwin R. James, Jr., Chairman of the American Red Cross Second War Fund, Brooklyn, has received permission to obtain contributions from the public schools of that borough. Superintendent Ettinger has been requested to look after the matter of contributions for the Red Cross through the schools of other boroughs.

Leave of absence has been granted to Miss Fannichelle Curtis, Director of Kindergartens, until next September, to organize kindergarten work for the children in France.

The New York Schoolmasters' Club will meet on the evening of May 11 at the Aldine Club rooms, 200 Fifth Avenue. President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University will make an address.

The New York Chapter of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish will meet at 10:30 A. M. on May 11 at the Museum of the Hispanic Society of America, 156th Street, west of Broadway.

ARREST RUSSELLITES ON SEDITION CHARGES

Rutherford, Who Succeeded Late 'Pastor,' and Five Other Leaders Barely Escape Jail.

INDICTED IN FEDERAL COURT

Inciting Refusal to Do Military Duty and Sending Money to Germany Alleged.

Charged with spreading doctrines calculated to promote unrest and disloyalty among the men of the army and navy, six leaders of the International Bible Students' Association, which was founded by the late "Pastor" Charles T. Russell, were arrested yesterday afternoon in Brooklyn by United States Marshal James M. Power.

The arrests were made at the "Bethel," the headquarters of the society, at 122 Columbia Heights, and among the men taken into custody was ex-Judge Joseph F. Rutherford, who is said to be the successor of "Pastor" Russell as the head of the organization. The sextet were saved from going to the City Prison for the night through a swift real estate transaction, by which one of the members of the association became temporary title holder to property of the society, enabling him to give bonds for the prisoners.

The Federal Grand Jury indictment, under which Rutherford and his associates were arrested, charges them with "unlawfully and willfully conspiring to cause insubordination, disloyalty, and refusal of duty of the military and naval forces of the United States." When arraigned before Judge Garvin in the United States District Court the accused all pleaded not guilty. Besides Rutherford, they were William E. Van Amburgh, A. Hugh McMillan, Robert J. Martin, Frederick H. Robinson, and Giovanni De Cecca. The first four named were held in $5,000 bail each, and the other two in $2,500 each.

When it came to the question of bail, the Russellites, as they are called, with the aid of a lawyer had a long debate with United States District Attorney France. They were told by Mr. France that the property of the association, being that of a religious corporation, could not be accepted as security for their future appearance in court. The Trustees of the society then put their heads together and decided to transfer the title to the Columbia Heights property, which, they said, was worth $100,000, to one of their number, John F. Stevenson. This was done, and Mr. Stevenson, qualifying as bondsman, the prisoners were released pending a hearing next week. Neither of them would make any statement after leaving court.

There are four counts in the indictment, all charging disloyalty. Rutherford, McMillan, Van Amburgh and Martin are also charged with having sent money to a representative of the association in Germany. These funds—$300, deposited in the name of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society in the Nassau National Bank, Manhattan—are said to have been withdrawn on Nov. 7 last and sent by draft to Barmen, Germany, through Zurich, Switzerland.

The indictment was based largely upon matter published in the Watch Tower and Kingdom News, publications issued by the society, and "The Finished Mystery," a work by the late "Pastor" Russell. The magazines contain letters written from Italy and having to do with the trial in that country of a member of the International Bible Students' Association for making defamatory remarks about military service.

ARMY CHANGE IN IRELAND.

Report That General Sir Bryan Mahon Is to be Superseded.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, May 8. (Despatch to the London Daily Chronicle.)—The Government, I am afraid, committed themselves to another grave blunder in their dealings with Ireland. When I heard yesterday that they had decided to supersede Sir Bryan Mahon in the Irish command I scoffed at the rumor. Today the supersession is spoken of as an accomplished fact, and the name of Sir Bryan's successor is even mentioned in quarters which are above and beyond the uncertainties of more rumor.

If my information is accurate, and I have no doubt myself that it is, the Government is making a very great mistake and one that will not lose anything in disastrous consequence from the circumstance that it will be associated with Ulster and the Covenanting antecedents of Sir Henry Wilson, Chief of the Imperial Staff, and the rigid Prussianism of Lord Milner, who certainly has no more friends in Ireland than he has in England.

It is difficult to guess at Mahon's disqualifications for his post. If he is suspected of a desire to see Home Rule in operation before conscription is applied, then he is only suspected in common with Lord French, the new Lord Lieutenant, and it is notorious that the new Chief Secretary is irrevocably committed to the same precedence.

If the report which I reproduce is well founded, the greatest possible stimulus will be given to the Sinn Fein and the anti-conscription movement throughout the country.

Home Rule Bill is Coming Soon.

LONDON, May 8, (via Ottawa.)—Andrew Bonar Law, Government spokesman and Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in the House of Commons today that he hoped an Irish Home Rule bill would be introduced into the House before Whit Sunday, May 19.

LORDS DEBATE PACIFISTS.

Lansdowne's Negotiation Idea is Assailed by Curzon.

LONDON, May 8.—In the House of Lords today a debate arose on the pacifist agitation.

The Marquis of Lansdowne reiterated his opinion that peace would never come except by negotiation. Those expecting that peace would come through a knock-out blow, he said, were unable to tell the country how that blow could be delivered or the cost of delivering it.

There existed a great body of opinion in Germany and Austria, continued Lord Lansdowne, which was sick of the butchery and desirous of stopping it. He who wished to encourage that kind of opinion and advocated a knock-out should think twice before driving the British people into a very dangerous mood.

Earl Curzon thought too much was being made of the pacifist propaganda. He was unable to find any foundation for the suggestion that peace overtures had been turned down. The Government had in view always the possibility of an honorable termination of the war by negotiation. At no time had this or the other allied Governments refused to consider any negotiations. On the contrary, it was tho understanding among the Allies that if overtures were made at any time to any of them from responsible quarters of a bona fide character, the ally to whom they were made should investigate them, always on the understanding that if anything came of them the remainder of the allies should be communicated with, so that combined action might be taken.

"Peace by negotiation," concluded Lord Curzon, "is utterly impossible at this moment, because this country is confronted with the greatest crisis in its history."

PRIZES FOR STAMP POSTERS

Adolph Treidler Wins $1,000 in War Savings Competition.

The National War Savings Committee announced yesterday the winners in the $2,000 competition for the best posters and advertisements for War Savings Stamps. The competition was divided into three classes, and the judges were Charles Dana Gibson, Chairman; Frederic W. Allen, Ernest Elmo Calkins, Heyworth Campbell, J. H. Chapin, Professor Arthur W. Dow, Frank Finney, and Ray Greenleaf. The winners in the three groups were as follows:

Poster Class.—First prize, $1,000, Adolph Treidler, 32 West Eleventh Street; second prize, $300, Coles Phillips, New Rochelle, and honorable mention, Casper Emerson, Jr., 1201 Flatiron Building.

Advertisement and Cartoon Class.—First prize, $250, M. Leone Bracker, 844 Riverside Drive; second prize, $100, Hal Marchbanks, 114 East Thirteenth Street, and Honorable mention, Fred W. Goudy, 114 East Thirteenth Street.

Car and Window Card Class.—First prize, $250, C. B. Inwood, 205 East 181st Street; second prize, $100, Mrs. L. M. Rudge, Mount Vernon, and honorable mention, Ray Greenleaf, 344 West Seventy-second Street.

The receipts from the sale of War Savings Stamps in the city jumped yesterday to $180,532, bringing the total sales from May 1 up to $1,112,000. This makes the grand total in the New York district to date $12,280,016. Boy Scouts are particularly active in the Thrift Campaign, striving to capture the Ace medals awarded to each scout selling $250 worth of stamps. Up to Monday 517,585 scout cards had been turned in. Two thousand selected at random showed an average of $36.62 per card.

SHELL EXPLOSION KILLS 9 SOLDIERS

An Entire Gun Crew Is Wiped Out by an Accident in Camp in Texas.

TRYING OUT NEW MORTARS

Gunner Tries to Force Into Breach Shell Which Does Not Fit and It Bursts.

FORT WORTH, Texas, May 8.—Nine American gunners were killed and seven injured more or less seriously near Benbrook, a few miles west of Fort Worth, when a three-inch shell exploded at 3 o'clock this afternoon. One gun crew, made up of members of the headquarters company of the 141st Infantry, was wiped out entirely, and a second crew from headquarters company of the 142d Infantry suffered heavy casualties. Six of the men were killed instantly and three died within a short time.

An attempt on the part of a gunner to force the shell, which apparently did not fit, down a trench mortar is believed to have been responsible for the accident. Sergeant Norman Bow, a Canadian, who is an assistant instructor, said tonight that he saw a soldier attempting to force the shell and that he attempted to warn the gunner. The explosion came too quickly, however, Bow being slightly wounded by a fragment of the shell. The list of dead follows:

McDAVID, ALAN J., First Lieutenant, Headquarters Co., 142d Infts., Overton, Texas.
JONES, WHARTON, Corporal, Headquarters Co., 141st Infts., San Marcos, Texas.
APPLENG, WILLIAM P., Corporal, 141st Infts., Elens, Texas.
ELLIS, W. J., Corporal, Headquarters Co., 141st Inf., Abilene, Texas.
TILLMAN, DEWEY, private, Headquarters Co., 141 Inf., address not announced.

The wounded, except Sergeant Bow, were all from Texas.

General E. St. John Greble, commanding officer at Camp Bowie, was standing less than ten yards from the scene of the explosion with his two aides, Captain Houghton and Lieutenant Russell. They were uninjured. Lieut. Col. Metcalfe, Division Surgeon, and an enlisted man, also stood nearby. The enlisted man, also stood near by. The engineer was unhurt.

The 141st and 142d Infantry Regiments were at the trench system near Benbrook, and their firing practice was being watched from a distance by a large crowd of civilians. New mortars were being used for the first time, and the sound of heavy firing at the camp had been plainly heard in Fort Worth since early morning.

The two gun crews, made up of men from the headquarters companies of the two regiments, were operating the new mortars, which were located on a hill overlooking the trench system. The entire breech of the mortar was blown out, and fragments flew in every direction.

Barnard Girls Go to Farm Camp.

Half a dozen Barnard undergraduates are leaving for the woman's agricultural camp at Bedford this week, since the authorities have decided to grant full credit, on the basis of the mid-term marks, to students who engage in farm work before the end of the term. Among those taking advantage of this opportunity for patriotic service are two seniors, Helena Shine and Margaret Snyder; two juniors, Grace Weizmiller and Eleanor Curnow, and a freshman, Aldine Carter. Helen Stevens, a senior, has obtained leave of absence from May 13 to May 25 for a motor tour of the State with Mrs. O. H. Havemeyer, in which speeches in behalf of the women's land army will be made in Rochester, Albany, Binghamton, Utica, Ithaca, and other cities.

STRANGS BOTH GUILTY OF BURNING CHILDREN

Father Pleads Guilty and Mother Makes No Defense — Victims Show How Crime Was Done.

No defense was offered by Mrs. Charles Strang of West New Brighton, on trial yesterday before Justices Murphy, McInerny, and Herrmann in Special Sessions Court, Staten Island, on the charge of burning the face and hand of her eleven-year-old stepson Raymond with a hot poker. She was found guilty. Her husband pleaded guilty to burning the hands of his stepdaughter Elizabeth.

Mr. and Mrs. Strang were remanded until May 15 for sentence. The maximum penalty for the offense is three years.

Before a courtroom jammed with spectators Raymond Strang testified that on March 25 his stepmother placed his hand on a hot stove. "Then she took a poker," he said, "and after heating it in the fire burned my face and hand. It was all because I had taken some jelly."

To illustrate how Mrs. Strang burned him, Raymond took his sister Elizabeth by the wrist, and, placing her hand on the courtroom table, he used a stick to represent the poker, showing how the burns were inflicted. Elizabeth said she saw her stepmother heat the poker for about three minutes, and then put it on her brother's hand and face, after which she placed his hand on the stove. "My grandmother was in the room then," she said.

In pleading for clemency for Strang, Attorney George Pinney said that his client was sober and industrious, and that he was not unkind to his children. Justice Murphy refused to accept bail after he had been informed that Mrs. Strang disappeared on Tuesday night, and was found only after a search of several hours.

During the noon recess, Henry A. Mutart, father of Emma Mutart, 15 years old, niece of Mrs. Strang, was arrested on a charge of beating his daughter on a train between Saratoga and Sandy Hill, N. Y. The girl was expected to testify at the trial, but disappeared a week ago and was recently found at the home of her grandmother in Hudson Falls, N. Y. Her father will be taken to Fort Edward, N. Y., for trial.

URGE SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT

Secretaries Daniels and Lane Speak for Its Early Enactment.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Secretary of the Interior Lane made statements today favoring the immediate passage of the Federal suffrage amendment. Secretary Daniels said:

"If there is anything certain written in the Book of Fate, it is that women are to have the ballot, not only in America, but in every free country as well. In those States where women have voted they have shown that they are equally as capable as men in exercising the franchise wisely and patriotically, and always for the protection of the home. The wisdom of giving women the ballot has been accentuated during this war, for in every line of war work, from keeping the morale high in the home and in the camp to manufacturing torpedoes, women have enlisted their service.

"The action of the House of Representatives in submitting the constitutional amendment for woman suffrage to the States received the warm approval of the American people, and I am sure that this electoral reform will be another step toward better government and toward the wise instruction of children in the home in their duties in government. I trust that its coming may be hastened."

Secretary Lane said: "Because of the great numbers of women in industry and other need for protection, I feel that the suffrage amendment should be passed now. Its passage is inevitable; it should not be delayed."

CHARITY TAX DEDUCTIONS.

Commissioner Defines Status of Partnership Contributions.

In reply to many inquiries received from managers of the Red Cross, Collector Edwards of the Second or Wall Street Internal Revenue district, made public a telegram received by him from Commissioner Daniel C. Roper, which read as follows:

"Contributions made to a charitable organization, such as the American Red Cross, &c., by a partnership, are not deductible from income of the partnership for the purpose of computing the amount of their excess profits tax; the only contribution permissible as a deduction by the partnership are those that are connected with the trade or business of the partnership, and which, therefore, constitute an expense of the business.

"On the individual income tax returns made by the members of the partnership, for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of income subject to income tax, the proportionate part of the charitable contributions made by the partnership, may be included with the individual partner's personal contributions and the entire amount deducted, provided the total of the personal and proportionate part of partnership contributions does not exceed 15 per cent. of taxpayer's net income."

FOE RESISTS VIGOROUSLY

ENEMY GAINS AT ALBERT

Wins Foothold on 150-Yard Front, Although Losing Heavily Under British Fire.

LONDON, May 9.—Hard fighting continued last night and this morning in the area north of Kemmel on the Lys salient, where the Germans yesterday, by a strong thrust, entered the British trenches between La Clytte and Voormezeele.

The forces of General Haig took the offensive in this struggle, and today, according to announcement from the Field Marshal's headquarters, they reestablished their line completely in the old positions.

Most of their recovery of ground was made during the night, but the Germans, by another hard push, took some of the contested ground again, only to lose it finally.

About 25,000 Germans took part in this attack, according to the day bulletin of the War Office, and they suffered heavy casualties, it is stated.

After great artillery activity the Germans made two attacks today in the Albert sector. At Bouzincourt, two miles northwest of Albert, the enemy was unable to reach the British trenches because of the heavy fire.

At Albert, however, the Germans, pressing ahead despite large losses, occupied the British advanced position on a front of about 150 yards.

More progress has been made by the British troops in the region between the Somme and the Ancre, where the Australians have been gaining ground for two days.

The bulletin from General Haig's headquarters tonight says:

At the close of the fighting this morning in the La Clytte-Voormezeele sector, the French and British positions on this front were completely re-established.

Following upon hostile artillery activity already reported, the enemy launched two local attacks early this morning in the neighborhood of Albert and Bouzincourt. In the latter locality the enemy's attack was broken up by our rifle and machine gun fire and failed to reach our trenches.

At Albert, after suffering heavy casualties from our fire, his troops succeeded in effecting a lodgment in our advanced position on a front of about 150 yards.

On the remainder of the British front there is nothing to report beyond artillery activity on both sides in the different sectors.

The day statement of the War Office is as follows:

Successful counterattacks launched by British and French troops yesterday, in the La Clytte-Voormezeele sector, drove the enemy from the portions of the allied front line in which he had gained a footing during the morning, and re-established the positions originally held by us. We captured several prisoners.

This morning the enemy again attacked north of Kemmel, and succeeded in pressing back our line slightly at one point, where the fighting continues.

Troops of two German divisions took part in the enemy's attack yesterday morning. Heavy casualties were inflicted on them by our artillery fire, as well as in infantry fighting, both during the attack and in the subsequent counterattack.

Local fighting took place also yesterday at Bucquoy, in the course of which we captured thirty prisoners.

During the night further progress was made by us between the Somme and the Ancre. Our new positions in this sector were improved. Several prisoners were taken by us.

Hostile raids were repulsed in the neighborhood of Lens and Merris. The enemy's artillery developed considerable activity during the night in the Albert sector.

The official statement on aerial operations issued tonight reads:

The weather was fine on Wednesday, but little work in the air was possible south of Arras, owing to a heavy mist. On the northern portion of the front our airplanes were active all day, ten tons of bombs being dropped on Le Cateau, Cambrai, Ba-

Seize in Ireland Man Landed by U-Boat; Prisoner in Tower to be Court-Martialed

LONDON, May 9.—A German submarine recently landed a man on the Irish coast, where he was arrested by Government officials. James Macpherson, Parliamentary Secretary to the War Office, announced in the House of Commons today that this man was in the Tower of London and would be court-martialed.

The collapsible boat in which the Germans landed the man has been inspected by officials. It is made of canvas, with a bottom of twenty-three wooden slats, each four inches wide, making the boat about eight feet long and two feet wide. The canvas sides, about twenty inches high, have an inner lining of rubber fabric, which is blown up from a valve at the rear to give the boat buoyancy. There are loops along the sides in which short wooden braces or struts keep the boat from collapsing.

The whole craft when rolled up weighs less than forty pounds and can be easily carried under a man's arm. When the buoyancy chambers are pumped full of air the boat will easily support three men, although only one is thus far reported to have been arrested. In the side of the boat is a hole about three inches in diameter, which presumably was cut by the occupant in an effort to sink her after landing.

The whole boat is made by hand and impresses one as somewhat amateurish. The valve is made of wood and is rather crude. There are no metal parts to the boat and all work on the canvas is hand sewed.

It was a German submarine that two years ago last April landed Sir Roger Casement on the Kerry coast of Ireland. Casement was apprehended by the Government authorities, taken to London, and after being incarcerated in the Tower of London, was charged with "high treason without the realm." After a sensational trial he was convicted and hanged in Pentonville Prison on Aug. 3, 1916.

The submarine which carried Casement to Ireland was accompanied by a German tramp steamer with a cargo of arms. The steamer was blown up when the crew saw that capture by a British warship was inevitable.

The arrival of Casement in Ireland from Berlin was the prelude to a revolt against British sovereignty which broke out in Dublin on Easter Sunday, in 1916. According to witnesses who testified at the trial Sir Roger was to have led the uprising and was to have utilized the arms which he had imported from Germany. The Irish uprising was suppressed after several hundred persons had been killed or wounded.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 9.—A city of dreadful silence—that is Amiens today.

Imagine a prosperous American centre of 120,000 inhabitants, the railroad traffic, canals, and road system of which make it an important ganglion of national transportation, with an annual commercial turnover reckoned in hundreds of millions, and enormous stores of merchandise. Add to these the incalculable riches of a mediaeval cathedral, considered one of the masterpieces of Gothic architecture, splendid public buildings, and a museum containing priceless frescoes of Puvis de Chavannes.

The sum total gives you Amiens, capital of Picardy, which for six weeks has been the principal goal of German endeavor and for the last fortnight a target of German guns.

As one passes through the deserted streets no sound breaks the stillness save the crackle of one's footsteps in the broken glass that carpets the sidewalk—that and the dull thudding of the senseless cannonade to the eastward. At sudden intervals, now hours apart, now in rapid succession, comes the screaming rattle of a German shell followed by a heavy "hoom, whumpf" of an explosion and the noise of falling masonry.

A Terrible Loneliness.

But of human life there is nothing. Amiens is deserted, like one of the cities of the Middle Ages smitten suddenly by plague.

At first sight there is comparatively little evidence of the destruction other than gaping windows. Doubtless here and there the street car cables hang in tangled festoons from the standards. There is a shattered building every hundred yards, and on the boulevards innumerable spots of green mark the branches torn from the newly foliaged trees. But thus far there is nothing like the wholesale destruction as at Rheims.

It is that which makes Amiens appear so terrible, the silence and loneliness of street after street with never a moving figure or sound of voice to break the monotony of the desolation.

Yet there are still men and even women left in the city. With a shock of surprise one notes a sentry standing impassive at the street corner, or a helmeted fireman, clearing up the rubbish, and also during the intervals of bombardment a little group of soldiers or civilians removing stores or furniture from a building to a waiting vehicle.

Stores of food and other things have been successfully removed under the

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 9.—More than any other fighting man, the American soldier, while amenable to discipline, thinks for himself. He has first hand knowledge that the German fighter is no gentleman, and he knows that this is no kid glove war. He has made up his mind that the best way to win the war is to kill as many boches as possible, and that is his program from now on.

It is because every American soldier has his own opinions about the war that German atrocities will reap their just fruit with the American Army. If the German wants rough warfare, the Americans will take it under due consideration.

I never realized the stupidity of the German practices of barbarity as yesterday, when I saw the reception by American soldiers of the news of the finding of the bodies of two doughboys, who had not only had their heads smashed in, but had also been cruelly bayonected after they fell.

While Americans will never stoop to the inhumane atrocities of the Germans, I believe that the enemy will regret every cruelty practiced on American soldiers. The development of the spirit of revenge is recognized by American commanders, who on several occasions have taken pains to investigate the reports of German atrocities upon Americans, to guard against the excessive development of the desire for retaliation. This was done not because of regard for the Germans, but because military policy demands the taking of prisoners when practicable.

Army Confident of Outcome.

There is one army fighting in France in which there cannot be found the slightest doubt of the eventual outcome of the war. That is the American army.

The American spirit is fresh, and I believe it will stay fresh. Nothing can happen to shake the fine faith of Americans in the real ability of their country and her ultimate success.

I talked yesterday with the General commanding the American troops who participated in the Seicheprey fight. After reading all the reports of the combat, he said:

"American fighters are no quitters."

Although the youngest soldiers in France, the Americans are the most serious. More than any other soldiers they take a deep personal interest in the war. For instance, I heard one today stop a group of comrades and remark: "Say, fellows, just read. The old United States is to have a bumper wheat crop this year. Guess that will

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Thursday, May 9.—It is not everywhere easy for the enemy to assemble his troops or concentrate his guns and ammunition and stores on his front for the next phase of his offensive. Albert is a case in point. From many points the British have complete observation of his positions there, as he has of theirs from the other side of the way, and, needless to say, they are making use of this direct view by flinging over storms of shells whenever his transport is seen crawling along the tracks of the old Somme battlefields or his troops are seen massing among their shell craters.

The town of Albert itself, where once until recent history the golden Virgin used to lean downward with her babe outstretched above the ruins, is now a death trap for the German garrisons there, and for any German gunners who try to hide their batteries among the red brick houses. By day and night their positions are pounded with high explosives and soaked in asphyxiating gas.

I went within 2,000 yards of it yesterday, and saw the heaviest work of the British upon it. It was a wonderful May day, as today is, and the sun shone through a golden haze upon the town. As I looked into Albert and saw the shells smashing through and then away up the Albert-Bapaume road, past the white rim of the great mine crater of La Boiselle to the treeless slopes of Posières, and over all that ground of hills and ditches to the high, wooded distant right, with its few dead stumps of trees, it was hard to believe that all this was in the area of the German Army, that the white, winding lines freshly marked upon this bleak landscape were new German trenches, and that the enemy's outposts were less than 2,000 yards from where I stood.

Frits Having a "Thin Time."

Some siege gunnera were lying on their stomachs and observing the enemy's lines for some monsters I had seen on the way up, monsters that raised their snouts slowly, like elephants' trunks, before bellowing out with an earthquake roar, annihilating all one's senses for a second. Some of the men passed the remark to me that "Albert isn't the town it was" and that "Fritz must be having a thin time there." They also expressed the opinion that the Albert-Bapaume road was not a pleasant walk for Germans on a sunny afternoon.

I did not dispute these points with them, for they were beyond argument. Big shells were smashing into Albert and its neighborhood from many heavy batteries, raising volcanic explosions there, and shrapnel was bursting over the tracks in white splashes.

There was a great noise yesterday, but it was mostly a British noise, for which I am duly thankful. Scores of heavies were scattered about behind the lines, where the woods are in the first glory of their green and where the grass was merry with gold and silver, except where German shells opened deep pits, horribly fresh, so that one knew the enemy had been searching around here for any death he could find. His shells came over in flights over the ruined villages near by and over the twisted chimneys of deserted French châteaux.

Tea in a Dugout de Luxe.

There were some tattered tapestry and some good oak chairs, carved by craftsmen of Louis Quinze, and a bit of carpet cut from a bigger square, and a gilded mirror in a room where I took tea with some gunner officers in one of the forward battery positions. It was not a room in a château, but was newly dug in the earth with a roof of iron sheeting.

The gunner Major, who was once a novelist and an actor, and is now a writer of haunting and rather tragic verses between his hours of killing Germans, has a nice eye for decoration, and will make his hole in the ground, wherever it may be, as pretty a place as any moist pit may be. So, when a French village was being slaughtered the other day by hostile fire, he saved these bits of furniture from destruction and arranged them in his new dugout outside.

As we sat at tea within, flights of British shells passed over into Albert, and the enemy answered back, but not much, and the sun grew warmer over these flowered fields, and birds were singing.

I described in my message yesterday how the noise of gunfire was so steady and loud during the night and early morning over a wide extent of front, and that along all sectors of it there were inquiries as to attacks answered by assurances that there was nothing doing. But after all there was something doing against one body of British troops in Flanders, and judging from later information gained by officers there, it looks as though the enemy had intended a big attack by at least five divisions, though his plan was thwarted by the intense British gunfire.

What actually happened was an assault upon Ridge Wood and its neighborhood north of Vierstraat and of the French left opposite Kemmel Hill, extending along the lines of the French themselves, though not so heavily except in artillery fire. That was intense, prolonged, and terrific for several hours of the night and just before dawn.

Fresh Enemy Division Tried Out.

Behind the German lines, as we now know, a new German division, previously untouched in this offensive, the 52d Reserve, had just relieved the 3d Guards, who, as I have already told, had been badly mauled with their Cockchafers in the recent fighting, and on their left—the British right, of course—there was the 56th German Division, with others opposite the French front.

All these men were crowded into narrow assembly grounds and did not have quiet hours before the moment of attack. They had hours of carnage in the darkness. British and French guns were answering back the German bombardment with their heaviest fire. French howitzers, long-muzzled fellows which during recent weeks I had seen crawling through Flanders with the cornflowers, as the French soldiers call themselves, crowded about them on the gun limbers and transport wagons and muddy horses, and which had traveled long kilometers, were now in action from their emplacements between the ruined villages of the Flemish war zone, and with their little brothers, the soixante-quinzes, their bloodthirsty little brothers, were savage in their destruction and harassing fire.

I have seen the soixante-quinze at work and have heard the rafale des tambours de la mort—the ruffle of the drums of death—as the sound of their fire is described by all soldier writers of France. It was that fire, that slashing and sweeping fire, which helped to break up any big plan of attack against the French troops yesterday morning, and from those assembly places a great part of the German infantry never moved all day, but spent their time, it seems, in carrying back their wounded.

Another Division Also Cut Up.

So it was with another division of German troops intended for assault on the lines further north. The British field batteries and heavies laid down a protective barrage of shellfire of terrible intensity, and here also any German plan of movemnt was "immobilized," the scientific word for the slaughter and destruction of hostile preparations. But in spite of the bombardment of the 52d Reserve Division those German troops in their first baptism of fire in this offensive came out against the British in Ridge Wood. —The forward system of

Want American Money for Grain in Ukraine

LONDON, May 9.—The Central News says that enemy agents are purchasing large quantities of United States notes for shipment to Austria by way of Switzerland, to be used for the purchase of this year's crop from the Ukraine.

Russian peasants, it is explained, will only accept American notes in payment for their produce.

THE TIMES told, some two weeks ago, of an extensive movement, supposedly of German origin, to buy up American bills in neutral countries. The reason for this movement was then not clear to the authorities at Washington. The above dispatch seems to explain it.

The great depreciation of German and Austrian notes in adjacent countries would explain the desire of the Russians to refuse payment in these notes.

LONDON, May 9.—After listening to the speech of Premier Lloyd George in defense of his statements about the military forces of the empire, the House of Commons tonight by a vote of 293 to 106 upheld him and the Government. The vote rejected the motion of ex-Premier Asquith for an investigation of General Maurice's charges by a committee of the House instead of by a committee of judges, as planned by the Government.

Lloyd George's triumph was even more complete than the figures of voting indicated. Some of those who followed Asquith into the lobby voted with him on grounds of purely parliamentary procedure, while others were actuated by personal considerations, believing that the ex-Prime Minister had honestly been misled into taking up an attitude which will weaken the great position he held in Parliament. Some of Lloyd George's most convinced opponents recognized that his speech today made out the best case for the Government he ever presented.

It was characterized by an almost complete absence of certain faults which have occasionally marred his Parliamentary fighting speeches. Practically the only fault found with it was his reference to "cocoa slops." That same so-called "cocoa press" helped considerably to make his earlier political career. Nevertheless, though the speech was an ex-parte statement, it was so clear and apparently honest in its details that it carried conviction to minds which were predisposed to suspicion.

The text of the Premier's speech follows:

Text of Lloyd George's Speech.

A General who for good or bad reasons has ceased to hold an office which he occupied for two years, a distinguished General, challenged, after he left that office, statements made by two Ministers during the time he was in office.

During the time he was in that office he never challenged this statement, when he had not merely access to official documents, but when he had access to the Ministers themselves. [Cheers.] General Maurice was in office for weeks after I had delivered that speech in the House of Commons. He attended meetings of the Cabinet. In the absence of the Chief of Staff, every day after I delivered the speech, and after it appeared he never called attention to it. He never asked me to correct it.

It may be said that perhaps he had not time to read it, but he was there the following day, and he never called my attention to the fact that these statements were incorrect.

Supposing that he did not care to do it in the presence of the whole Cabinet, he was in daily contact with me on the business of the war. We were constantly discussing questions of figures, because he was the authority. As Director of Military Operations he was the authority, and it was his business to come to me, especially if he thought this was so important that it justified a great breaking of the King's regulations and setting an example of indiscipline.

Was it not his business first of all to come to the Cabinet, or at any rate to the Minister impugned, and say to him, "You made a mistake in the House of Commons on a most important question of fact." He might have put it quite nicely, and said: "I daresay you were misled. You had better put it right."

Says He Was Treated Unfairly.

Never a syllable until I saw it in the newspapers. [Cheers.] I say I have been treated unfairly. [Renewed cheers.] I will say more than that. I thought that possibly General Maurice, if he did not care to talk to me, might have talked to his immediate chief first of all, the Secretary of State, or the Chief of Staff. So I inquired, but never a word until he left office. During the whole time these questions were being discussed he never made any representation to the Chief of Staff.

And this is a question which is so important that you must set up a Select Committee to inquire into it, so important as to justify the trampling by a great and distinguished General who has held one of the most confidential positions in the War Office upon the regulations of the King and setting an example of indiscipline to the whole army.

I propose before I sit down to give the whole sources of the information upon which I and my right honorable friend made these statements to the House and to invite the House of Commons—and here I agree with the right honorable gentleman opposite that it is a question for the House of Commons—and I propose to ask the House of Commons to judge, and to judge today. [Loud cheers.]

Wanted to Guard War Facts.

I am going to give you the reasons why we proposed a committee of judges. I am going to put the reasons why we oppose a select committee. I am going to give the reasons why we are taking the course I propose to take today.

When statements of this kind were made challenging, not the action of Ministers, but statements made by Ministers, when a letter was written by a distinguished officer, my right honorable friend and I thought we were accused of misleading the House of Commons, and we were anxious to give an opportunity for an examination of these statements by a perfectly impartial tribunal. One reason was that there was a mass of very confidential information which was relevant which any committee would have the right to call for, and we were anxious to place all the documents at the disposal of an impartial committee because we knew perfectly well that once these documents were placed at their disposal there could be absolutely no doubt in the mind of any tribunal as to the veracity of the statements which had been made. A second reason was that the most important statement of all, with regard to the extension of the front, involved our allies, and it would be very difficult to decide it without making some statement which might offend their susceptibility.

Reasons for Judicial Tribunal.

That was one reason why we were exceedingly sorry that the controversy should ever have been raised. [Cheers.] When we came to the question of the appointment of a select committee or a judicial tribunal, we felt that a committee of the House of Commons, adapted undoubtedly for certain investigations, was not the best tribunal for investigating facts when passions were aroused. It is no use saying that it is bringing a charge against the House of Commons. The House of Commons, as a matter of fact, came to the conclusion long ago that on questions like election petitions, when party passions or when any passions were aroused, the House of Commons was not very well adapted to an examination of the facts.

My right honorable friend came to that conclusion himself in regard to Mesopotamia. I think he was right; but whether the best tribunal was set up or not was another matter. This is no reflection upon the House of Commons. Judges are accustomed to examine facts, and after all it is only a question of fact.

Another point was that it was very important that if there was to be an investigation it should be short and sharp and that you should get a decision immediately.

I felt no doubt at all, if there were an investigation by Judges, what would be the result. But what has happened since Tuesday? Since Tuesday it has become clear from statements of the press which supports my right honorable friend. He talks as if the press were supporting the Government, but he has got a press, too." [Cheers.] If he does not mind my saying so, he seems to think that all violence, all virulence, is with the press that does not agree with him. Why?

I have been for the last two or three years, since I have thrown myself into the vigorous prosecution of the war, according to my view, drenched with the Cocoa Press slops. [Loud laughter and cheers.]

Mr. Pringle—Whose money you took.

Mr. Lloyd George, resuming—It is perfectly clear from the action of the press which is egging my right honorable friend and suggesting that he ought to do this and the other to embarrass the Government, that no statement, no decision of any select committee, would ever be accepted, but they would go on exactly the same as before.

We have decided, therefore, to give the facts in public and let the public judge. I will proceed at once to an examination of the statements made by General Maurice with regard to my statement about figures. There have been two challenges given to the Government, and I am going to deal with both. One of them is in General Maurice's letter and the other is rather implied in the letter.

Replies to Challenged Figures.

The challenge has been given because, after all, this is only a part of the sort of things that have been going on outside, and, although I deprecate the method in which it is raised, I am glad of an opportunity of clearing it out of the way.

Two challenges have been made as to figures. One is in regard to the comparison I made of the British forces in France Jan. 1, 1918, and Jan. 1, 1917. The other is the comparison I drew between the enemy and allied forces on the western front. Both of them are of vast importance and both of them are practically parts of the same question General Maurice stated:

On April 9 the Prime Minister said: "What was the position at the beginning of the battle? Notwithstanding the heavy casualties of 1917, the army in France was considerably stronger on Jan. 1, 1918, than on Jan. 1, 1917."

This is his comment:

That statement implies that Sir Douglas Haig's fighting strength on the eve of the great battle which began March 21 had not been diminished. That is not correct.

Now the issue is a very clear one. I said that the fighting strength of the army had increased. General Maurice said that it had diminished as compared with the previous year.

Has Verified His Figures.

The figures I gave were taken from the official records of the War Office, which I sent for before I made the statement. If they were incorrect General Maurice was as responsible as anybody else. They were not inaccurate. I have made inquiries since.

I am not quite sure what he means. There is absolutely no doubt that there was a very considerable part of the man-power of the army at the beginning of 1918 as compared with the man-power at the beginning of 1917 in France. There was a great increase in the man-power of the British Army throughout the world in 1918 as compared with 1917, and the increase of man-power in France in 1918 as compared with 1917 was greater than the average throughout the whole area.

You draw a distinction between what is known as combatants and noncombatants. I am going to consider that as well later on, but before I do so let me say at once I do not accept that distinction. When you talk about fighting strength, who are combatants and who are noncombatants?

Let me first of all deal with the question, Who are the combatants? Are those men who stopped the advance of the German Army to Amiens the other day—are they combatants?

Asquith's Denial of Desire to Censure Cabinet Or of a "Hungry Intention to Resume Office"

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 9.—In presenting his motion today for an investigation of the Maurice charges by a Parliamentary committee, instead of a committee of Judges, as suggested by the Government, ex-Premier Asquith said:

The motion I am about to make is not, either in intention or in fact, as I have seen it rather absurdly described, a vote of censure upon the Government. I have, since I sat in this seat, now, I think, nearly eighteen months, given no adverse vote on any question against the Government. I have done all I could, not only in the House but outside, without withholding what I considered legitimate and helpful criticism, to assist the Government in the prosecution of the war.

Some of my friends, I know, think that I have been unduly faint-hearted and mealy mouthed. There are people outside this House gifted with more imagination than charity, and with more stupidity than either, who think of me as a person who has the hungry intention to resume the cares and responsibilities of office. Foolish imagination of this kind I leave to the judgment of my colleagues in the House and to my countrymen outside of it. If I were to find it my conviction to ask the House to censure the Government, I hope I should have the courage and candor to do so in a direct and unequivocal manner.

Full Text of Premier Lloyd George's Speech in Reply to Maurice Charges

[A voice, "Yes."] They are not if you begin to draw a distinction between combatants and noncombatants. Those are General Carey's forces. They would not be treated as combatants.

Are the men who are under fire every day making and preparing roads, tramroads and railways, and who suffer severe casualties—are those combatants or noncombatants? In most lists that are printed they are noncombatants. Does any one mean to tell me that they are not part of the fighting strength of the army?

Gives View of Fighting Strength.

Take the men who, when the British Army retreated and had to abandon the trenches which they had taken months to prepare, and who improved the defenses and the gunfire to relieve the infantry—are those men no part of the fighting strength of an army? If you have not got them, you have to take infantry out and set them to that work. As a matter of fact, one of the things I came back from France with was a demand for more of them, and they are not a part of the fighting strength of the army!

I decline absolutely to accept that definition, and will leave out the ordinary technical distinction between combatant and noncombatant.

A question was put in the House of Commons by the honorable gantleman, the member for Barnston, eight or nine days after I delivered my speech of April 18. This question was put:

Sir Godfrey Baring—I wish to ask the Prime Minister whether, when he stated that the British Army in France was considerably stronger on Jan. 1, 1918, than on Jan. 1, 1917, he was including the labor battalions and the other non-combatant units and whether the combatant strength of the British Army was greater or less at the beginning of this year than at the beginning of last year.

My right honorable friend, whose duty it was to answer this question on behalf of the War Office, sent that question to General Maurice with the answer. [Cheers.] I am not going to read the answer which he gave, because that is on the records of the House.

Note from Maurice's Office.

I will give the note that came from General Maurice's department. This is the actual document:

George Lambert—Is it signed by him?

Lloyd George—It is initialed by his deputy. [Cries of "Oh! Oh!" and some laughter.]

I see that my right honorable friend, Mr. Lambert, is going to draw that distinction. That shows the sort of impartial judges! [Lond cheers.]

This is the note. First of all, you have got the figures inside. Of course, I cannot give those to the House, but this note is a summary:

From the statement included, it will be seen that the combatant strength of the British army was greater on Jan. 1, 1918, than on Jan. 1, 1917.

This comes from General Maurice's department nine days after I made that statement. I am not depending on the fact that all these men ruled out as noncombatants are an essential part of the strength of the British Army in France. I am not depending on that. As a matter of fact, there was an increase as between Jan. 1, 1918, and March, but it just happened that I thought I would take the first month of the year.

Now I come to the second statement which was made by General Maurice. There is a very important question of comparison of the allied and enemy forces, and it has a bearing upon the question later of the extension of the front. I have been charged there with misleading the public to believe that at the time when the attack took place by the enemy on the allied position on the western front we had a slight superiority in infantry; a considerable superiority, I think, in cavalry, and a superiority in artillery, and I also said a superiority in the air.

Asserts Maurice Was Responsible.

With the exception of the air—I did not get that from General Maurice—the whole of the figures upon which I based that statement came from General Maurice. I asked for them. I do not suggest that he was the man who worked up those figures, but he was responsible for documents given out by his own department. [Cheers.] And may I just add, General Maurice has made two statements himself on the subject since the battle began? They have been published, I believe, in America. I did not depend upon the American publication. I took the trouble to see whether General Maurice had really said so, and I find he did. This is what he said on March 22:

There is one cardinal fact to keep in mind, (this he said himself and not through officials,) and that is that the forces on the whole front are as nearly equal as they can be.

On April 3 he made this statement. This also, I believe, appeared in the American press:

As regards our side of the picture, I need only repeat what I have already said that on the whole front the opposing forces at the beginning of the battle were approximately equal, and, therefore, a readjustment of the balance of the battlefield is only a matter of time.

If there was anything in these figures, I got them from official sources for which General Maurice himself is responsible, and I think he might have said that in his letter when he was impugning the honor of Ministers. [Cheers.]

Maurice Had Chance to Correct.

Now I come to the statement with regard to figures. I said that in Mesopotamia there is only one white division and in Egypt and Palestine there are only three white divisions.

Well, now I will give here again the source of my information. The statement about one British division is in the official record. With regard to Egypt, that statement was made at a Cabinet meeting, which was examining the position, by a member of the staff. It is the custom of the Secretary of the War Cabinet to send these statements to all those who are present for correction, and I want the House to bear in mind that General Maurice is the official who was primarily responsible for the question of the number of divisions in the various theatres of war. This statement was sent to General Maurice for correction, if there was any correction to make. He telephoned to the Secretary (this is the note) that he added no remarks.

So this statement about there being three British divisions in Egypt was made in the presence of General Maurice, who made no correction, and I have no correction either from him or anybody else on the subject. [Cheers.]

Maurice Sat in Council Chamber.

Now, I come to the next point. This is the statement made about the extension of the front:

This is not the place to enter into a discussion as to all the facts, but Hansard's report of the incident concludes:

Mr. Pringle—Was this matter entered into at the Versailles War Council?

Mr. Bonar Law—This particular matter was not dealt with at all by the Versailles War Council.

Then General Maurice said:

I was at Versailles when the question was decided by the Supreme War Council, to whom it had been referred.

In the first place, I think that any one reading that would come to the conclusion that General Maurice was present at the meeting. He was at Versailles, it is true, but he was not at the meeting. I have looked at the official record since and it confirms what I say. He was in Versailles. He was in a building outside with several others who were there assisting the various Generals. He was not in the council chamber when the question to which he refers was discussed. As a matter of fact, the extension of the front of General Gough's army, to which allusion has been made, was never discussed at that council at all. There was a demand for a further extension, but that particular extension had taken place before the council had ever met.

Haig Had Reported the Extension.

Before the Council had met it had been agreed between Field Marshal Haig and General Pétain, and the extension was an accomplished fact. [Cheers.] Field Marshal Haig reported to the Council that the extension had taken place. There was not a single yard taken over as a result of the Versailles conference—not a single yard of extension—and it was General Maurice who said he was there, but was not, who implied that he was present when the decision had taken place, who ventures to suggest that the extension of the front of General Gough's army was decided at Versailles, when, as a matter of fact, it took place before the meeting had occurred. [Cheers.] It is upon the cry that we are to be arraigned. [Cheers.]

Although General Maurice did not say so, the real point, the one which is put by my right honorable friend with characteristic bluntness and straightforwardness, is this: Is it the fact that when the portion of the line held by General Gough's army was taken over the War Cabinet insisted upon its being taken over, and, therefore, the objections of Sir William Robertson and Sir Douglas Haig were thereby overruled?

Yielded to French Pressure.

That is the real point. There is not a word of truth in it. I think it is time this matter should be cleared up, [cheers,] and with the indulgence of the House I propose to do so.

Of course, the Field Marshal was not anxious to extend his line. No one would be having regard to the great accumulation of strength against him, and the War Cabinet were just as reluctant.

There was not a single meeting between the French Generals and ourselves when we did not state facts against the extension, but the pressure from the French Government and French Army was enormous, and what was done was not done in response to pressure from the War Cabinet. It was done in response to very great pressure which Sir Douglas Haig could not resist and which we could not resist.

We are not suggesting that our French allies are asking unfairly. That is certainly not my intention.

There was a considerable ferment in France on the subject of the length of the line held by the French Army as compared with our army. The French losses had been enormous. They had practically borne the brunt of the fighting for three years. There was a larger proportion of their young manhood put into the line than in any belligerent country in the world. [Cheers.] They held 336 miles. We held a front of 100 miles.

That is not the whole statement, because the Germans were much more densely massed in front of ourselves. Not only that, but the line we held was much more vulnerable. Pratically the defense of Paris was left to us, and the defense of some of the most important centres, but there was the fact that you had this enormous front held by the French Army, as compared with what looked like the comparatively small front of ours.

French Wanted Soldiers to Farm.

In addition to that, the French Army at that time was holding, I think, a two-division front on our line in order to enable us to accumulate the necessary reserves for the purposes of the attack in Flanders. That was part of the line which, I believe, was held before by the British and French.

The French were pressing in order to withdraw men from the army for purposes of agriculture. I ought to explain that their agricultural output had fallen enormously, owing to the fact that they had withdrawn a very large proportion of their men from the cultivation of the fields, and they felt it essential that they should withdraw part of their army for the purpose of cultivating the soil, and they were pressing us upon these topics.

The chief of the Imperial General Staff, Sir William Robertson, and the Cabinet felt that it was inevitable that during the Winter months there should be some extension, and we acknowledged that something had to be done to meet the French demands, and to that extent we accepted the principle that there must be some extension of the line. There was no doubt in the mind of any one that we would have to take over that part of the line from General Antoine, and how far beyond that and what further extension should be made was a matter which was in doubt. I give the principle which was laid down by General Sir William Robertson and accepted by the Cabinet.

As to Extension of the Line.

We accepted in principle that there must be an extension of the British line in the Winter months, and that the time and extent must be left to the two commanders in chief to settle together; that no extension was possible until the offensive was over, and that the line to be taken over must depend upon the military policy for 1918 and upon the rôle assigned to each army. These were perfectly sound principles, and the Cabinet accepted them without any demur. I say without hesitation that the Cabinet never swerved one iota from the principle laid down by Sir William Robertson.

At that time the Field Marshal was under the impression that the Cabinet had taken a decision without his consent. The Chief of the Imperial Staff upon that sent the following memorandum to the War Cabinet. I will read it, but first, with reference to the Boulogne conference, I may, perhaps, say that that was the first time we had a discussion with the French Ministers. The subject of discussion was a rather important foreign office. It was not summoned in the least to discuss an extension of the lines. We never knew that was to be raised. Sir William Robertson and I represented the British Government, and M. Painlevé, the Prime Minister, and General Foch represented the French Government.

When Sir William Robertson discovered that the Field Marshal was under the impression that we had come to a decision without his consent he sent the War Cabinet a memorandum, in which he says:

"At the recent Boulogne conference the question of extending our front was raised by the French representatives. The reply given was that while in principle we were, of course, ready to do whatever could be done, the matter was one which could not be discussed in the absence of Sir Douglas Haig, or during the continuance of the present operations, and that due regard must also be had to the plan of operations for next year.

"It was suggested that it would be best for the Fild Marshal to come to an arrangement with General Pétain, when this could be done. So far as I am aware no formal discussion has taken place, and the matter cannot be regarded as decided. Further, I feel sure that the War Cabinet would not think of deciding such a question without first obtaining Sir Douglas Haig's views. I am replying to him in the above sense."

That, I think, was on the 19th of October. The War Cabinet fully approved of the communication. Sir Douglas Haig communicated, and said that it threw a new light on the Boulogne position. I think that we have a right to complain of the way in which it has been rumored about that Sir Douglas Haig protested.

The War Cabinet's Decision.

The fact that Sir William Robertson had explained and Sir Douglas Haig had stated that the explanation threw new light has never been repeated. That is how mischief is done. [Cheers.]

On Oct. 24 this question was first formally discussed by the War Cabinet. There was further pressure from the French Government, and Sir William Robertson gave his views as to the time which the British Government ought to take, and this conclusion is recorded in the minutes of the War Cabinet as follows:

"The War Cabinet approve of the suggestion of the Chief of the Imperial Staff that he should reply to Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig in the following senee: The War Cabinet are of the opinion that in deciding to what extent the British troops can take over the line from the French regerd must he had to the necessity of giving them a reasonable opportunity for leave, rest, and training during the Winter months and to the plan of operations for the next year, and, further, while the present offensive continues it will not be possible to commence taking over more line.

"Under these circumstances the War Cabinet fear that until this policy is settled it will be premature to decide finally whether the British front is to be extended by four divisions or to greater or lesser extent."

That resolution was communicated to Sir Douglas Haig by Sir William Robertson, and we never departed from it. After that came the Cambrai incidsnt and the Italian disaster, which necessitated our sending troops to Italy. That made it difficult for the Field Marshal to carry out the promise he made to General Pétain for a certain extension of the front. Then the present Frsnch Prime Minister came in, and he is not a very easy gentleman to refuse. [Laughter.] He was very insistent that the British Army should take over the line.

Clemenceau Suggested Versailles.

We stood by the position that that was a matter to be discussed by the two Commanders in Chief. We never swerved from that position. At last M. Clemenceau suggested that the question should be discussed by the military representatives at Versailles, and that the Versailles Council should decide if there was any difference of opinion. The military representatives discussed the question, and the only interference of the War Cabinet was to this extent. We communicated with the Chief of Staff, who was then in France, and with Sir Douglas Haig to urge on them the importance of preparing their case for the other side so as to make the strongest possible case for the British view.

The military representatives at Versailles suggested a compromise, but coupled with it recommendatione as to steps which ought to be taken by the French Army to assist the British if they were attacked, and by the British to assist the French if they were attacked, which was even a more important question than the extension of the front. [Cheers.]

That recommendation came up for discussion at the Versailles council of Feb. 1. Before that meeting Sir Douglas Haig and General Pétain met and entered into an agreement as to the extension of the front to Brissy, and Sir Douglas Haig reported that to the Versailles council. When the discussion took place there no further extension of the line was taken at all as a result of the disenasion.

That is the whole atory. [Cheers.] I was to make it perfectly clear that in the action Sir Douglas Haig took for the extension of the line he had the full approval of the British Cabinet, having regard to the pressure of the French Government and military authorities. Sir Douglas Haig had no option except to make the extension. He was in our judgment absolutely right in the course he took. Naturally, he would have preferred not to have done it, but the British Government fully approved of the action he took.

I am not sorry that this opportunity has been given to read out the actual conclusions of the War Cabinet, in order to disperse once and for all the rumora which have been circulated by persons, for purposes of their own, [cheers,] by men who, for one reason or another, do not like the present Chief of Staff or the present Chief of the British Ministry.

The real lesson of the discussion is the importance of unity of command. It would never have arisen if you had had that. Instead of one army and one commander responsible for one part of the line, and another army and another commander responsible for another part of the line, we have one united command responsible for the whole and every part. It was the only method of safety, and I am glad we have it at last. [Cheers.]

It was not so much a question of the length of the line held by one force or the length held by another. It was a question of reserves massed behind.

Effect on Army Discipline.

Before I sit down there are one or two general considerations I should like to say something about. The first is the effect that such action as that of General Maurice must have upon the discipline of the army. [Cheers.] It was a flagrant breach of army discipline. My right honorable friend opposite admitted it, and I wish he had deprecated it. [Cheers.] I say most respectfully I think he ought to have done it. He has been responsible for the conduct of the war for two years, and if this motion is carried he will again be responsible for the conduct of the war.

Insists on Test of Censure.

Make no mistake about it. This is a vote of censure upon the Government. If this motion is carried we could not possibly continue operations, and the right honorable gentleman, as the one responsible for the motion, would have to take the responsibility for the Government. It is essential, having regard to that position, that he should deprecate the action taken by General Maurice.

What does it mean? It is not merely a flagrant breach of the King's regulations, but he avows it. He says: "I know what I am doing." He is a General in a high position. Suppose a regimental officer or ordinary soldier did a thing like this!

After all, they have got their own views about their superiors. Sometimes they are right and sometimes they are wrong, but they disagree as to the wisdom of certain actions. A soldier might even challenge the accuracy of statements made by his superiors. He might also write to the papers and say that "grave statements heve been made by my superiors, and it is my duty not as a soldier but as a citizen to say so. It is my duty because I am a democrat and because my grandfather was a democrat. [Laughter.] It is my duty to forget the King's regulations and discipline and write this."

I wonder what would have been said if a poor, ordinary soldier did this sort of thing? And this is a new army. That must not be forgotten. It is an army where you cannot possibly give the time, as in the case of a regular army, to harden their fibres in discipline. It is to an army of this kind that a high, distinguished officer sets an example by saying: "Although I am a soldier, I am first of all a citizen, and, therefore, I am going to break the king's regulations."

That means that it is for him to judge the importance of the occasion that is fatal to discipline. [Cheers.]

Each man naturally thinks his own grievance far more important than anything else. That is human nature, and every foot soldier, every regimental officer will say: "My case is a much stronger one than General Maurice's, and we live in a democratic country." In General Maurice saying, "I am a good democrat," we have got before us an example of the democracy which is being humiliated and trampled upon because it has forgotten discipline in the army. [Cheers.] Is this the time to show such an example by a distinguished officer who has held some of the most confidential positions in the army? At any rate, he ought to have tried everything before he did this. [Cheers.] Did he? [Cries of "no."] Did he first come to the person to whom he wanted to correct? Never.

He was a friend of mine and he was in this House the very day when I made the speech. I was seeing him continually every week and almost every day. Surely before setting an example of indiscipline he might first of all have tried to correct me and said: "Would you mind putting this right?" He might, if I were obdurate, have said: "Here am I sitting at the War Cabinet, and in spite of the fact that it is not my position to do so I will talk here." There would not have been much mischief in that, but he ought at least to have asked his chief to do it before trampling upon discipline, which is the life of the army.

Australians Condemn Maurice.

He ought to have exhausted everything else first. Not a word of depreciation of that from my right honorable friend opposite. [Cheers.] I have had communications from the army, from officers and soldiers. I have had communications from the Australian soldiers today on the subject, who met informally and who repudiated in the strongeat manner this sort of action. [Cheers.] When we talk about the army, the army is not two or three men. The army is five millions of men, and it is vitally important that discipline should be maintained.

There is a letter which appeared in one of the papers today, not a letter but a quotation from a French newspaper, which I will read to the House. This paper says:

"France is more than any other a democratic country. Well, we declare roundly that no one in France will understand General Maurice's action."

Mr. Snowden—What paper?

Mr. Lloyd George—La Liberté. [Loud laughter.] The quotation proceeded:

"No more on the Left than on the Right, still less on the Left than on the Right, no French party would admit that in the midst of war a General on active service should permit himself to raise his voice in public to contradict the Government. With all respect to this General, what is circulated to diminish the morale of the troops is not that Ministers should in good faith have stated what is not the fact in regard to the extension of the British front, but that a chief hitherto respected should have thought it his duty to commit an act of indiscipline so glaring that even in our democratic country it would have been considered a scandal.

"It is not for an officer to seek himself to place his duty as a citizen before his duty as a soldier."

Appeals for End of Disputes.

That is the view of a democratic country like France. May I say that I wonder whether it is worth my while making another appeal to all sections of this House, to all sections of the country. These controversies are distracting, [cheers] they are paralyzing, they are rending, and I do beg that they should come to an end. [Cheers.] It is difficult enough for Ministers to do their work.

This is really a sort of remnant of the controversy over individual command, which lasted practically for months. Unity of command, the national unity, is threatened. The army unity is threatened by this controversy. Days have been occupied in hunting up records, minutes, letters proces verbals, interviews, and in raking up what had happened over the whole twelve months in the War Cabinet, and this at this moment! [Cheers.]

I have just come back from France. I have visited some of the Generals, and they were telling me how now the Germans are silently preparing perhaps the biggest blow of the war, under a shroud of mystery. They asked me for certain help. I have brought home a list of the things which they wanted done. I want to attend to them and I beg, I really beg, for our common cause, the fate of which is in the balance, now in the next few weeks—I beg and implore that there should be an end to this sniping. [Loud and prolongsd chesrs.]

ASQUITH TOLD HIS PURPOSE.

He Urged Inquiry to Clear Up All Misunderstandings.

LONDON, May 9.—In presenting his motion in the House of Commons for the appointment of a select committee to investigate the charges made by General Maurice, ex-Premier Asquith said that he thought it was not the business of Parliament to inquire constantly into the conduct of successive phases of the war. The House of Commons, he added, had more than enough of such inquiries already.

Mr. Aequith denied that his motion was designed to obtain a vote of censure of the Government, saying that it was absurd to describe it as such. Should he find it his duty to censure the Government, he said, he hoped that he would have the courege to do so in a direct and unequivocal form.

Mr. Asquith said that when he put down his motion he thought that it would be accepted by the Government. He had never yet given an adverse vote on any proposal made by the Government. He had endeavored to help the Government in the prosecution of the war and in defining the great purposes of the war and the peace for which the Allies were struggling.

Neither he nor his colleagues, Mr. Asquith asserted, had been concerned in the composition or publication of General Maurice's letter. If, as he saw, the Government intended to state the facts, it would be anticipating the conclusions of any tribunal and would be only an ex parte statement.

Urges a Select Committee.

The former Premier said that he knew many of his friends had thought he had been fainthearted in this matter, and that there were persons other than his friends who thought of him as being devoured by impatience to resume office.

"I am quite content," he added, "to leave judgment of that kind to the House and my follow-countrymen."

Unless an act of Parliament were passed, he said, the tribunal of judges proposed for an inquiry into the Maurice affair would have no compulsory powere of any kind. He considered it far better to adopt the familiar machinery of a select committee from the House.

The Government's proposal for a court of honor amounted to an admission that an inquiry was necessary, and that the matters raised were so secret that they could not be discussed even by a select committee. He asked whether the Government still thought an inquiry was necessary or that the case could be considered without the presentation of secret documents.

The suggestion was made by Mr. Asquith that an investigation be made by a no-party committee of five members, which probably would be eble to reach in two or three days a decision that would be respected by the House and the country.

"What is the alternative?" he asked. "Get on with the war!" C. B. Stanton, a Labor member, interrupted. This interjection was greeted with loud cheers.

Mr. Asquith responded thet the best way to get on with the war was to clear away misconceptione and misunderstandings which might have no foundation, but created doubt in the minds of all.

Mr. Asquith concluded:

"I suggest to the House that in the common interest of the Government themselves, the army, the State, the Allies, and of unhampered prosecution of the war, a tribunal of inquiry be set up which from its constitution and power would be able to give prompt, decisive, and authoritative judgment. I hope that in regard to some of these matters there has been a genuine and honest misunderstanding."

Mr. Bonar Law suggested that he knew of no member of the House who was not either friendly or unfriendly to the Government and would not start with prejudice.

Mr. Asquith said:

"I am sorry to hear the Chancellor of the Exchequer, as leeder of this house and custodian and trustee of its great traditions, should think it right or even decent to suggest that you cannot get five men who are not so steeped in party prejudice that upon a pure issue of fact they cannot be trusted to give judgment. I leave it there."

Carson Would Drop Matter.

Sir Edward Carson deprecated an inquiry either by two Judges or a special committee, but would, if compelled to choose between them, prefer the latter. He besought the House to take stock of whers they stood and ask themselves whether they were being of servlee to the country or the Allies by a continuance of the debate.

"If the Prime Minister and other Ministers are not ebis to assert their own veracity and be believed in the House," he said, "there is no longer any possibility of carrying on the Government."

He appealed to Mr. Asquith, who, he said, "has always acted in a patriotic way on every occasion, not to proceed with the motion in the interest of the country, of the dignity of the House, and the relations between the civil and military powers, as well as an example to the people of the country, who are going through a very trying time. "They should close up their ranks," he concluded.

Lord Hugh Cecil, member of the Privy Council, said thet the Premier had made a brilliant speech that was more effective as an attack on General Maurice than as a defense of the Government. He appealed to the Government not to cling to office, but when convinced that they could not command a great body of the national support, without which any Government is useless in time of war, they should resign and so enable it to be seen whether a stronger Government could not be formed.

After he had spoken, a few minor members made brief remarks, when, amid cries of "Divide!" closure was proposed and accepted.

Immediately after Mr. Asquith's motion was rejected the Premier left the House, being loudly cheered.

PRESS CALLS CRISIS WORST OF FIASCOS

Maurice the Tool of "Abler but Less Honorable Men," Says London Times.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, May 10.—The Times says:

"We shall still believe in the patriotism of General Maurice's motives, but it seems charitable now to assume that he has been made the instrument of abler and less honorable men. As for the questions of fact the Prime Minister's case was overwhelming—and we retain all our old conviction that he is not the best exponent of an overwhelming case."

The Daily Mail says: "If it is amazing that Maurice should have written such a letter, it is hardly less amazing that Asquith should have swallowed it with such greedy incredulity."

The Daily Telegraph speaks of "the ignominious collapse" of this latest attack on the Government, and says: "If it comes to comparing fiascos, this last may be considered the most futile."

The Daily News says: "The fact that still remains in the mind of the public after this display of political pyrotechnics is that Lloyd George has burked an inquiry into charges affecting his own honor and the honor of Parliament. The charges contained in Maurice's letter remain unaffected by yesterday's melodrama. A plain accusation has been spirited away by a trick of legerdemain."

The Daily Express says: "There cannot now be the smallest doubt that the Maurice letter was as unjustified as it was irregular, or that the subsequent attacks have been inspired by nothing but envy, malice, and uncharitableness."

The Chronicle says: "The Prime Minister's speech was a most effective debating effort, but as a contribution to determining the facts its value was inevitably restricted. One cannot establish a disputed issue of fact by ex parte statement from one side, however effective, and the needed documentary evidence could not be adduced for reasone of secrecy."

The Chronicle points out that Lloyd George skimmed very lightly over his implication that Haig's strength between January, 1918, and March 21, 1918, had not been diminished, and Maurice's denial that that implication was in accord with the facts and similarly with regard to the number of whits troops in the eastern theatres.

The Morning Post asks the Prime Minister the following question: "How does he reconcile his statement of April 9 that the British Army was stronger on Jan. 1, 1918, than on Jan. 1, 1917, and his statement of yesterday that from January, 1918, to March 21, 1918, it increased in strength, with the fact, which is common knowledge, that before March 21 the infantry brigades, the main fighting arm, had been reduced from four battalions to three, so that the strength of the infantry divisions were reduced from twelve battalions to nine battalions, a reduction of 25 per cent.?"

DENIES PEACE MISSION.

Colyn Says His Trip to London Was on Business of Oil Company.

AMSTERDAM, May 9.—On his return from England, former Minister of War Colyn stated to the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant, when asked as to rumors that he went there in connection with a reported peace mission, that his business in England was in the interest of an oil company of which he is manager.

Regarding the coupling of his name with peace rumors, he said he was in entire accord with what Foreign Secretary Balfour said in Parliament on Monday when he stated that there was no representative of a neutral nation in England for the purpose of making suggestions of peace negotiations.

JAILS GERMAN SOCIALISTS.

But Leipsic Court Imposes Light Sentence in High Treason Case.

AMSTERDAM, May 9.—Twelve Dresden members of the Independent Socialist Party of Germany have been convicted of high treason by the Imperial Court et Leipsic, a dispatch from that city to the Vorwärts of Berlin reports.

They distributed pamphists last year advocating the overthrow of the German Empire, and helped to bring about the strikes of last Summer, advocating them as a means of obtaining peace.

They were sentenced to penal servitude, for terms varying from eighteen months to eight years.

GERMANS LOSE NEW GAINS ABOVE KEMMEL

baume, and the docks and mole at Zeebrugge.

Strenuous fighting took place throughout the day, twenty-two hostile machines being driven down, seven were compelled to alight out of control and one was shot down by machine gunfire from the ground. Seven of our machines are missing.

Owing to the mist, only a few of our airplanes were able to go out after dark. A ton of bombs, however, was dropped on railway stations at Douai and Marcoing. All the machines returned.

Plan for Big Assault Spoiled.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 9. (Associated Press.)—The Germans had intended to make a much more pretentious assault in Flanders yesterday than they were able to carry out. Their failure was due to the work of the allied gunners and to a small operation by the French east of Scherpenberg, which came at the right moment to help upset the enemy plans.

The German attack as actually executed lay, roughly, between La Clytte and Voormezeele. Details which have come to hand would indicate that the enemy had intended to attack with five divisions on a wider front, mainly between Locre and the Ypres-Comines Canal, and it is possible that this drive was meant to be the forerunner of a smash to push up west of Ypres and thereby threaten the British hold on the ruined city.

Before the battle started in earnest several things happened. Along the Ypres-Comines Canal an unusual movement among the enemy brought a tremendous barrage from the British guns against a German division. It appeared later that the enemy had been assembling here to participate in the attack, and was so badly smashed that the idea of their taking part was abandoned.

Along the front between Locre and La Clytte, the French had their eyes open and began a heavy bombardment. The French also undertook a small operation for the capture of a position east of Scherpenberg Hill. The combination of circumstances spoiled the whole German scheme.

SAYS BRITISH WERE REPULSED.

German Headquarters Statement Claims Several Successes.

BERLIN, May 9, (via London.)—The official statement issued by the War Office today reads:

During the repulse of English advances on the southern bank of the Lys, near Bucquoy, and south of Albert, we took a number of prisoners.

During yesterday's unsuccessful night attack by Australian troops on the Corbie-Bray road forty-five prisoners, including four officers, remained in our hande.

North of the Luce and on the western bank of the Avre the artillery battle continues to be lively.

On the rest of the front there were successful reconnoitring advances at several points.

The enemy has lost thirty-seven airplanes in the last few days in aerial fighting and by fire from our anti-aircraft guns.

AVRE GUNS KEEP POUNDING.

Busy from Hailles to Montdidier, Says the French War Office.

PARIS, May 9.—Tonight's bulletin of the War Office says:

There was marked activity by both artilleries on the Hailles-Montdidier front.

The day report of the War Office reads:

Spirited artillery fighting occurred last night north and south of the Avre.

German patrols attempting to approach our lines in the region of Campelle St. Aignan were repulsed.

There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front.

GERMAN CHIEFS AT ODDS?

Rumor Says Hertling Is Opposing Military Leaders.

LONDON, May 9.—Former influential officers in the German Army, supporters of General von Moltke, the former Chief of Staff, are agitating against Field Marshal von Hindenburg on the ground that the German successes on the western front have not reached expectations, according to reports in The Hague, transmitted under reserve by the correspondent of The Daily Mail.

Another report which, according to the correspondent, appears to have some foundation, is that a sharp conflict of opinion has arisen between Field Marshal von Hindenburg, General Ludendorff, and the Crown Prince on one side and Chancellor von Hertling and Foreign Secretary von Kühlmann on the other. The Emperor, after considerable wavering, is said to have inclined to von Hertling's side, although besitatingly.

LANSING MAKES DENIAL TO RUSSIA

Our Consul at Vladivostok Held Not to Have Interfered in Native Affairs.

RUSSIAN DEMAND ON PARIS

Recall of Ambassador Noulens as a Trouble Maker Insisted Upon by Tchitcherin.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Secretary Lansing has instructed Ambassador Francis at Vologda, Russia, to communicate informally to the Soviet Foreign Office a denial of its charge that the American Consul at Vladivostok had interfered in Russia's internal affairs by assisting anti-Bolshevist movements. It was learned at the State Department today.

The informal relations subsisting between the Soviet republic and the United States do not constitute recognition of the former's Government by this country.

MOSCOW, May 4.—(Associated Press.)—The recall of Joseph J. B. E. Noulens, the French Ambassador, is demanded by Foreign Minister Tchitcherin because of statements said to have been made by the Ambassador. The note from the Soviet Foreign Office reads:

The statements made by M. Noulens in the tragic days of Russia's living Wrongs hardly can be conducive to friendly relations between the French and Russian peoples. The representative of the French Government is aggravating the relations between France and Russia and cannot be tolerated within the limits of the Russian Republic.

The Government of the Russian Federated Socialist Republic expresses the conviction that M. Noulens will be immediately recalled by the Government of the French Republic.

Ambassador Noulens, a dispatch from Moscow dated April 25 said, had declared a few days previously that Germany was trying to gain economic control of all Russia and that if the Allies, in response to that menace, were forced to take military action, it would be friendly assistance without thought of conquest or interference in the internal affairs of Russia.

Foreign Minister Tchitcherin in a statement in reply, the same dispatch said, asserted that such assistance was not desired by the Russian masses, who would regard it as an armed invasion.

ALL-DAY FIGHT AT MOSCOW.

Bolshevist Forces Storm Munition Depots of Anarchists.

ZURICH, May 9.—Kiev newspapers received here describe an all-day battle between the anarchists and the Bolsheviki at Moscow, resulting from the imprisonment of 400 anarchists in the Kremlin.

The fighting was caused by a refusal of the anarchists to surrender great quantities of munitions and machine guns. The Bolshevist forces stormed the places where the munitions were stored.

The newspapers estimate that there are 60,000 anarchists living in Moscow.

KREMLIN TREASURE LOOTED.

Contained Jewels and Precious Stones Valued at $10,000,000.

PETROGRAD, April 10, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The famous Patriarchal Treasure House in the Kremlin at Moscow has been looted.

The Treasure House is the repository of many sacred treasures, including the reputed shroud of Christ, a robe alleged to have been worn by the Virgin Mary, one of the nails from the cross, and a painting said to have been done by St. Luke. Its jewels and precious stones were said to be worth nearly $10,000,000.

GERMANS OCCUPY ROSTOV.

Push Along Coast of Sea of Azov to Mouth of the Don.

BERLIN, May 9, (via London.)—Army Headquarters tonight issued the following bulletin:

In Ukraine, on the southern coast of the Sea of Azov, we advanced as far as the mouth of the Don and occupied Rostov.

FOCH MEANS VICTORY, SAYS LORD DERBY

New British Envoy in Paris Rejoices in Allied Unity—Warns Against Foes' Innuendoes.

PARIS, May 9.—Lord Derby, the new British Ambassador to France in succession to Lord Bertie, made his first public speech since his arrival at Paris at the monthly luncheon given today by the Anglo-American Press Association. Stephen Pichon, Minister for Foreign Affairs; Mr. Sharp, the American Ambassador, and the foreign editors of leading Paris newspapers were present.

Replying to Elmer Roberts, Paris correspondent of The Associated Press, who presided, and had referred to the Earl's ancestry, the Ambassador said that no credit was due him for following the lines of tradition, but he said that there was a man, President Wilson, who made ancestry for himself and set an example for the New World.

Old alliances, Lord Derby said, were always difficult to control, but the present alliance was not difficult because it had only one aim. The Ambassador continued:

"We have attained a unique command which was not as easy to attain as might be thought, as it is difficult for one nation to put its army under the control of another, but there is not one man in the country who does not think the right thing was done when Field Marshal Haig placed his troops under General Foch in absolute loyalty, born of absolute confidence in the commander in chief. Under Foch is the surest road to victory."

The worst thing to do to the press, the Ambassador said, was to lecture it. It had always lectured him, and he had received the lectures with humility. He said that he hoped the newspapers would realize that the methods of one country could not be applied to another. Difficulties must exist, but each ally was doing its best.

There always was, Lord Derby said, an undercurrent of title-tattle of irresponsible people, influences which might become a danger or might create a torrent of mistrust. Such innuendoes, the Ambassador said, came from Germans trying to set the Allies against each other, and whoever repeated them was aiding the Germans.

QUEEN MARIE DEFIANT.

Won't Recognize German-Rumanian Treaty, Berlin Papers Say.

AMSTERDAM, May 9.—Queen Marie of Rumania, according to German newspapers, has publicly announced that she will never recognize the peace treaty between Rumania and Germany. Her Majesty says she would rather abdicate than reign over a country under German rule.

The Queen's children are of the same opinion, and they never lose an opportunity, the newspapers add, of insulting the Germans in Rumania.

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The fighting in Flanders has been renewed, but only on a small scale. The Germans delivered a strong local attack between La Clytte and Voormezeele, using two divisions of troops for the purpose. The attack appears to have centralized about midway between these two places. From this we can glean something of the German object. Like all of the allied attacks during the past week, the German intention was to effect a local improvement in their position. The centre of the storm was about Vierstraat, which has been frequently mentioned in this column. This little town is near the tip of the high ground which breaks off from the main hill positions and extends northward to Ridge Wood, where it terminates. This wood is situated on the northern slopes of the high ground and extends down to the level of the plains. The German intention was to take this last bit of high ground between the Messines Ridge and the Mont Kemmel positions. This in itself would accomplish little, but it would put the Germans further to the rear of the defenses of Scherpenberg, from which point a further extension might enable them to conduct their favored enveloping movement.

At the point of most severe fighting the Germans succeeded in advancing their lines slightly, pushing the allied line back to the tip of the hill and penetrating on the east to the edge of the Ridge Wood position. Both flanks, however, held fast, the French, who held the left flank under attack, even pushing forward against the German attack and advancing their lines south of La Clytte along the road to Kemmel. Later, however, a British counterattack at the point where the gain was made succeeded in re-establishing the lines at their former point, so that the situation as a result of the German attack remained unchanged.

Failing here, the Germans attacked in still another place. This time it was along the edge of the high ground just north of Kemmel, where the main ridge slopes down toward the east to the plain. The attack here was also productive of a slight gain in territory, but once again counterattacks completely restored the situation. At latest reports, the fighting still continued. But as in the first case, the object was nothing more than to feel out the allied line and at the same time to effect a local improvement in position. As a matter of fact, had these actions occurred at any other place and during any other time, they would not be regarded as anything more than the usual sporadic activity which has marked the western front for the past two years and a half.

The British in the meantime have continued their pressure against the German positions between the Somme and the Ancre Rivers in the general region of Villers-Bretonneux. The results have been small, resulting in a gain of a few hundred yards here and there. These small gains, however, do materially improve the British situation, as they strengthen the British grip on the plateaus which have on several occasions been mentioned in this column as exercising a strong influence on the fighting in this particular zone. Further south the French continue to report heavy artillery firing. This may mean nothing or it may mean the preliminaries of another German attack. There have been no indications as yet, however, that this is the German intention beyond the fact that heavy concentrations of men have been reported on the front between Arras and the Montdidier salient. But whether the Germans really intend to attack here or whether they will first make another attempt to clear out the Ypres salient is not at all clear. As was stated yesterday, there are many arguments for both sides of this question. An attack in either place holds out great advantages if successful, and the Germans are keeping well in the dark all idea as to which offers to them the greater temptation.

There are those who contend that Germany feels that she has been stopped in the West and that she will make no further attempts there, but will turn her attention to Italy in an effort to get a decision on the Italian front. That heavy fighting may be resumed on the Italian front is far from impossible. But that Germany will forsake her offensive in France for a drive against Italy is far from reasonable. Germany can never defeat England and France though either the Trentino or from along the Piave. She may cause discouragement up to a certain point, which would be a moral victory of a temporary nature, but a military decision does not lie in this field. If Germany should attack Italy and permit her offensive on the western front to lapse, it would be a tacit, but none the less forcible, admission of her own defeat. This, for many reasons, Germany cannot afford to make.

She must continue in France, and there can be but little doubt that is what she is preparing to do. And when the battle does blaze out we may look for one of the fiercest and most determined battles of the war. The very length of time which has been permitted to elapse since the last attack at Mont Kemmel signifies enormous preparations. And when this attack is launched it is not too much to say that upon the result hangs the fate of the war.

ITALIAN SHIPOWNER SEIZED AS TRAITOR

Parodi, Multi-Millionaire, Accused by Italian Government of Trading with Enemy.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 9.—Public opinion is excited by the arrest of Commander Vittorio Emanuele Parodi, multi-millionaire shipowner, on the charge of trading with the enemy. He is accused of exporting jute to Austria and Germany through Switzerland under the guise of hemp. Several other arrests are expected. The plot was revealed through a recent raid at Como.

The confidence of the public was shaken at first by this arrest of a man of such standing and influence as Parodi, but the action of the Government has had the best effect as proving that it will not hesitate to strike at the most powerful personages and interests when the safety and integrity of the country are involved.

Parodi is reported to have made a profit of $7,000,000 in a few days by the sale of steamships urgently needed to help supply the country with foodstuffs. It appears, according to the charges found against him, that he was a partner of two Germans named Vogel and Teich in one of the largest ropemaking plants in Italy, which was seized by the Government after war had been declared, but that this did not prevent him from keeping up an indirect correspondence with them in Germany, and in this way organizing the exportation of jute by false declarations of the nature of the consignments.

Parodi's brother, who is a member of Parliament, is greatly affected by his arrest.

BAYONET OUR MEN AFTER KILLING

eet Henry Boche back a peg. Some old country we've got."

This shows how they keep in touch with what is going on. Of all the soldiers, too, they have the best personal conception of what they are fighting for. They are businesslike, know they have a big task, and tackle it as such. When one gets to know them personally they invariably have one request:

"Tell them to hurry up back home. We need all the men and all the tools we can get to do this job right."

I have just completed a trip through the American sectors of the battle-front; and found that the success of the Third Liberty Loan had caused the greatest rejoicing. This was not so much because of the success in raising the quota, for that was never doubted, but because the subscriptions showed that some parts of the United States which had not been enthusiastic for other Liberty Loans had shown in the third loan that they had awakened to the war situation.

If there is one message that every American soldier, from General Pershing to the doughboy in the front trenches, wishes the correspondents to send back home as often as possible, it is the absolute necessity of the concentration and unification of the war effort of the American people. The man who faces the guns of the enemy wants Americans to forget peace talk and win the war, letting peace take care of itself. It is because the success of the Third Liberty Loan shows that the whole nation is getting down to business that the men over here are encouraged.

I talked yesterday with a young Corporal who has been doing front-line duty for several months and is the son of a prominent Chicagoan. He said:

"The way the Americans came across with the new Liberty Loan shows that we are going to have good teamwork. With good teamwork, there is nothing that Americans cannot accomplish, I believe. Teamwork means no more disappointments on the part of our country. They are going to make good, sure."

This feeling was found to be general.

There are two things about this war that soldiers who have been in France some time want the folks at home to realize. The first is the size of the undertaking and the second the need of abandoning the talk about the German people not being responsible for the war, but the Kaiser and the Junkers being only to blame.

The soldiers are now confident that the country has awakened to the size of the war, but they are weary of the repeated talk about the German in the ranks being a victim of a Junker conspiracy. Whether or not he is in the last analysis, the American soldier knows that the German in the ranks is the one that must be beaten, and other considerations are subordinate.

DRIVE OFF A GERMAN PATROL.

Americans Not Deceived by New Trick of the Enemy.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 9. (By Associated Press)—A large German patrol attempted to rush the American positions on the Picardy front last night, but was driven off.

The enemy patrol parties were active during the night, and one German, pretending to be wounded, lay outside the wire entanglements before an American position beseeching help. He was acting as a screen for others, who were armed with hand grenades.

The Germans, failing to entice the Americans from their trenches, attacked, but the Americans made it so hot for them that they fled in confusion. Their casualties are believed to have been comparatively heavy.

The roar of heavy artillery continues day and night in this sector.

WAR CROSS FOR KANSAS MAN.

Kills One German and Captures Three in Patrol Fight.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 9.—(Associated Press.)—Second Lieutenant Henry Cassidy of Wichita, Kan., a former athlete, was decorated with the War Cross today for bravery in a recent patrol engagement at Anservilliers.

During the attack a German noncommissioned officer pointed his rifle at Cassidy and called to him to surrender. Cassidy refused, and then killed the German. He then flashed his light down into a dugout and forced three German occupants to come out with uplifted hands.

Today was quiet along the Lorraine front and northwest of Toul. A dozen German airplanes attempted to cross the American lines, but were repulsed by the fire of anti-aircraft guns.

FRENCH HONOR AMERICANS.

Decorate Flags of Companies That Repulsed Toul Attack.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 9, (Associated Press.)—The flags of Companies I and L of the 9th United States Infantry were decorated with the French War Cross today in recognition of the repulse of a German attack along the Heights of the Meuse, south of Verdun, on April 14, when enemy raiders, some disguised as French soldiers, entered the American trenches and gave the alarm that a gas attack was in progress.

The two companies of the 9th attacked the Germans, killed sixty-one of them and took prisoners.

NEW TAXES MAKE ALL FRANCE SQUIRM

Storm of Protest Raised Over 10 Per Cent. Impost on So-Called Luxuries.

MODIFICATION IS ASKED

Business Men Propose an Increased Rate on Annual License to Engage in Trade.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 9.—The new tax on what are termed luxuries, which came into effect a few weeks ago, is raising a storm of protest on the part of traders, now that its full effects are manifesting themselves.

The tax amounts to 10 per cent. on goods of all classes which are sold above a certain fixed price. Thus, suits of clothes for men are free of tax up to a sales price of $30, but above that figure a duty of 10 per cent. is imposed on the full price, so that the purchaser of a suit sold at $40 is called on to pay an extra $4 as tax. Women's dresses are free up to $50, men's shoes up to $8, women's to $6.50, and children's to $5.

Practically every class of commodity is touched by the new tax, and not merely jewelry and similar articles, which are universally recognized as luxuries. France more than any other country is keenly susceptible to taxes of this kind from the fact that she possesses more purely luxury trades than any other part of the world.

Various trade organizations are now earnestly discussing the new taxes, and a movement is well under way to bring pressure to bear on the Government with the view, if not of getting the tax abolished altogether, at least of obtaining its modification. The chief objection raised is that the manner in which the tax is levied has already had the effect of seriously reducing the turnover in practically every class of trade.

A resolution passed yesterday by the Lyons Chamber of Commerce urges the Government to substitute for the new tax an increased levy on the traders themselves by way of an increased charge for the license to carry on trade which practically every trader in France must take out every year. The movement against the new luxury tax is gathering strength so rapidly that there is little doubt that serious Government action will be taken during the next few days.

The next shock to which Paris is looking forward in connection with restrictions is three meatless days per week, which commence next week, when it will be impossible to buy any kind of meat in shops or restaurants on Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, except horseflesh, which horse butchers will be allowed to sell as a concession to the poorer and less well-nourished classes. But even horseflesh will be prohibited in restaurants. We already have cards for bread, coal and several other commodities, and now it is proposed to institute cards for firewood as well as for tobacco.

ARCHIE ROOSEVELT WALKING

But the Time of His Discharge from Hospital Is Uncertain.

PARIS, May 9.—Captain Archie Roosevelt, who was wounded by shell fragments on March 7, has sufficiently recovered to take walks.

He says that he is feeling fine and wants to return to the front, but it is uncertain when he will be discharged from the hospital.

AMERICAN WARSHIP SINKS A SUBMARINE

Shot Which Hit U-Boat Lifted Her Out of the Water and Broke Her in Two.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 9.—The sinking of a German submarine by a United States warship with a shot which lifted the U-boat completely out of the water and broke her in two was reported by officers of the ship on arrival here today. Because of the fine work of the gunners the crew of the ship received an additional furlough of ten days.

On the voyage over the warship, which previously was reported from German sources as having been wrecked, sighted three submarines and the gunners got busy. The first two shots from the warship fired in quick succession at the nearest enemy missed the mark, but the third went home. It caught the U-boat just below the water line and she was lifted out of the water, doubled up and sank to the accompaniment of a chorus of yells from the warship crew.

No survivors were seen in the water and the other submarines, as the destroyed submersible disappeared, dived and did not reappear.

ITALY SPURNS PROPAGANDA.

On Guard Against Peace Drive of the Central Empires.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 9.—"The Central Empires are without doubt trying to launch one of their greatest peace propagandas," said a well-known Deputy, an officer in the Italian Army, twice decorated for valor, when questioned about the rumors of peace movements emanating from all the capitals of the Entente.

"Germany's aim," he continued, "is to demoralize thoroughly the armies and populations of the allied countries and then to attack with overwhelming forces the weakest point on the allied front. These intrigues will absolutely fail, as England, France, and Italy have seen through the plans and are all determined to fight until victory.

"The Austrians have begun again their distribution in the trenches of false Italian newspapers with faked, alarming news, having the object of discouraging the soldiers, but they succeed only in causing irritation and anger against the enemy.

"One of the chief arguments of this Austro-German propaganda is an attempt to convince Italians that America is only bluffing, pointing out the delay with which her promised assistance is reaching the theatre of war. This palpable lie also makes no impression, being scorned by our soldiers, owing to the many evidences to the contrary."

BOGUS PEACE OFFER MADE TO AMERICAN

Friend of Hertling Gets a Savage Reply to Proposals Meant to Reach the President.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, May 10.—The Daily Mail's Amsterdam correspondent asserts that three weeks ago the German Government decided to hold out "certain insidious and bogus offers of peace" to the United States through Professor Heron, an American living in Geneva, whose book, "The Menace of Peace," gained for him the friendship of President Wilson.

On April 19 Professor Quidde of Munich, a friend of Count von Hertling, visited Heron and declared his object was to prepare the way for a merciful peace. He gave Heron to understand that he spoke in the name of Hertling and the German Foreign Office, assured Heron that the peace party in the Reichstag was on the eve of getting predominance in Germany, and that he wished him to prepare President Wilson to take advantage of the auspicious moment.

When pressed to define Germany's terms of peace, he said that Germany was ready, first, to grant Alsace-Lorraine at a peace conference. Second, the Brest-Litovsk peace treaties were not to be raised at the peace conference, but the Allies were to be allowed to put their claims for revision on the council table for discussion. Germany might, thereupon, perhaps, make certain concessions. Third, there was to be no economic war against Germany after the war. Fourth, the German colonies were to be restored.

"I cannot imagine how you can have the effrontery," Professor Heron burst out, "to ask me to lay such a rigamarole of cant and deceit before the American people. So far from creating a spirit of conciliation, it would simply strengthen the American will to smash the perfidious and nefarious authors of such proposals forever. I tell you and those who send you that the United States intends to go on fighting till the Prussian military power and, if necessary, the Prussian State along with it, is extinguished forever as a power for evil, no matter whether it takes one year or ten.

"If you call the remorseless sacrifice of 2,000,000 men a peace offensive and if you want the United States to recognize your shelling of a Parisian congregation as a part of it, you are making a monstrous and most foolish blunder. I tell you that when I listen to your false and treacherous overtures, I feel ashamed of humanity."

TO FREE PRISONERS OVER 48

France and Germany Agree to an Exchange, Beginning May 18.

PARIS, May 9.—The agreement for the exchange of prisoners of war between France and Germany, reached at Berne, has been officially ratified by the German Government.

The agreement will be made effective May 18, after which prisoners over the age of 48 years will be returned to their own countries.

trenches there had been wrecked by German shelling and the line had been withdrawn from it, in order to save life, to position behind the wood, where the machine gunners had a good field of fire, and where it was better to organize counterattacks.

As the German soldiers advanced they were sprayed by machine-gun fire so that many fell, but they were able to take the line of upheaved trenches and Ridge Wood. That is all. The old trenches gave them no cover. Ridge Wood gave them no hiding place, for it is only a collection of tattered tree stumps, and those Germans lay out there losing more men as the hours passed. Then in the evening some of the British, the Seaforths, I think, made a counterattack, clearing the enemy out of the wood and back beyond the original line.

It was not a good day for those German divisions in Flanders—one more fresh division had been scorched—and it was the worse for them because very likely they may have to try again in order to carry out the plans of their high command, who wish to get this ground in order to make easier the way up to Ypres, which, as I have already said, they are anxious to acquire for political advertisement, through there is little of military value in its ruins except the memory of the gallant British dead and of all those who walked through its sinister streets to Hell Fire Corner and the fields across the Menin road.

GERMANS FEARFUL OF AUSTRIAN CRISIS

Dual Monarchy Heading for 'Disaster' and 'Catastrophe,' Papers Say—Alarm at Slav 'Menace.'

By GEORGE RENWICK.

AMSTERDAM, May 9.—Little news of what is happening in Austria-Hungary is allowed to go through to the German press, but there is a good deal of evidence that matters in the Dual Monarchy are causing widespread concern in the Fatherland.

Austria-Hungary, says one German journal, is "heading for disaster," while another declares that the country is going at ever-increasing speed toward a catastrophe. The Kreuz Zeitung says that Kaiser Charles's realm is "being shaken by a severe crisis, which this time goes far beyond parliamentary limits."

It is significant that the Vienna Neue Freie Presse is calling for energetic measures against the Southern Slav "menace," and that it views the political co-operation between the Southern Slavs and the Czechs with considerable alarm and as a danger to the monarchy. The tone of the article would suggest a situation on the southern confines of the Dual Monarchy infinitely more serious than is imagined by the public.

HERTLING FORCES FIGHT ON FRANCHISE REFORM

AMSTERDAM, May 9.—Count von Hertling, the German Imperial Chancellor and Prussian Premier, has decided to dissolve the Prussian Chamber if the third reading of the Franchise Reform bill is rejected, the Cologne Gazette asserts.

The Chancellor, according to the newspaper, received full powers from Emperor William to dissolve the Chamber at an audience two days ago, when Count von Hertling offered to resign.

In the event of the bill being thrown out, the Chancellor and the other Prussian Ministers will announce the dissolution of the house in the best interests of the country, though this step will probably not be taken before the Summer. A statement to this effect, the newspaper says, will be made soon with a view to impressing the opponents of the bill.

Three mass meetings which had been arranged by Independent Socialists to be held in Berlin on Wednesday evening to discuss the question of Prussian electoral reform were forbidden by the police. This action probably was the outcome of an attack at a recent session of the House of Deputies by the Independent Socialist, Heinrich Ströbel, on junkerdom, when he said:

"Attempts are being made to build up a modern political system on mediaeval lines, under which the junkers and capitalists can join hands to deprive the working classes of their rights and keep them in permanent subjection."

AMIENS DESOLATE LIKE PLAGUE CITY

shell storm, and a dangerous fire that threatened ten days ago to involve a wide area was efficiently limited and extinguished.

"That was our worst experience," said a French officer who conducted THE TIMES correspondent through the city this morning. "The bocho incendiary shells fired a block of buildings and the column of smoke and flame gave him a point to shoot at during two days and one night. The enemy evidently hoped to put the conflagration beyond our control, as he concentrated for a time high explosive and incendiary shells thereupon. We even received gas shells, but the firemen refused to be daunted. Taking into consideration the size of the original outbreak and the difficulties produced by a broken water main, our fire chief reckoned that the salvage work and the extinction of flames were accomplished more rapidly than at a normal city fire."

A few minutes later I reached the locality in question and was surprised by the small extent of the damage. A group of buildings that would, perhaps, comprise half a block in New York had been gutted, but one would never have imagined that the firemen were laboring under an abnormal handicap.

Finally I visited the cathedral in the centre of the city, around which ruin and desolation are most pronounced. With characteristic savagery the Germans seem to be directing their fire against the edifice that with Rheims and Chartres ranks highest in the Gothic architecture of France. No small proportion of the 7,000 shells and aerial torpedoes that have been rained upon Amiens day and night for seventeen days have fallen in the neighborhood of the cathedral. At one point its outer railings have been shattered. At another only the sandbags, the outer layer of which is torn to ribbons by iron splinters, have saved a masterpiece of portal statuary from destruction.

While a building adjoining has been reduced to mere shells, so far the cathedral has suffered comparatively little. As if by a miracle, none of the shells that actually struck it has caused the damage normally wrought by large calibre high explosive missiles. Some of them spent their force harmlessly against the outer buttresses. Another crashed the wall of a small side chapel, threw down the altar, and destroyed a great ivory Christ and the carved woodwork beside it. But it did not injure the main building.

One penetrated part of the superstructure and the outer and inner roofs only to pierce (without exploding) the floor just outside the central nave, which Ruskin called the finest in the world. Another tore through the outer roof of the nave itself, but exploded against a gigantic beam which prevented its access to the interior. Another burst against the massive outwork of the side chapel near the main entrance and did little harm beyond causing a rain of dust and minute fragments over a large part of the interior. The seven towering stained glass windows are for the most part intact. There are none of them free from holes that deface their beauty.

"We have removed the art treasures, carved and painted, from the interior and protected the outer statuary as far as possible with sandbags; but that is the utmost we can do," said the officer sadly.

"It is dreadful to think that this wonderful monument of Christian faith and French genius may be ruined by a single shell from those barbarous brutes. Was not Rheims sufficient? Or must Amiens Cathedral also give the world another proof of Teuton Kultur?"

ON THE FRENCH FRONT IN FRANCE, May 8, (Associated Press.)—This German artillery, apparently under orders from the Prussian and Bavarian Crown Princes, is doing its utmost to turn Amiens into another Rheims. The bombardment killed fifty-two men, civilians, thirty women, and five children, besides wounding sixty-two men, forty-eight women, and nineteen children before the population had an opportunity to evacuate the place.

Since the Germans have been within cannon shot of Amiens after their recent advance, they have hurled into the city no fewer than 5,800 shells, mostly six-inch and eight-inch. Every indication points to a systematic effort to destroy the public buildings, as the cathedral has been struck by shells which have pierced the roof and walls.

No troops whatever are in the city, and the railroad passing through it is not in use. The cannonade generally ceases at nightfall, only to be followed by air raids almost every night. Aerial torpedoes to the number of 680 have been launched from airplanes upon various parts of the city. As most of the shells and torpedoes are of the incendiary type, they have caused great damage, so that up to the present 1,200 houses have been destroyed.

VINDICATES M. THOMAS.

French Commissioner Shows Ex-Minister Acted Against Godsol.

The French High Commission yesterday issued the following official statement:

"The World's Magazine of May 5 has published the third installment of a series of articles on J. Godsol, now in jail pursuant to a complaint of the French Government.

"That article mentions the name of my colleague and friend, Albert Thomas, former Minister of Munitions. On several occasions newspapers have already stated that Godsol was the victim of political intrigue aimed at Albert Thomas, mentioned as his sponsor.

"To put an end to such assertions, I would be obliged to you for quoting the two following sentences from M. Albert Thomas himself, on the floor of the Chamber of Deputies, Dec. 13, 1917, in the midst of the applause of his colleagues:

"'In 1916 I fulfilled my duty as Minister, ordering an investigation and by recalling Godsol.

"'In 1917 I fulfilled it once more by having him immediately indicted.'

"The attitude of M. Albert Thomas is thus made perfectly clear. There is, in the present trial, no question of politics and it is M. Albert Thomas himself who filed the complaint against Godsol.

SEES PROFITEERING BY AIRPLANE MAKERS

Interchangeable Patents Give Monopoly to Big Manufacturers, Senator Thomas Asserts.

BILL FOR INVESTIGATION

Covers All War Department Activities—Baker Refuses Court of Inquiry to Officers at This Time.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9. — Senator Thomas of Colorado, a member of the Military Affairs Committee, declared today in the Senate that, under the Administration's contracts with airplane manufacturers it appeared as if there had been "huge profiteering." He urged that the contracts be revoked. The existing system, he said, by which airplane producers were able to operate under one another's patents, as selected by the Advisory Committee on Aeronautics, was, in his opinion, "entirely wrong."

This interchangeable, or "cross-line," system of contracts, as it is called, under which airplanes have been made for the American Army since the country's entrance into the war, has operated, Senator Thomas said, to the advantage of the big manufacturers, who had been able to establish a monopoly, as they held the principal patents approved by the Advisory Committee. The chief beneficiaries, according to Senator Thomas, had been the Curtiss Aeroplane Company and the Wright-Martin Company. These two concerns, he said, have dominated the war airplane industry.

Blame for allowing the "cross-line" contracts to be taken up by the Government as a basis for production of warplanes was placed by the Senator upon the Advisory Committee of Aeronautics, appointed by the President, with William F. Durand at the head and S. W. Stratton as Secretary. This committee acted in conjunction with the War and Navy Departments.

"For reasons satisfactory to that committee, it was decided not to purchase or commandeer existing aviation patents, but to make this other arrangement," said Senator Thomas. "My own view, fortified by our recent experiences, is that the committee erred in not securing by purchase or condemnation the existing patents of an established and fundamental character, because, with their control, agreement for aircraft production based upon original patents would not, in any wise, be embarrassed by the personal or selfish interests of outsiders or by conflicts between rival claimants of the inventions.

Licensed by Association.

"After consultation with representatives of those interested in the basic patents and of the producers, it was determined to prepare an agreement which would recognize certain basic patents and provide for the issuance by some central authority of licenses to all persons desiring to engage in the manufacture of aircraft upon conditions requiring the manufacturers, among other things, to transfer to the Aircraft Manufacturers' Association, in whose name the licenses were issued, all patents and inventions of their own or of which they held control. It was intended that each member of the association under the license agreement should have the benefit of these other inventions in their own operations.

"I affirm that this agreement tends to produce monopoly, because it draws within its membership all existing patents, except improvements on engines and motive power. It secures absolute ownership to the extent that when the subscriber withdraws he cannot take his patents with him.

"I cannot understand why the great manufacturers of aircraft at the time the war began, unless they intended to control aircraft production absolutely, should have insisted upon the execution of such an agreement. They are practically independent of all attacks upon their patents and at the same time are given the power through this agreement to absorb all other devices and inventions, and, by that means, acquire the benefit of the experience of others at figures to be dictated by themselves. It looks like profiteering without any limitation.

"I fear that much of the difficulties and disappointments which the nation has encountered in attempting to carry out its aircraft program are due to the fact that all these conditions bestride the industry like a colossus. Of course, they have much to say in the granting of contracts to others, because would-be contractors, the owners of independent concerns, can be easily outbid if they decline to submit to the yoke. The agreement is un-American, it is undemocratic, it is wrong. In my judgment. It should be annulled without further delay."

Blanket Resolution for Inquiry.

Senator Chamberlain, Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, put in his resolution to give sanction to the forthcoming investigation into the airplane situation. The resolution, which was referred to the Military Affairs Committee, follows:

Resolved, that the Committee on Military Affairs, or any sub-committee thereof, be and is hereby authorized and directed to inquire into and report to the Senate the progress of aircraft production in the United States, or into any other matters relating to the conduct of the war by, or through the War Department; that said committee, or any sub-committee thereof, may sit during the sessions, or during any recess of the Senate; to require by subpoena, or otherwise, the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, documents, and papers; to take the testimony of witnesses under oath, either orally or by deposition; to obtain documents, papers, and other information from the several departments of the Government, or any bureau thereof; to employ stenographic help, at a cost not to exceed $1 per printed page, to report such testimony as may be taken; to employ such agents or assistants as may be necessary, and that all expenses, including traveling expenses, contracted hereunder shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

There is little, if any, opposition in the Senate to the inquiry, and the resolution is expected to be passed immediately. Senator Lewis of Illinois said he would offer an amendment to have the inquiry confined to those phases which the Department of Justice did not take up. He wants the Senate Committee to avoid calling any witnesses called by the Department of Justice unless with the consent of the department.

Members of the committee discussed today the advisability of holding the inquiry behind closed doors, at least in part. No decision was reached.

Refuses Court of Inquiry.

Secretary Baker announced that he had been appealed to by Major General George O. Squier, Chief of the Signal Corps; Colonel E. A. Deeds, Chief of its Aircraft Equipment Division, and Colonel R. L. Montgomery, chief of its Aircraft Contract Division, for courts of inquiry in connection with the aircraft situation. The Secretary said he would not at this time grant their applications, because he did not care to parallel the Senate and Department of Justice investigations.

"The War Department," he said, "is anxious to facilitate and expedite in every possible way the inquiries already instituted by the Department of Justice and the Senate committee. A third examination of the same set of facts at the same time might delay the inquiry, and for that reason I shall hold these applications unacted upon for the immediate present."

American Casualties Abroad Again 75; Killed in Action, 10; Captain a Prisoner

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The War Department today made public 75 casualties in the American Army abroad reported by General Pershing, the same number as reported yesterday, bringing the total sustained from the beginning to 5,158. The list included the names of 10 killed in action, 6 died of disease, 2 killed by accident, 3 died of wounds, 13 severely wounded, and 41 slightly wounded. Captain Andrew S. Robinson of Columbus, Ohio, previously reported missing, is now reported to be a prisoner.

The names of six commissioned officers appear in the list. Lieutenant Harold Sydney Morgan was killed in action. Lieutenants Adam P. Dambrauckas, Kosta Mudd, Thomas H. Reagan, James J. Sheeran, and Paul B. Stewart were slightly wounded.

He is 30 years of age and a private in a machine gun company.

NAVAL CASUALTIES.

Three Men Killed by Accident, One Slightly Wounded in Action.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Edward Augustus Smith, Jr., of 1,805 West North Avenue, Baltimore, Quartermaster in the Navy Aviation Service, was killed April 30 in an airplane accident in France, the Navy Department announced today.

Francis Albert Tuttle, a hospital apprentice, of 820 Sixth Street, South Minneapolis, was slightly wounded in action with the enemy April 28.

Cirilo Acosta, whose home was in the Philippines, was accidentally killed May 7 aboard the U. S. S. Pompey.

The death by accident in London of Yeoman Cecil Lester Smith of 784 Lake Street, Newark, N. J., also was reported.

Cecil Lester Smith, yeoman in the United States navy, who was killed in an automobile accident in London, lived with his sister, Mrs. A. A. Sutcliffe, at 784 Lake Street, in the Forest Hill section of Newark.

TWO NAVY AIRMEN RESCUED AT SEA

Adrift All Night on Wrecked Plane in Shark-Infested Waters Off Florida.

PICKED UP JUST IN TIME

Seaplane Was Sinking Fast When Coast Steamer Sighted Them—Wrecked Machine Brought In.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 9.—After being adrift for eighteen hours on a damaged seaplane in the shark-infested waters off Miami, Fla., two navy aviators, Ensign Arthur Laverents and C. C. Cotton, an observer, were rescued by a northbound passenger steamship and landed here today.

The men left Miami Sunday afternoon and had been circling about on picket duty thirty-six miles off the coast when toward night their engine began to misfire and they discovered a leak in the gasoline tank. They descended in a sea that was running high and threatened to wash them off. Clinging desperately to the framework of the plane, the men sought to get the engine started before the gasoline tank was empty. The sea was so rough, however, that they could do practically nothing. Their presence soon began to attract sharks, and they could see the fins at intervals as hundreds seemed to be slowly circling about the damaged ship of the air.

One of the pontoons of the plane sprung a leak during the long hours that they were adrift. Cotton crawled out to stop up the leak and was only partly successful. He was taken with seasickness, and would have been washed overboard but his companion seized him and held him to the wreck. Both men huddled down to await either the sinking of their frail craft or the coming of some steamship.

When light came on Monday morning they figured that their machine would remain afloat until 7 o'clock. At 6 o'clock they sighted the smoke of a steamship to the southward. Soon they made out the hull. Ensign Laverents took off his coat and waved it.

There was a heavy squall coming up when the pair were sighted by the captain of the rescuing steamship, and the high seas had already begun to break over the plane when his vessel came alongside. The machine, which weighs 2,200 pounds, was hauled on board the steamship and brought here. It was turned over to the care of a coast guard ship here and towed to a naval base.

The men had entirely recovered from their trying experience and had been outfitted with clothing by the passengers on board.

MIAMI, Fla., May 9.—Ensign Arthur Laverents, naval aviator, and C. C. Cotton, observer, who reached an Atlantic port today after being picked up Monday afternoon at sea, thirty-five miles off Miami, left the naval station here Sunday afternoon. When they failed to return searching parties were sent out, but were unsuccessful. Both men were experienced fliers.

SEEK NEWS OF CAPT. HALL.

Paris Embassy Asked to Inquire of Germany About Aviator.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 9, (Associated Press.)—Comrades of Captain James Norman Hall, aviator, missing after a combat on the Toul front, have asked the American Embassy in Paris to communicate with Germany through Switzerland in an effort to ascertain whether Hall was killed or made prisoner. They have furnished the embassy with a description of Hall's airplane and the number of its motor.

A French artillery observer reported that Hall was apparently making a safe landing when he disappeared from sight.

NEW YORK AVIATOR KILLED IN TEXAS

Lieut. James D. May Fatally and Comrade Seriously Hurt When Airplane Falls.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, May 9.—Lieutenant James D. May of New York City was killed and Lieutenant Milo H. Miller of Waterloo, Iowa, was seriously injured tonight when the airplane in which they were flying fell near this city. Both men were pinned under the machine when it fell. They were taken to the base hospital at Fort Sam Houston, where May died shortly afterward.

Lieutenant May's nearest relative is Isabella Crosby, 128 Broadway, New York.

The men were flying low when the accident occurred. Both men, it was said, were scheduled to leave Kelly Field here tomorrow, having completed their instruction. The death of Lieutenant May is the fifteenth fatality among fliers at Kelly Field.

DOWNS TWO IN 5 MINUTES.

Nungesser, French Airman, Also Damages a Third Enemy Machine.

PARIS, May 9.—Within five minutes on Tuesday Sub-Lieutenant Nungesser, leading French aviator, brought down his thirty-third and thirty-fourth German machines and damaged another, which undoubtedly will be placed to his credit. On Sunday he knocked out two other enemy airplanes, which have not yet been officially recorded.

Sub-Lieutenant Nungesser during three years of air fighting has been wounded seventeen times and has served on fifty-two bombing expeditions.

French aviation has suffered a great loss in the death within a few days of three Aces who among them had accounted for more than forty-five Germans. Lieutenant Chaput, with sixteen Germans to his credit, was killed Tuesday, while Sub-Lieutenant Demeuldre, with thirteen victories, was killed in the region of the Somme yesterday. Captain Mieffre met death while directing an infantry attack from a very low altitude. He was struck by a machine-gun bullet fired from the ground.

Fall Kills American Airman.

LONDON, May 9.—Second Lieutenent Dudley C. Fairbairn of Illinois was killed near Montrose Wednesday when his airplane fell accidentally.

PRAISES OUR WORK IN WAR.

Sir Frederick E. Smith Says Too Much Was Expected of Us.

LONDON, May 9.—A dinner to 1,000 American naval and military officers and Y. M. C. A. representatives was given at the National Sporting Club last night. It was at this function that Vice Admiral Sims, commander of the American naval forces in the war zone, in reply to a toast, declared that it was hoped that within the next fortnight the construction of new shipping would exceed the rate of destruction by German submarines.

After the dinner the guests witnessed a boxing exhibition between Jimmy Wilde, the featherweight champion, and the veteran "Pedlar" Palmer.

Sir Frederick E. Smith, the Attorney General, in proposing a toast to President Wilson and the fighting forces of the United States at the dinner, said:

"We in this country realize the immense contribution that America is making to the fighting forces of the Allies, and we are glad that Americans are here now to see the spirit of the British and the sacrifices they are prepared to make. Never has that spirit stood higher and never have the British been more resolute to maintain the struggle, even for twenty years, in order that democracy might win and Germany be shattered.

"Undue and excessive expectations were entertained regarding the speed with which the American contribution could be got ready. I never had any illusions on this point. America was called upon to do in one moment a task a hundred times greater than any nation in the world's history has been called upon to accomplish. Never has a nation undertaken such commitments or flung itself more thoroughly into its task.

"The very fact that we have with us in this war the sons and grandsons of men who fought in the great struggle between the North and the South is a source of encouragement and a precious consolation. It is well that Englishman and Americans should be brought together. They should create a warm friendship, as their differences are only superficial.

"It is worth at least something that the Anglo-Saxon races, the legatees of a precious civilization, should make an imperishable friendship. If that is the result, then even the shipwreck of this terrible war will not have been entirely for nought."

Luxburg Sails from Argentina.

BUENOS AIRES, May 9.—Count von Luxburg, former German Minister to Argentina, accompanied by the German Chargé d'Affaires at Montevideo and the latter's wife, sailed for Europe today. Dr. Peeil, former German Minister to Peru, to whom the Peruvian Government handed his passports last Autumn, will remain in Argentina for the present, owing to the illness of his sister.

The 1000 lb. Havana Blend

IT matters much in a little cigar how the tobacco is mixed. The temper of the blend depends wholly upon the perfect assimilation of flavors. This can be secured only by most painstaking care.

You will find absolute harmony in Piccadilly. The tobaccos do not "clash". There is none of the harshness and bitterness so common to little cigars. Which is explained in Reason No. 6. You might read the other 9 Reasons, also.

Piccadilly Process for 1,000 lb. Havana Blend

1—We take 1,000 lbs. of high grade, selected and blended tobaccos as a base.
2—We use the greatest care in the selection of the finest leaf of each variety for this 1,000 lbs.
3—Uniformity of this 1,000 lbs. assured by the careful weighing of each grade contained in blend.
4—Mellowness and mildness of this 1,000 lbs. made perfect by the proper ageing of the tobacco.
5—Evenness of smoke and taste of this 1,000 lbs. preserved through careful and suitable fermentation.
6—Smoothness of this 1,000 lbs. produced by a thorough intermixing of the tobacco after careful shredding.
7—Absolute cleanliness of this 1,000 lbs. safeguarded by an automatic sifting and purifying process.
8—Harmony of fragrance of this 1,000 lbs. maintained by storing of tobacco in containers and temperature registered by thermometers.
9—Each Piccadilly is made of an exact fractional part of this 1,000 lbs.

ASKS NEW TAX BILL AT PRESENT SESSION

Congress Will Scan McAdoo's Statement Showing Needs Before Deciding.

MOUNTING EXPENSES CITED

May Double Income and Excess Profit Taxes and Authorize Issuance of More Bonds.

WASHINGTON, May 9. — Congressional leaders have been advised by Secretary McAdoo that legislation at this session of Congress is imperative to provide revenue to meet the unexpected increase in expenses incident to the vast expansion of the nation's war program.

A statement of the country's financial situation, upon which the amount of additional taxes and bonds needed may be calculated, has been prepared at the Treasury for submission within the next two or three days to the committees of the Senate and House.

Whether Congress will undertake at the present session upward revision of the war revenue law of last Fall, leaders at the capital said tonight, depends upon the impression made by this statement. If it demonstrates that it is essential to act now, instead of waiting until December, as planned, hope of adjournment by July 1 will go glimmering, and Congress probably will be here until Fall.

Secretary McAdoo's belief that legislation must be enacted at once was expressed in a letter to Senator Simmons of North Carolina, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. The unexpectedly heavy estimates of expenditures for the coming year include the $15,000,000,000 army program, about $1,500,000,000 for the navy, with further estimates expected, and $2,250,000,000 for the Shipping Board.

Senator Simmons said tonight the tacit agreement to defer further revenue legislation until next December was made before these new estimates were submitted. The situation now, he said, is materially changed and will have to be considered in the new light when Secretary McAdoo's formal statement is presented.

Representative Kitchin of North Carolina, Democratic leader of the House and Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said he had heard nothing about the Treasury's plans, but if additional taxes were decided upon, the levy of the last tax bill probably would be doubled. He estimated that $2,500,000,000 in new taxes would be levied, but other leaders placed the probable figure at from $1,000,000,000 to $1,500,000,000, making a total of around $4,000,000,000, based upon the estimated returns of between $4,000,000,000 and $4,500,000,000 from the present law.

Further bond issues also undoubtedly will have to be authorized during the present session, according to Senator Simmons, regardless of when revenue legislation is enacted. The amount of the issues, however, of course will depend upon the decision as to taxes.

Incomes and excess profits, both Representative Kitchin and Senator Simmons indicated, are regarded as the principal source from which any revenue increase must come. The former says both can be doubled, while the latter believes additional tax burdens should be spread more generally over the population. More consumption taxes are regarded as a strong probability.

Strong Republican opposition to any general revenue legislation at the present session of Congress is expected. Senators Lodge of Massachusetts and Smoot of Utah, Republican members of the Finance Committee, both said today that legislation was not necessary until next December, because no appreciable amount of additional revenue would be received by the Treasury much before the Spring of 1919. It also was pointed out that, while appropriation estimates and actual authorizations for the fiscal year beginning July 1 are enormous, drafts upon the Treasury for actual expenditures probably will not be large before the beginning of 1919.

Of estimated actual expenditures next year of about $23,000,000,000, including loans to the Allies, most members of Congress are inclined to raise about 25 per cent., or around $6,000,000,000, by taxes and the remainder from bond issues. Some, however, favor increasing the ratio to one-third taxes and two-thirds bonds.

Senator Simmons explained tonight that a decision regarding immediate legislation largely depends on Secretary McAdoo's showing of actual Treasury receipts in sight between now and February, when it is assumed a new bill begun next December would be available. The Treasury Department recently was authorized to issue $4,500,000,000 additional bonds and $8,000,000,000 of Treasury certificates of indebtedness to meet the nation's expenses, exclusive of provision for further loans to the Allies. Congress, the Senator said, will not risk any Treasury deficit and will make sure that ample funds are available while it is in recess.

WOMEN URGED TO ENROLL.

Republican Woman Leaders Meet to Plan for Fall Campaign.

Woman leaders in the New York County Republican Committee will make a house-to-house canvass to induce woman voters to enroll during the fortnight that remains before May 25, the date for enrollment. Only by enrolling can a woman participate in the primaries this Fall, at which candidates for Governor and other State offices will be nominated.

Miss Helen Varick Boswell, head of the Women's Division of the Republican County Committee, had another talk with her Executive Committee at headquarters, in the Tilden Building, yesterday afternoon. Detailed instructions were given to the woman leaders of the twenty-three Assembly districts in Manhattan as to how they should go about the work. Pamphlets have been printed setting forth the excellences of the Republican Party and urging women to be sure to enroll under the eagle.

Most of the twenty-three district leaders reported yesterday that they had completed organizations by the appointment of a woman captain in each election district, with five helpers.

FIND DR. CONNERS GUILTY.

Newark Physician Aided Saloon Keeper Who Sold to Soldiers.

Dr. George R. Conners of Newark, N. J., and Private John Frey of Camp Merritt, N. J., were found guilty last night on a charge of trying to influence witnesses in a case against a saloon keeper of Paterson, N. J., charged with selling liquor to soldiers. Sentence will be pronounced next week. The conviction followed a trial which began in the morning with a commotion when Private Joseph Devine, also of Camp Merritt, jumped to his feet and shouted at a witness in the United States Court:

"That's a lie."

Dr. Conners was on the stand. He had just said that Devine and Corporal Lawrence H. Payne of Camp Merritt had come to his office and asked for $50 to "help the case of Boyle," the Paterson saloon keeper. Robert J. McDermott, counsel for Dr. Conners, asked that Devine be punished, and John M. Ward, attorney for Frey, moved for a mistrial.

"Bosh," said Judge Haight. "That is nothing startling. Proceed with the case."

SHIPS OF 544,000 TONS COMPLETED IN QUARTER

This Is the Total in Allied and Neutral Countries — Britain Finished 320,000 Tons.

LONDON, May 9, (via Ottawa.)—Merchant ships of an aggregate gross tonnage of 111,533 were completed in April in the yards of the United Kingdom and entered for service, as compared with 161,674 in March, according to an Admiralty statement. The total for the year ended April 30 was 1,279,337 tons. Last month's output was achieved, notwithstanding a large increase in the repairing of merchantmen.

The amount of shipping completed in allied and neutral countries in the first quarter of 1918 was 544,327 tons. Yards of the United Kingdom turned out 320,280 tons in this period. The Admiralty statement also shows that the total construction in 1917 in the United Kingdom and allied and neutral countries was 2,907,780 tons, of which the United Kingdom produced 1,163,474 tons.

ARREST 37 DRAFT SLACKERS

General Roundup Ordered in New York, Brooklyn, and Jersey City.

A general roundup of selective draft delinquents has been ordered in New York City and in Jersey City. The roundup began yesterday in Manhattan when thirty-seven young men were arrested by the police and turned over to the Federal authorities. They were arrested by a squad of twenty-five detectives under Police Captain Joseph Donovan of the Detective Bureau on charges of failure to have in their possession either a Federal or a State registration card. Tho men were found in ten Turkish baths visited by the detectives. The raids began at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, the police operating in squads of four men each under the command of a sergeant.

At each of the baths the men of draft age were ordered to produce their cards, and those who failed to do so were ordered to dress and accompany the detectives to the nearest police station. Tho men protested and said they had left their cards in other clothes, or had lost them, and in most instances this proved to be the case.

The first place visited by the police was in Forsyth Street, and out of 200 men thirteen were arrested for not having Federal and seventeen for not having State registration cards. Two men were arrested in a bath house in East Third Street, six in a Second Street establishment, two in a Fifth Street bath, and the same number in a bath in Essex Street. In a bath in St. Mark's Place the police found over 200 men, of whom twenty-five were detained. Five others were arrested in First Avenue.

At the police stations all but thirty-seven of the men were able to prove that they had complied with both the State and Federal laws, and were allowed to go. The remaining thirty-seven were held for the Federal authorities, and were taken to the Federal Building at 10 o'clock, where they were turned over to Assistant District Attorney Charles W. Atwater for examination.

Within an hour after the prisoners reached the Federal Building relatives of the men began to show up. The relatives in a score of cases had the registration cards of prisoners, and these men were released when identified as the bona-fide holders of them. Four of the men who had been unable to prove they had registered were held in $1,000 bail pending further investigation by agents of the Department of Justice.

About thirty men who had no State cards were arraigned in the Essex Market Court before Magistrate Barlow. They were all discharged.

Preparations have been completed by United States Marshal James Power of Brooklyn for a borough-wide round up of delinquents in that borough. All men without State and Federal registration cards, or men without their cards when asked to show them, will be taken into custody.

"Every man must have his card, and he must have it with him," said Marshal Power. "If he hasn't his card with him it is a misdemeanor, and he is to be arrested. This office and every Federal agency in the bureau, in addition to the police, are to work in this roundup. Just where it is to begin or what agencies are to be employed in discovering the slackers and those who are violating the law cannot be said at this time."

Gathering places of suspected slackers are to be raided.

A police investigation of all "slackers" was recommended yesterday to Charles F. O'Brien, Director of Public Safety of Jersey City, by the Mayor of that city. The Mayor says he is convinced that there are men in Jersey City who have failed to comply with the law or have come from other cities to evade the draft. Every lodging house and rooming house will be visited and the inmates forced to show registration cards.

LEWIS CHIDES GLYNN.

Objects to Chairman Working for Renomination of Whitman.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 9.—Action taken by Attorney General Merton E. Lewis tonight was accepted as in effect an admission that he was to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor. Mr. Lewis sent a letter to Republican State Chairman George A. Glynn, chiding him for his activity in trying to get County Committees to indorse Governor Whitman. Thus far one county has gone on record for Whitman—Columbia. Mr. Lewis's letter follows:

Albany, N. Y., May 9, 1918.
Mr. George A. Glynn, Chairman Republican State Committee.

Dear Sir: I call your particular attention to Section 562 of the election law, being what is known as the Corbibits the use of party funds for prilibits the use of party funds for primary expenses and particularly declares that such funds shall not be expended in aid of the designation or nomination of any person to be voted for at a primary election, either as a candidate for nomination for public office or for any party position. As a sustaining member of the Republican Party, I am unwilling that the funds of the party shall be used for promoting the nomination of any candidate for public office.

I am advised that you have engaged during the last two or three days in the effort to secure action by the County Committees of various counties favorable to the candidacy of Governor Whitman for renomination. As a sustaining member of the Republican Party, I suggest to you the propriety either of resigning your position as Chairman of the Republican State Committee or ceasing your activities in behalf of any candidate for nomination at the primaries to be held next September. Yours very truly, MERTON E. LEWIS.

It was said here tonight that Attorney General Lewis would resign his office early next week and make a formal declaration of his candidacy for Governor.

Chairman Glynn said last night at the Republican Club that until Attorney General Lewis or some one else announced himself as a serious candidate for Governor he did not believe there could be any fair complaint that he was aiding one candidate as against another.

"I think I have been as fair and consistent as any other State Chairman has been," said Mr. Glynn. "When I am informed that there is a contest for the Republican nomination, I shall keep my hands off. I had not understood that Attorney General Lewis would be a candidate, because I had been informed that he would return to the practice of law. As State Chairman, I have been working at all times to keep New York State Republican, and everything I have done has been for that purpose. It is not true that I have been inducing county organizations to commit themselves for any candidate. There is accordingly no basis for a request from any one for my resignation."

COLONEL TO ANSWER BURLESON TODAY

Roosevelt Says He Will Prove Charge of Favoritism to Certain Newspapers.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., May 9.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt spent several hours today preparing his answer to Postmaster General Burleson's request to prove statements made by the colonel in an editorial that favoritism had been shown in the treatment of newspapers under the Espionage act. Tomorrow he will go to his office at 347 Fifth Avenue, where he will make public his statement at noon.

The colonel refused to comment today on whether he thought Mr. Burleson's statement was a command from the Administration to furnish his evidence. "My statement will be given tomorrow and I think that it will bear out everything that I have said," the colonel said.

It is known that the former President's answer will be made in detail regarding his assertion that certain newspapers which opposed the war or attacked our allies have not been proceeded against. Efforts were made to have the colonel make known what papers he had in mind and whether he would make them public tomorrow. To these questions he said that his statement would cover everything and that his answer would settle all questions arising in the controversy.

Erie Returns to Table d'Hote.

On May 15, it was announced last night, the Erie Railroad will serve table d'hote meals on all dining cars. From that date no a la carto meals will be furnished. Dinners will be $1 except to officers, soldiers, and sailors in United States service uniform, to whom the price will be 75 cents. Breakfasts and luncheons will be charged at the rate of 75 cents for all.

Distinctive Suits for Men

Saks Made all the Way Through at $25

¶ We say distinctive Suits because if we had the same kind of suits at $25 as any other shop we wouldn't need to mention them in print. Fact is we have a collection of suits at this particular price very much like an ace of spades in a pack of cards—a quality card and only one just like it.

There are no other suits just like Saks at $25—They are the ace of clothing selections at this price.

¶ The models feature a wealth of original style touches. The Woolens in which they are tailored are in colorings as uncommon as any that leave the loom. In a season of unprecedented manufacturing costs such a showing of suits is nothing short of phenomenal.

Lights and Shades in Summer Decoration

TABLE LAMPS—They may be fashionably Victorian in character like those lamps, resembling wrought iron, topped with formal shades of hand decorated parchment paper.

If you are in quest of "something different," there is a group comprised of individual lamps, no one like its neighbor. Pottery vases, exquisitely colored and patterned, or cloisonne done on bronze vases, make the distinctive bases. The shades are selected to harmonize with the particular lamp for which they are intended. The majority made of silk, which lends itself to the covering of odd shapes.

There are some new lamps of metal with a Japanese bronze finish. These have shades of colored glass that attain many unique effects. Some of them look like shaded silk, others resemble parchment. These lamps are to be commended for Summer use because they are not harmed by dust, or discolored by a strong light.

Illustrated—Cloisonne on pottery lamp base with 20-inch silk shades of rose, gold, or blue silk. A panel border of figured silk and deep silk fringe trims the shade. Fitted with two 40 watt Tungsten bulbs. $37.50

Men's Clothes as Good Elsewhere Cost Much More

Professional Shoppers, intent upon finding men's clothing superior to ours, at prices as low as we ask, have failed in their quest. And they have frankly admitted their failure.

Furthermore, they have reported that whenever they have found a suit or an overcoat worthy of comparison with Macy's garments, the price was seldom less than $5.00 more than our price.

Thousands of men in this big town made the same discovery long ago, and have since bought their clothes here.

When we offer a garment as hand tailored you may be sure it has as much if not more hand tailoring than you will find elsewhere and the price will be less.

Our Spring and Summer Suits for men and youths at $19.75 are not approached in other stores at anything like that price.

The Men's and Young Men's Suits at $24.75 are priced at $30 and more elsewhere, while our Supre-Macy Suits at $28.50 for business and professional men are quite as distinctive as custom garments at a much higher price.

CANVASS COMMITTEE SOLD MILLION BONDS

Chairman Leach Reports Subscriptions of $138,683,150 in Three Boroughs.

INITIAL PAYMENTS MADE

Although $50,000,000 Was Due Yesterday, $400,000,000 May Have Changed Hands Here.

Chairman A. B. Leach of the Metropolitan Canvass Committee of the Liberty Loan announced yesterday that, on the figures so far complied by his committee, a total of 1,016,5?? individual subscriptions were obtained by it in the three boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn, and the Bronx alone. This committee did not cover Richmond or Queens Boroughs. These subscriptions represented a total of $138,683,150, so that the average individual subscription was about $136. The majority represented $50 bonds sold from house to house.

The individual subscriptions were divided among the three boroughs as follows: 575,246 in Manhattan, 336,448 in Brooklyn, 104,888 in the Bronx. Mr. Leach also permitted a Times reporter to look over the series of bulletins and general orders issued by his committee to the precinct Captains and other local leaders of the organization as the best demonstration of the care with which the canvass was organized and the completeness of the information and instructions given the men and women who actually did the work.

Committee Gave Full Instructions.

The first bulletin provided each precinct captain in the three boroughs with a full and accurate list, with addresses, of all the banks and trust companies or branches in his precinct and in his borough through which subscriptions might be booked, so that every "prospect" might be directed to one without loss of time. Then followed instructions for the issue and sale of coupon books; instructions regarding working with the traveling banks and the out-door rallies; regarding reporting evidences of hostility or pro-Germanism; regarding campaign expenditures, drawing supplies, and so on; in complete form, a compendium of all possible useful information for the Liberty Loan salesman.

Following these earlier bulletins, which comprise the canvasser's encyclopaedia, came a series of bulletins on the progress of the drive, with information regarding the leading districts, spurring up the backward, tabulating and noting, for the common good, various ideas which individual precinct workers or leaders had tried out and found good. Mr. Leach is planning to keep his full list of bulletins in some permanent form, not only because of its value in organizing the canvass for any future loan, but also as a souvenir of the work of the Metropolitan Canvass Committee.

Call Money Holds Firm.

The heavy financial transactions involved in the payment by the Treasury of $500,000,000 4 per cent. certificates of indebtedness and the payment by subscribers of the initial instalment on the Third Liberty Loan were put through without strain yesterday, as far as New York City was concerned. Call money held firm at 6 per cent. until late in the afternoon, when a few loans were reported at 5½ and 5¼ per cent., and bankers reported a substantial amount of loans called, but the banking machinery, perfected by similar steps in connection with the preceding Liberty issues, worked smoothly.

As the result of the calling of loans, there was considerable activity in the loan market on the Stock Exchange, as brokers sought to replace with fresh borrowings the loans which they had paid off on demand. It was estimated that fully $25,000,000 was lent on the Exchange in the afternoon. Part of this total probably represented the effect of increased activity in stocks. General money conditions were easy enough to necessitate no action on the part of the so-called Money Pool, and no loans were drawn from the special reservoir.

Payments Include Many Millions.

While the Federal Reserve Bank officers declined to mention any totals of payments on Liberty bond subscriptions, in accordance with instructions from the Treasury Department, it was estimated in banking quarters that many millions more than the prescribed minimum went into the Government's accounts. Several of the large banks were known to have paid in full the subscriptions which they had recorded with the Liberty Loan Committee, and many individual subscribers did the same.

Basing the calculation on $1,000,000,000 subscriptions for this city, the minimum payment yesterday would have been $50,000,000. Guesses on the actual payments ran from $150,000,000 to $400,000,000. As the Treasury certificates surrendered by corporations and individuals were, in effect, payments on bond subscriptions if the holders so elected, bookkeeping transactions were all that was necessary to record a large part of the proper credits.

The decision of the Federal Reserve authorities to suspend after June 15 the service charge now in force for handling checks turned in for collection, became known in the financial district in the course of the day. The charge in case of some Federal Reserve Banks has amounted to 1 cent and in others to 1½ cents an item. The ruling, which has not been established for a definite period, applies to checks handled by Federal Reserve banks for member banks and other Reserve banks, which, in case of the local Reserve bank, have frequently amounted to a total as large as 90,000 per day.

SPIKED CLUB LOAN EXHIBIT.

Austrian Atrocity to Figure in the Fourth Campaign Next Fall.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Before work on the Third Liberty Loan is finished, the Treasury's Loan Publicity Bureau has started preparations for the Fourth Loan, which will be launched next Fall. All artists and designers were asked today to submit designs for posters, window cards, and buttons by June 1. These are to be donated to the Government.

The Italian Government has been asked to furnish an exhibit of the spiked club used by the Austrians to kill wounded Italian soldiers, to be shown in the Fourth Loan campaign. American, British, and French war exhibits also will be used extensively.

Bond buyers' buttons for the Fourth Loan will be smaller than those used in the third campaign, and will be made of tin, in order to save celluloid for more important war purposes. Frank R. Wilson, Publicity Director, estimates the saving on buttons at $75,000.

SAYS HEARST WOULD WIN.

Conners Sure Editor Could Be Next Governor If He Ran.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 9.—"If William R. Hearst becomes a candidate for Governor he will be both nominated and elected," William J. Conners, former Democratic State Chairman said today. Mr. Conners had previously given intimations that he was in favor of Hearst's candidacy when he met Mr. Hearst and Mayor Hylan at Palm Beach.

It is probable that the Erie County organization, with which Mr. Conners has not been in full sympathy for some time, will oppose Mr. Hearst if he should become a candidate for the Democratic nomination.

SHELL SHOCK MASTERED, PHYSICIAN REPORTS

Tells Neurological Association That Surgeons at the Fighting Front No Longer Dread It.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, May 9.—The convention of the American Neurological Association was informed today that "shell shock" no longer was dreaded by medical men on the fighting front. It had been thoroughly mastered, it was said, and recoveries had been marvelous.

Lieut. Col. Colin Russell gave statistics which showed that the cures were so positive that only 4 per cent. of the patients, when they were returned to duty, suffered a second "shock" from some expected explosion. He told of bringing about cures in a few minutes. A soldier who was certain that his leg had been paralyzed was cured by the application of a slight electric current.

The rapidity of recovery, Dr. Russell said, depended entirely upon the mental capacity of the patients, some requiring months of "suggestion education" before they were able to control themselves.

Dr. T. H. Weisenburg of Philadelphia, President of the association, in his annual address, said that America had made a precedent for the nations by establishing a division of neurology and psychiatry in the Medical Corps of the army.

"This is the first time an army has ever created a special neurological department," Dr. Weisenburg said, "and, while there may have been some skepticism in the beginning, the work of the neurologists and psychiatrists has been of such exceptional merit that universal recognition has been given it by other branches of the service. New fields are constantly opening up for which a large number of men are needed. Aviation is almost altogether a neurological problem."

Wife Sues Actress for Alienation.

Mrs. Roberta Menges Tearle, who divorced Conway Tearle, an actor, on evidence obtained when detectives in her employ entered an apartment and found Tearle with Miss Adele Rowland, actress, filed suit in the Supreme Court yesterday against Miss Rowland for $100,000 damages for alienating Tearle's affections. The papers were served on Miss Rowland at the theatre, where she is appearing.

STIELOW RELEASED FROM AUBURN PRISON

Leaves for Buffalo After Pardon Papers Arrive from Albany —Green Also Freed.

Special to The New York Times.

AUBURN, N. Y., May 9.—Charles F. Stielow and Nelson Green, both pardoned by Governor Whitman after he was convinced that they were unjustly convicted of the murder of Charles B. Phelps and Margaret Wolcott in March, 1915, at West Shelby, left Auburn Prison this afternoon with Detective Thomas O'Grady of Buffalo and members of their families after a long wait for the pardon papers from Albany.

"I am going with Mr. O'Grady, and he is going to get me work in Buffalo. After I have tried city work, if I don't like it, I will go back to farming," said Stielow.

Green declared that he will join a brother who has bought a farm up the State.

Mrs. Stielow and Ethel Stielow, a daughter, accompanied the released man home, while Green's mother and sister joined him as he left the prison.

Special to The New York Times.

MEDINA, N. Y., May 9.—The people of Orleans County who are familiar with the details of the Phelps murder here three years ago bitterly resent the action of Governor Whitman in pardoning Charles Stellow and Nelson Green. They point out that the Governer issued a pardon as the result of an investigation made by Deputy Attorney General George Bond of Syracuse, and that the evidence obtained by him was presented to a special Grand Jury here last Winter, with the result that it failed to obtain the indictment of Clarence O'Connell, who, with Irving King, it is now believed, committed the murder.

The Orleans County farmers, who have spent nearly $50,000 on this case and who are a unit in believing that Stellow and Green are guilty, are unable to fathom the executive's reasoning in this case.

The Lewis boom for Governor has lost no strength by this latest move in the Stellow case.

CALLS SEDITION BILL AN AID TO LYNCHING

Two Thousand Radicals Cheer Hillquit as He Denounces Measure Before Wilson.

DEMAND FOR FREE SPEECH

Liberty Defense Union Gives Dinner as Testimonial for Editors of The Masses.

Characterizing the Sedition bill, now awaiting the President's signature, as "the nationalization of lynching" and warning that there would be many more trials like The Masses' case as soon as the pending law becomes effective, Morris Hillquit, the Socialist, last night was warmly applauded by 2,000 persons who attended a dinner given by the Liberty Defense Union at Central Opera House, Third Avenue and Sixty-seventh Street, as a testimonial to the editors of The Masses who are now under indictment for violation of the Federal Espionage law. The dinner, attended by radicals of all types, including anarchists, was announced as a move "to organize popular support in behalf of persons prosecuted for the exercise of their constitutional rights of free speech and free press," was presided over by Charles W. Erwin, editor of The New York Call.

Dudley Field Malone, ex-Collector of the Port, who was down for a speech, wired his regrets. In his telegram Mr. Malone said that he did not dare leave Washington with the Suffrage Amendment bill up for consideration today, adding that if he quit the Capitol he thought the bill might be defeated.

Announcing the purpose of the gathering, Mr. Erwin defined free speech as "the willingness to endure persecution, yes, even imprisonment, for the right to speak of something of which you don't approve." He urged the auditors to stand together in their convictions.

Warm Welcome for Hillquit.

Mr. Hillquit, the first speaker, got a big ovation from the crowd when he was introduced, and, without waiting for the applause to subside, plunged into a denouncement of the Sedition law—that is, after he had requested that all smoking be stopped because "it might inconvenience the ladies."

"I am glad to speak to you tonight," he said, "because I may not have a chance to do so again. A certain law has passed both houses and is now awaiting the President's signature. When he signs that law we shall have to take a long vacation. I should like to read some of the passages of that law"—and with marked sarcasm the speaker read out the clause empowering Postmaster General Burleson to determine just what constituted sedition. At the first mention of Mr. Burleson's name there was much hissing and booing. Continuing, Mr. Hillquit said:

"They tell us about a new law that is to be passed providing that when Burleson is satisfied that one is thinking seditiously he (the thinker) may be chloroformed by army surgeons. Under this new law you are relieved of writing, thinking, and talking."

Turning again to his notes on the clauses of the Sedition bill, he read the part relative to scurrilous and contemptuous criticism of the Government and its uniformed forces. With increased emphasis and in a louder voice, as though making a telling revelation, he said:

"You are not to say anything scornful or contemptuous about the Government or the army or the navy or the uniform. For instance, if Elizabeth Freeman, a well known worker for equal rights for women, begins to worry about the passage of the Federal Amendment to the Constitution giving women the right to vote, and she says 'damn that old Constitution. It should be altered,' she is liable to twenty years in prison or a fine of $10,000. But if she thinks it over first and begins her complaint by saying, 'May I suggest that the Constitution is shopworn'—she will be all right, perhaps.

Says Law Is No Joke.

"Don't think that this new law is a joke. It may sound strange that an effort is made to regulate one's speech, but that isn't so bad. The law as it reads isn't so bad, but it will be when it enters into the court and opinions are based on it and it is interpreted, and all the endless things that happen when a law is construed in court.

"This law was made for spies, and now we hear of such spies as Max Eastman, Floyd Dell, and Art Young, [three of the indicted Masses staff]; these men certainly had no intention to obstruct the military affairs of this country. These men had simply communicated their thoughts, and they had the right to express these thoughts."

Here Mr. Hillquit dipped into the history of the trial recently closed, and declared that the defendants had been tried "in an air of hostility and prejudice." He also asserted that they had been tried not "as criminals, but as the spokesmen of radicals, Socialists, and the like." He declared that the Judge and jury had got "much education about the war and peace and conscription," and said that the only way of educating the American people apparently was through such trials. Speaking of trials, he went on:

"There will be more of such trials as soon as the Sedition bill becomes a law. You have heard about the mobs that lynch people for alleged sedition and we have been given to understand that the sedition law was necessary to prevent this. Why, this law is the nationalization of lynching!

"Friends, let me say that we may expect troubles for ourselves from this law. If any of us find ourselves in the predicament of Eastman, Dell, and the others, we must stand together."

Max Eastman Applauded.

Max Eastman was introduced as a "thought provoker," and was greeted by a general rising of the diners. He said in opening that he had lately found himself between two classes of people, "those who are disgusted with me because I am going to jail, and those who are disgusted with me because I am not." He said:

"I don't know whether upon conviction we shall be treated as political prisoners. Apparently only German spies get that sort of treatment. Do you know that there hasn't been a single genuine anti-German agitation in this country since the war—so far as I know of? All those who have suffered for their sentiments have been American citizens who were punished because they were making socialistic speeches to working men.

"I think that it would be better if those politicians in Washington would devote themselves to the prosecution of the war with the German Empire, instead of prosecuting a war against the American Republic. We don't want to be martyrs for our opinions, but we will not relinquish our right to speak the truth as we see it," was his parting shot.

Other speakers were John Reed, war correspondent; Elizabeth Freeman and Amos Pinchot. An effort was made to raise a fund of $5,000 for the union, but the effort fell short badly.

ASSAILS FOOD FAVORITISM.

German Officers Smuggle Supplies Home, Haase Asserts.

AMSTERDAM, May 9.—Before the Reichstag Food Committee last week, Socialist Deputy Haase, according to German newspapers, demanded that the War Office deal with the "scandal" of food smuggling from the front. He said that a soldier could no longer obtain leave unless he "dragged home with him parcels from officers containing food for their families."

The Deputy said that it was difficult to say whether the people would tolerate the seemingly inevitable reduction of the bread ration due to delay in the arrival of grain from the Ukraine.

ARREST MORE RUSSELLITES

Two Bible Student Preachers Charged with Aiding Germany.

Clayton J. Woodward and George H. Fisher, two more members of the organization founded by the late Pastor Russell, were taken into custody yesterday to answer to the Federal authorities for their alleged conspiracy to help Germany win the war by spreading discontent and disloyalty here. They live at Bethel House, 122 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn. Both said they were preachers connected with the International Bible Students' Association. They were in Scranton Wednesday, they said, and did not know of the arrest of their leader, J. F. Rutherford, and five of his followers until they got back.

When the first arrests were made the prisoners were saved from going to jail by a quick transfer of the real estate of the organization to one of the members. This done, the property was accepted as bail for the six prisoners. It was learned yesterday that this proceeding was not regular, and it is probable that in the default of any of the prisoners the Government would be in a legal fight to recover on the security accepted. It is said that arrangements are being made to furnish other bail. The security, however, that was offered for the six prisoners was accepted as bond for the two taken yesterday.

United States District Attorney France was asked whether the bond offered was irregular. He said that he would not reply to the question. "I am satisfied for the present," was his only answer. Fisher and Woodworth were taken before Federal District Judge Edwin L. Garvin, who fixed bail at $2,500 each. All the prisoners are over draft age.

CAR RUNS DOWN HILL KILLS MAN IN AUTO

Motorman Loses Control and at Eighty Miles an Hour It Tears Down 145th Street.

THEN HITS ANOTHER CAR

Twenty Persons Are Injured; Seven of Them Seriously—Many Cut by Broken Glass.

One man was killed and more than twenty persons were injured, seven of them severely, yesterday when a runaway surface car collided first with an automobile and then with another car. The accident occurred shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon on the steep hill extending from Amsterdam Avenue to Eighth Avenue on 145th Street. The casualties were:

Dead.

GORDON, CHARLES, painter and decorator, 2,641 Jerome Avenue, the Bronx.

Seriously Injured.

PURKIN, Mrs. EMMA, 873 Stebbins Avenue; shock; in the Harlem Hospital.

FRENCHMAN, Miss ELLEN, 151 West 145th Street; contusions; in the Harlem Hospital.

McCALL, Miss GUSTESS, conductor, 101 West 102d Street; fractured rib and lacerated scalp; in the Harlem Hospital.

McCAULIFFE, JOHN J., 2,853 Eighth Avenue; contusions of the arms; in the Harlem Hospital.

RICCO, PASQUALE, motorman, 470 East 116th Street; fractured right leg and lacerated scalp; in the Harlem Hospital.

WAGNER, Mrs. CARRIE, 406 St. Nicholas Avenue; fractured skull; in the Harlem Hospital.

It was just at the beginning of the rush hour when the Union Railways crosstown car, with Michael Nolan as motorman, started east from 145th Street and Broadway. It was filled with men and women and a number of children, all homeward bound. At Amsterdam Avenue and 145th Street, where there is one of the steepest hills in the city, Nolan shut off his power and applied his air brakes.

For some reason they failed to work, and the car instead of slowing down leaped forward and started at breakneck speed down the incline. Nolan threw on the emergency brake, but there was only a whir and rattle of chains, and the car's momentum was unchecked.

By this time the passengers had become alarmed, and, notwithstanding the orders of the conductor that no one was to leave his seat, a number made a rush to get out of the lurching car. Conductor Fishdeck kept the doors shut to prevent any one from leaping out.

Nolan, when he realized that his car was out of control and that nothing could stop its course down the hill, braced himself on the platform and kept sounding the gong. He also kept up a continuous shouting.

As the car shot down the hill attaining a speed of more than eighty miles an hour, Nolan saw just ahead of him an automobile with one man in it. The man was Charles Gordon, who apparently did not hear the alarm until it was too late. He was going down the hill just in the track of the approaching car, and his attention was fixed on the road ahead.

With a tremendous crash the runaway struck the automobile, turning it half around and throwing Gordon into the air. So great was the momentum of the street car that Gordon was thrown backward through the glass on the front platform of the car and into the aisle of the car itself. He lay unconscious before the passengers.

Patrolmen Brehme and Murphy of the West 135th Street Station, who were standing near Eighth Avenue at the foot of the hill, heard the tumult and at once ran ahead, blowing their whistles and clearing traffic as much as possible to avoid any further collisions.

Notwithstanding their efforts, however, the New York Railways car running in the same direction as the Union Railways car and on the same track was unable to speed up and get out of the way. Motorman Pasquale Ricco and Miss Gustess McCall, conductor of the New York Railways car, stuck to their posts even when they saw that a collision was inevitable.

The Gordon automobile had become wedged in front of the car and was sweeping the street to both sides. Gradually it broke up under the pounding. Dragging the almost unrecognizable wreckage, the Union Railways car smashed into the rear platform of the New York Railways car with such force that the latter shot ahead nearly a half block before it could be stopped. All the glass in both cars was broken. Many of the passengers were cut by broken glass.

District Attorney Swann last night ordered the motorman and conductor of the runaway car arrested on a technical charge of homicide. The motorman asserted that he had several times reported the car as defective. He said he had made this report at the Kingsbridge car barns.

"No man responsible will be allowed to go free," said the District Attorney last night. "If he is responsible we will go after the 'man higher up.'"

9 SAVED 3 KILLED IN SUBWAY CAVE-IN Tunnel Driven Through Debris to Rescue Men Imprisoned at Prospect Park Plaza.

TIMBERING NOT AT FAULT

Crash Thought to Have Been Caused by an Excavation Run Too Close to Shoring.

A rescue party working all night long under the Prospect Park Plaza succeeded in digging a twenty-foot tunnel through soft earth and debris and rescuing the nine men who were imprisoned alive when the subway link, which is to connect the Brighton Beach line with the Fourth Avenue subway, collapsed on Wednesday night. The men were found uninjured. There are three men still reported missing, and it is believed they were killed by the mass of rock that fell on them. It was at first thought that five men had been crushed when the tons of earth and rock trapped the gang at the head of the tunnel; but later, in checking up the list, it was found that two had not reported for work. The missing are:

BENTON, RICHARD, 284 4th St., Jersey City.

BROWN, M., (sometimes known as Taylor,) 203 West 30th St., Manhattan.

SKATES, WILLIAM, 268 Bergen St., Brooklyn.

The Public Service Commission in a statement said that so far as is now known the accident was not due to any lack of timbering or engineering precautions. The exact cause is a matter for investigation. The men were working on a section 100 feet under the street level. North of Malbone Street is a shaft leading from the surface to the proposed subway level. The contractor has been driving a tunnel north and south from this shaft. The accident happened in the north tunnel, about 100 feet from the shaft. The tunnel is being driven through sandy soil, which has to be supported by timbering as the work progresses. As fast as possible the timbering is removed and concrete walls erected. About twenty feet beyond the end of the concrete one of the supporting timbers gave way. The Public Service officials who have investigated presume that it gave way because one of the workmen excavated too close to the base of the timber, causing it to slide.

The workmen, including Richard Benton, the timberman, were trying to brace this timber up when it gave way. Its fall caused the collapse of the adjoining timbers, with the result that a section of the tunnel wall and roof, for a length of twelve to fifteen feet, slid into the tunnel, burying the men. The slide filled the tube and cut off the other workmen, who were further north.

The task which confronted the engineers then was to reach the imprisoned men. The engineers and contractor's men succeeded in establishing communication with the entombed men by driving a two-inch iron pipe through the slide. Through this tube they heard exactly what had happened, and through this tube, with the help of an air compressor, the men were furnished fresh aid. Then the workmen started digging a four-foot drift through the slide. It was about 4 o'clock yesterday morning before those trapped were rescued.

As the rescuers dug their way slowly forward other workmen followed and shored up the opening with heavy timber.

"All of us were equipped with electric torches," said Edgar Gardner, one of the rescued. "For a time we had difficulty in getting air, and we threw ourselves face down in the wet and in this position we seemed to get a fuller measure of air. All of us were dizzy at times, and we were always sleepy. We had our lunches with us, but we did not feel like eating. We were mighty glad when we got more air and our anxiety departed as we heard the men coming through the cave-in for us."

One of the men rescued said he saw a twelve-inch beam fall and pin down one of the men missing. Chief Engineer Waldo Bigge, of the Degnon Contracting Co., said there was now little likelihood of the three missing men being alive.

Early in the morning by order of the Public Service Commission the trolley traffic at the scene of the accident was suspended, and the Flatbush Avenue cars diverted over other lines.

Exchange Greetings with Chileans.

SANTIAGO, Chile, May 8.—The American Embassy and the Chilean Foreign Office exchanged greetings today on the completion of 100 years of diplomatic relations between the two republics. The American Chargé d'Affaires called at the Foreign Office to pay his respects and the Chilean Foreign Minister sent a note to the American Embassy in which hope was expressed that the cordial relations continue for many years to come.

CHARGE DR. TILING WITH DISLOYALTY

Government Moves to Cancel Physician's Citizenship Papers.

FIRST ACTION OF ITS KIND

Poughkeepsie Man Accused of Taking Oath of Allegiance with Intent to Deceive.

In accordance with instructions received from the Government at Washington, United States District Attorney Francis G. Caffey filed a petition in the Federal District Court yesterday for the cancellation of the citizenship papers of Dr. Johannes Herman Martin Augustus von Tiling of Poughkeepsie, for years a well-known resident of Dutchess County and one of Poughkeepsie's leading physicians. The Government charges that when Dr. Tiling foreswore allegiance to the Kaiser and took the oath of American citizenship he did not have "the purpose and intention of renouncing his allegiance and fidelity to William II., Emperor of Germany."

The action is the first brought for the cancellation of citizenship in New York State since Congress declared war on Germany. In the event the courts grant the petition of the Government Dr. von Tiling, it was stated yesterday, will immediately become an enemy alien. Agents of the Department of Justice went to Poughkeepsie last night to serve a copy of the Government's petition on Dr. Tiling.

The petition states that Dr. Tiling filed his application for citizenship in the Supreme Court at Poughkeepsie on Dec. 4, 1906, at which time, it is added, he "made declaration under oath of his intention in good faith to become a citizen of the United States." Three years later, on May 9, 1909, Dr. Tiling took the oath of allegiance and was duly declared an American citizen by Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morschauser.

"Citizenship by Fraud."

The Government in its petition charges that when Dr. Tiling made his declaration of intention and subsequently took the oath of allegiance to the United States he did so with the intention "to procure by fraud a certificate of citizenship * * * that, at said respective times, the respondent did not intend to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, State, or sovereignty, and particularly did not then or at all intend to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to William II., Emperor of Germany."

It is further charged that Dr. Tiling is not "attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States," and that, furthermore, he "has not supported and defended" the Constitution or the laws of America against the enemies of America, and "has not borne true faith and allegiance to the same."

The petition next alleges grave charges with reference to the utterances of Dr. Tiling since this country entered the war. It charges:

> Your petitioner further states and charges that since the outbreak of the European war, and particularly since Congress declared a state of war to exist between the United States and the Imperial German Government, respondent has stated at divers times to divers persons, that the sinking of the steamship Lusitania was justified; that the people traveling thereon had absolutely no right to take passage due to the fact that they had been warned; that this boat was laden with bullets intended for the German people, and that the lives of the German people, that the said bullets were intended for, were more important than the lives of Americans lost by the said sinking of the said ship; that Germany will certainly come out victorious, and it was ridiculous for the United States to enter the war; that he is firmly of the opinion that Germany will win the war; that his personal feelings are as strong now as they ever were for Germany, and that they have never changed since he had left Germany, and that his present feelings had been brought to the surface by the present European war; that he still has a good deal of fondness for the town he lived in along the Rhine, and that he has a great deal of fondness for the country there, and that he does not feel that he has ever forfeited his love for Germany; that he has often stated his own opinion that the German people and the Austrian people feel that they are fighting for life and death, and have to defend their homes; that he has made a careful study of the questions involved in the war and that he fully believes and thinks that the German side is the right side and has so publicly expressed his opinion.

Friend of Enemy Aliens.

It is stated in the petition that the charges which are the basis of the Government's action are based on various affidavits now in the possession of the Government. The makers of these affidavits are reported to include some of the most prominent persons in Dutchess County.

In conclusion the Government asks that the citizenship of Dr. Tiling be canceled and "he be forever restrained and enjoined from setting up or claiming any rights, privileges, benefits, or advantages whatsoever thereunder."

Dr. Tiling is the fourth prominent resident of Poughkeepsie against whom serious charges have been brought by the Government in the last three weeks. The others, all of them German subjects, are Dr. Josef Stulz, who is a son-in-law of the late J. W. Hinkley; Herr Heinrich Bakasch, and Frauleln Agate W. Richrath, the nast named a former instructor of German in Vassar College.

Rudolph Bergmann of 160 West Eighty-seventh Street, who is described as an investment broker, was brought to the Alien Enemy Bureau in the Federal Building yesterday afternoon, where he was questioned by Captain Roger B. Hull, U. S. A. Bergmann is accused of denouncing the Government and President Wilson. He is held for further investigation.

Max Freudenheim is charged with being an active German propagandist who has been spreading stories intended to frighten negroes who are in the armed service of the country or who are subject to call to the colors. He is an insurance agent and has been in the United States twenty years. One of the stories he is alleged to have circulated was to the effect that when a negro soldier was captured by the Germans he was horribly mutilated, including cutting off his ears. Those who don't fight for the United States, he said, would be looked after and granted special privileges when Germany was triumphant and the Allies, including the United States, were humiliated. He told the negroes that the Germans would "kill Americans like rats in a hole." This case was not one of internment. It was said yesterday, and will be turned over to the District Attorney for action.

Michael Bail, an Austrian-born soldier in the national army, whose brother is said to be an official in the Austro-Hungarian Ministry of War, was brought to the Alien Enemy Bureau yesterday to answer a charge of spreading German propaganda among American soldiers. A hearing was postponed pending the arrival here of several soldiers who were in his company at Camp Upton. Martin Starck, also an Austrian, and a former soldier at Camp Upton, was also brought to the Federal Building for examination. He is not charged with being an active propagandist.

Benno Loewy, attorney for Frau Margaret Ober-Arndt, the German opera singer, called on United States Marshal McCarthy yesterday to ask permission for his client to spend the Summer in the Adirondacks. Frau Ober recently asked permission to return to Germany, and yesterday's action was taken to mean that the State Department has refused to grant the request. Marshal McCarthy has referred the Adirondacks request to the Department of Justice.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 9.—Dr. Johannes H. M. A. von Tiling, whose naturalization the Government is attempting to have cancelled, came to this city fifteen years ago from Baltimore. For about a year he was Assistant Superintendent at Vassar Brothers Hospital. He left the hospital to take up the practice of medicine in this city, having his office at 278 Mill Street. Up until the time the United States entered the war he had a very extensive practice. He was at one time a member of the Poughkeepsie Board of Health. When told tonight of the application made by the United States Attorney, Dr. Von Tiling says he was born in Russia, was deeply affected. After a few minutes, he said:

"I am surprised and bewildered at the action that is being taken against me. However, I have put all my affairs in the hands of my attorney, John E. Mack of this city."

TO BUILD NEW HOSPITAL.

Open Campaign to Raise $250,000 for East Side Institution.

A campaign was launched yesterday afternoon following a conference at the Hotel McAlpin of the merchants and medical men of the east side to raise $250,000 for a new hospital, to be erected on the site of the People's Hospital, 203 Second Avenue, between Twelfth and Thirteenth Streets.

It was announced at the end of the conference that $50,000 has been already subscribed. The new hospital will be a ten-story structure with all modern improvements, including a gymnasium.

Edward Mandell, Temporary Associate City Superintendent of the Board of Education, presided at the meeting. Among those interested in the project are Julian Goldman of the Hotel Breslau, who was elected President; Irvin Schaerr, who donated $10,000, and Dr. William L. Sirovich, Superintendent of the hospital.

JAIL FOR RETAILERS OF GERMAN WAR LIES

Court Gives Warning of Prosecution for Those Who Aid "Whispering Propaganda."

CRIME TO REPEAT STORIES

Grand Jury Finds No Basis for Reports Meant to Scare Women from Nursing Work.

The Federal Grand Jury for the Southern District of New York handed a presentment to Judge Augustus N. Hand yesterday regarding the source and truthfulness of certain stories which have been circulated in this country, "to the effect," as the presentment put it, "that frightful and scandalous conditions attend the Red Cross nurses in the American Army hospitals in France."

These vicious reports are believed to be a part of the widespread German "whispering propaganda," the purpose being to create dissension among the people in America, as well as to frighten women so that they will not enter the overseas nursing service.

The Grand Jury investigation was undertaken by order of the Government for the two-fold purpose of identifying if possible the source of the propaganda and to make the falsity and viciousness of the propaganda a matter of court record. The Grand Jury, the foreman of which is W. De S. Tremolm, investigated various stories which have been widely repeated, not only in New York, but all over the country, and cites in its presentment as typical one "reported to have been made at Vassar College by Dr. Emma B. Culbertson, Senior Surgeon of the New England College for Women and Children at Boston."

In substance, this story, the Grand Jury says, was as follows:

> It was a matter of common knowledge that 200 beds had been reserved in the Sloans Maternity Hospital, New York City, for Red Cross nurses who were returning from France and expecting immediate confinement.
> "This statement," the presentment reads, "was called to the attention of this Grand Jury on the ground that if the statements were true the failure of the military authorities properly to safeguard the nurses in the service of the United States Army abroad would constitute gross neglect, and accordingly it would be the duty of the Grand Jury to call upon the proper authorities to take the requisite and necessary steps to correct such evil condition, &c."

Story Fully Disproved.

The investigation of the report, the Grand Jury adds, shows "that the said Dr. Emma B. Culbertson on Jan. 17, 1918, publicly made a statement at Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., in substance and effect that it was a matter of common knowledge that 200 beds had been reserved in the Sloane Maternity Hospital, New York City, for Red Cross nurses who were returning from France and expecting immediate confinement, which statement was absolutely disproved by the authorities of that hospital; that said Emma B. Culbertson had absolutely no knowledge or information upon which to base said statement, and that said statement was wholly and entirely without foundation, and does further present that no Red Cross nurse has returned to this country from foreign service in such condition.

"The Grand Jury further present that the said Emma B. Culbertson herself now believes that she has been misinformed as to the matters contained in the statement made by her and regrets that she has been a party to the dissemination of false statement.

"The Grand Jury further present that the said Emma B. Culbertson did not wilfully make said statement with the intent to interfere with the operation and success of the military and naval forces of the United States or to obstruct the American Red Cross in the recruiting or enlistment of nurses in the service of the United States."

Another story, which is also German propaganda, involved the mutilation and outraging of two young Belgian women. This was also found to be false from beginning to end.

"The Grand Jury," the presentment concludes, "further presents that it deplores the tendency shown by the public in general to give ready ear to and repeat stories and reports of a sensational and scandalous nature and character affecting the American Red Cross and its nurses, for the reason that such stories and reports not only seriously interfere with the recruiting of nurses for service abroad, but also have a tendency to create public distrust in the American Red Cross, and are detrimental to the many activities it is carrying on to alleviate the unspeakable condition due to the war."

Judge Hand Sounds Warning.

After the presentment was filed Judge Hand addressed the jury and made it plain that the time had come to handle in most drastic fashion persons who circulate such stories as those investigated by the jury. A person who repeats such stories, without investigating to ascertain the truth or falsity of them, Judge Hand added, should be held as making them wilfully and knowingly. After a reference to the remarks Miss Culbertson is alleged to have made at Vassar, Judge Hand continued:

"This statement, your presentment shows, or statements that are equivalent to it, have been circulated in various cities and towns throughout the United States; it indicates on its face some deliberate propaganda from some malevolent source that is inimical to our institutions.

"The Espionage act covers exactly this sort of thing unless it is innocent. If it is wilful and knowing, the Espionage act covers it, and a jury or Grand Jury is justified, in the absence of anything else, in inferring knowledge and wilfulness from lack of foundation and recklessness in the statements themselves.

"You have investigated this particular statement; I know the substantial and representative body of men that you are from this community, and I am not in any way suggesting that your presentment in regard to this particular matter and this particular physician is not correct. I am confident that you have satisfied yourselves that she did make this statement at Vassar College in good faith, but in future matters which come to your attention, I will remind you that where the statement is utterly reckless, and proves to be utterly without foundation, in the absence of any adequate explanation on the part of the person making such statement, it would be justifiable to find that it was wilful and knowing. A statement like this, which, after investigation, you have found was utterly without foundation; which, after the reports and testimony of representatives of the Sloane Maternity Hospital, you have found had not a scintilla of evidence back of it, is a thing to be deprecated and severely censured by the court.

"That a person should come to a place which is a seminary, a college for the education of young women who are eager, many of them, to go abroad to act as nurses for the Red Cross, and circulate such a fabranied statement as this in the presence of these young women, that would alarm the authorities of the college, that would discourage their enlistment as nurses, is a most reprehensible and disgraceful thing."

Time for Tolerance to End.

"The American people have been very tolerant in these matters, and I think it is greatly to their credit that they have, but the time has certainly come when people who utter falsehoods, make statements without the slightest foundation which they have picked up on the curbstone in the street and then give them out in some public place, not knowing whether they are true or not, and choosing to believe them or give them out either for notoriety or for some reason which we cannot fathom, the time has certainly come when those people are going to be held responsible by juries in our courts of law.

"The juries have been tolerant in the past because they did not want to believe evil of any one—but undoubtedly statements of this kind emanate from some source which is engaged in a deliberate and unfriendly propaganda, and it is certainly proper for the Court to say here that the people in this community and every other community ought to take warning and to remember that when men in this country are sacrificing their lives; when women are going to the front to act as nurses; when mothers are parting with their sons and wives with their husbands; when, as I saw up in Vermont the other day at a little college that I attended, about two-thirds of the senior class who were already engaged in military service, the least people can do who attempt to speak about matters relating to this war is to pay some kind of attention to the facts and to know what they are talking about, and not make statements and criticisms and spread wild rumors that are utterly unfounded in a perfectly irresponsible way. If they do it in the future they may expect indictments and they may expect trials, and they may be pretty certain of conviction."

Dr. Culbertson's Explanation.

BOSTON, Mass., May 9.—Dr. Emma B. Culbertson of this city, mentioned in connection with a Federal Grand Jury investigation in New York of statements alleged to be detrimental to the Red Cross, said today that she had made no address at Vassar College, but that she had conferred with Dr. Henry N. MacCracken, President of Vassar, for the purpose of obtaining official denial of stories which had repeatedly come to her attention.

"My only idea in going to Dr. MacCracken," said Dr. Culbertson, "was that I believed some official denial should be made of the many rumors in order that parents might be reassured."

Dr. Culbertson said later she appeared before the Grand Jury and gave information regarding the source of these reports, which she believed to be German propaganda.

'THE KISS BURGLAR' IS ON FOR A RUN

Music and Comedy After the Viennese Model, with American Setting.

FAY BAINTER BURGLARIZED

An Exquisitely Fresh and Dainty Performance Seems Booked for the Summer.

THE KISS BURGLAR—A musical comedy in two acts. Book and lyrics by Glen MacDonough. Music by Raymond Hubbell. At the George M. Cohan Theatre.

Fay Bainter, who was last seen here as the dual heroine of "The Willow Tree," returned to musical comedy last night and developed a repertory of graces that is likely to carry "The Kiss Burglar" throughout the Summer. A very rare personality, this: She has no particularly striking beauty, perhaps, and no great single talent; but she has a freshness of feeling and a daintiness of charm that surround her like an atmosphere and win their way by an almost instant magic throughout the audience. With no voice to speak of, Miss Bainter sings the purest music; with no great virtuosity in dancing, she somehow manages to set the dance rhythms leaping in every pulse, and with no considerable equipment in the technique of acting she conveys the effect of the subtlest comedy and the most ingenuous, stirring romance.

Her present vehicle is in many ways admirable, and is a very considerable factor in the happy result. No antecedent liabilities are acknowledged in the program, yet the book and much of the music have a dominant Viennese character that can scarcely be accidental. The very title suggests the manner, and not too pleasantly, of the gentle Austrian sensuousness mingled with Continental comedy.

The burglar is an American, who, while in Trieste, got into a gambling quarrel and found refuge in the boudoir of a Grand Duchess. There, instead of the jewels she tremblingly offered him, he took only a kiss or two and left her. But the memory of the moment lingers in the lives of both, and is renewed in our American midst, where the Duchess has found refuge from the war.

What one sees on the stage is mainly an amusing travesty of the incident. For the purposes of society publicity a press agent stages what is in effect a travesty of the kiss-burgling. Denman Maley enters the Duchess's boudoir "atop" a Fifth Avenue "mansion" as a pretended thief, and carries the scene with much excellent fooling. The Duchess, on her part, is thrilled at what she takes for a repetition of the romance in Trieste, and her ingenuous frankness and freshness of feeling mingle with Mr. Maley's matter-of-fact demeanor in an effect of delicious romance and hearty laughter.

Later the original "burglar" of Trieste (Armand Kalisz) is encountered in a Berkshire inn, where real "inside men" are at work, and the love of the enamored Duchess is mingled with the conviction that he is really a thief. Here a situation rich in potentialities is handled by the librettist with less skill; yet, thanks to Miss Bainter's charm, the effect is sufficient to carry the play to an adequate conclusion.

Much of the music and several of the songs had a touch of real Viennese quality. One of them was an excellent travesty of the manner in which John Philip Sousa, Victor Herbert, and George M. Cohan, respectively, would pay their musical compliments to the American Beauty rose. Several of the young women in the support were pretty and graceful, and the dancing of Dore and Cavanaugh was of very high quality.

But the mainstay of the production was the slender genius of Miss Bainter, which achieved its most memorable results in combination of the rarely artistic fooling of Denman Maley.

Germans Revive 'The Beggar Student'

A post-season series of operettas, which the German players at the Irving Place Theatre will present, began last night with the revival of "Der Bettelstudent," ("The Beggar Student.") The guest star on this occasion was Otto Goritz, who had the assistance of many members of the erstwhile German chorus of the Metropolitan Opera House. Other principal rôles were sung by Kathryn Lynbrook, Else Kentner, Harlet Behnee, Ludwig Eybisch, and Hanns Unterkircher. The piece is one of the best-known operettas of the German stage.

Adolph Klauber to be a Producer.

Adolph Klauber, it is announced, is about to enter the theatrical field as an independent producer. His first offering will be a comedy by Arnold Bennett, which will be given a preliminary production in Washington in July. Mr. Klauber will also make a number of productions in association with the Selwyns.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Willard Mack has withdrawn from the cast of "Tiger Rose" and is now head of the scenario department of Goldwyn films. He is also the organizer of the Pauline Frederick Feature Film Company, whose pictures will be handled by the Goldwyn concern.

"The Liberty Gun," by Robert Mears Mackay and Victor Mapes, has been placed in rehearsal by the Shuberts. Among those in the cast are Robert Edeson, Malcolm Duncan, Henry Kolker, Lyster Chambers, Edwin Holland, Katherine Grey, and Millicent Evans. Frederick Stanhope is staging the piece.

The musical version of "The Melting of Molly," in which Florence Nash will be featured, will open in Wilmington next Monday night and will be brought into New York about two weeks later. The piece is based on Maria Thomson Davies's story and has been turned into a musical play by Dorothy Donnelly, Harold Orlob, and Sigmund Romberg.

The new Winchell Smith-John L. Golden production, "Three Wise Men," now playing in Washington, will be acted at a special performance at Stamford a week from Saturday night so that the performance can be witnessed by Mr. Smith, who is recovering from an eye affliction at his home near Stamford.

The entire Hippodrome organization will be reassembled on Wednesday of next week to assist in the selling of tickets for the War Thrift concert to be given at the Polo Grounds on June 2. The Hippodrome will close this week.

The auction sale of seats for the New York performances of "Out There" in aid of the Red Cross will take place at the Liberty Theatre at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. The performances will be given at the Century Theatre on May 17 and 18.

LABOR PLEADS FOR IRELAND

Trades Union Congress Urges Government Not to Enforce Draft.

LONDON, May 9.—A joint committee of the Trades Union Congress and the Labor Party has sent a strong appeal to the Government against enforcing conscription in Ireland. It says, in part:

"It must be clearly evident to the Government that an attempt to enforce conscription would mean not only the shedding of blood of thousands of Irishmen, Englishmen, and Scotchmen, but also the maintenance of a huge permanent army of occupation in Ireland. Today, every soldier is needed on the Western front, yet the Government is proposing a course which will involve the withdrawal of hundreds of thousands of soldiers to engage in a civil war which will outrage the conscience of the civilized world.

"Moreover, Irishmen are scattered over the wide world—in America, and in the dominions of Great Britain itself—besides large numbers on the Western front. The tragedy cannot be local or confined to Ireland. It may easily be the beginning of a world tragedy in which our last hopes of a fairer future will be extinguished * * *.

"With all these facts and terrible anticipations in mind, we confidently appeal to the Government to immediately take the necessary steps to avert the appalling disaster which now threatens."

ANTI-DRAFT CONFERENCE.

Irish Leaders Hold Meeting in Dublin—Fund Now $300,000.

DUBLIN, May 9.—An anti-conscription conference was held today at the Mansion House, John Dillon, Professor Edward De Valera, and other leaders being present. Arrangements were made for the administration of the anti-conscription fund, which will be in charge of local committees representing all sections. It was ordered that 10 per cent. of the money raised should be sent to Dublin for central purposes, and the whole fund was declared to be under the control of the conference for administration impartially irrespective of party or religious belief.

The Lord Mayor has not yet received his passport to America.

It is reported that the anti-conscription fund has reached £60,000, although only 174 of the 1,115 parishes have as yet sent their first installments.

DELAYS HOME RULE BILL.

Will Not Be Introduced Until Whitsuntide, Says Bonar Law.

LONDON, May 9.—Andrew Bonar Law, speaking for the Government in the House of Commons, announced today that the Home Rule bill would not be introduced before Whitsuntide (week of May 19.)

DEGAS'S PAINTINGS SOLD.

5,600,000 Francs Realized at Auction in Paris.

PARIS, May 9.—More than 5,600,000 francs was realized from the sale, by order of the executors of the late Hilaire G. E. Degas, the noted painter, of his paintings, pastels, and drawings. M. Degas, who portrayed various phases of Parisian life, died last September.

The paintings offered represented the accumulation of many years, for M. Degas could rarely be induced to sell his own works. It was feared that the simultaneous sale of so many pieces and the imposition of luxury taxes would keep the prices down, but the salesroom was crowded during all three days of the sale. The principal collectors and dealers bid spiritedly, and even slight sketches fetched several thousand francs apiece.

A portrait group of Degas and his own family was bought by the Government by arrangement for 300,000 francs. Another picture, representing two girls practicing a duet, was sold for 100,000 francs, the buyer of which was reported to be the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York.

An American woman residing in France sold her pearl necklace in order to buy a characteristic picture of four dancers for 132,000 francs. The pastels averaged 25,000 francs each.

DEPLORES OUR STAND.

Costa Rican Congress Expresses Regret Over Our Attitude Toward It.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, May 9.—The Costa Rican Congress, by a vote of 28 to 3, has voted confidence in the Government of President Tinoco, and at the same time passed a resolution expressing regret at the attitude of the American Government toward Costa Rica. The resolution declares that Congress is surprised at the contradiction between the democratic aims of the United States in the war and its attitude toward a small republic.

The Tinoco Government in Costa Rica came into power in January, 1917, after the deposition of President Gonzalez. In the following month it was stated in Washington that the United States would not recognize the Government and there has been no change in the American attitude, despite Costa Rica's efforts to gain recognition. A special envoy sent to Washington was not received last July. In September Costa Rica severed diplomatic relations with Germany.

CITY BREVITIES.

The Edison Medal will be presented to Colonel John Joseph Carty by the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at the Engineering Societies Building, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street, on May 17 at 8:30 P. M., instead of on May 10, as announced.

Raymond Ryerson, 16 years old, of 510 Third Street, Brooklyn, who had been engaged as a messenger by the Guaranty Trust Company, 140 Broadway, was instantly killed yesterday as he was being shown about the building.

George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, will speak on "Public Opinion" at the forum of the Church of the Ascension, Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street, next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Kehillah has just published The Jewish Communal Register, which gives some interesting facts regarding the Jews in New York. The book is being used to assist the organization in its membership campaign and as a help in the forming of district Kehillahs in every part of the city.

The School of Architecture at Columbia University has 145 alumni and undergraduates in the war service of the United States, it was announced yesterday. The largest number, eighty-seven, are in the United States Army.

Police Lieutenant Hugh Canlon completed his thirty-fifth year on the New York City police force yesterday and on his own application was retired on half pay.

At the annual meeting of the New York County Lawyers Association at the Hotel Astor last night it was announced that 130 of the members were now engaged in war service and that in a room at the association's quarters, at 165 Broadway, $750,000 in Liberty bonds were sold. Morgan J. O'Brien was re-elected President.

Major Boehm Describes Official Photographs Sent in Aid of War Memorials Fund.

NOTABLE SCENES DEPICTED

Portray Somme Battlefield, German Barrage, Bursting Poison Shells, and Tank in Action.

The thrills of the battlefield in Flanders are portrayed in vivid detail by a series of official Canadian war photographs now on exhibition at Lord & Taylor's. Major M. S. Boehm of the 169th Battalion, Canadian Infantry, the officer in charge of the exhibition, yesterday described the action that took place at every scene pictured. The pictures have been sent here in the interest of the Canadian War Memorials Fund.

The crowd at the exhibition yesterday followed the Major with earnest attention as he gave the history of each photograph from the picture of the desolate Somme battlefield, where "1,600,000 soldiers, Germans and Allies, were killed," to the photograph of the little dog found lying griefstricken on the breast of a dead German officer, and finally adopted by a Canadian company.

So clear are the pictures—they are many of them greatly enlarged—that Major Boehm said that when they were shown in Canada many persons recognized sons and brothers, fathers and sweethearts, who had been absent from home since the war began.

One of the pictures showed a truck full of laughing Canadians returning from a successful tour in the trenches, each man with some part of German equipment he had captured. The most prominent face in the picture, and the most light hearted apparently, was a Sergeant of middle age who held in his arms a Prussian helmet, a bayonet and water bottle. This man, Major Boehm explained, had been killed two days after the picture in question was taken. He said that when it was shown in Canada he noticed three little girls standing in front sobbing. They proved to be the three daughters of the dead man.

The pictures were taken by Captain Ivor Castle, the official Canadian photographer, and many of them, Major Boehm said, were taken at the imminent risk of the Captain's life. There was one picture of a German barrage, another of the bursting of two gas shells depicting the clouds of poison being slowly disseminated toward the allied trenches. Another showed a tank in action.

Go Over the Top Laughing.

Perhaps the most vivid picture in the whole collection showed the men of the 20th Canadian Battalion going over the top at Courcelette on the Somme in 1916. The picture was taken, according to the Major, from a shell hole out in No Man's Land just in front of the Canadian trench from which the attackers came. The men, resembling in the picture college football players going down the field under a kickoff, are nearly all smiling happily, though one or two have looks of grim resolve as though they were going through with that charge or were going to die in the attempt. Some very clear pictures of German prisoners captured by the Canadians were shown.

The pictures of the wounded were especially affecting, and in this connection Major Boehm said that the British Tommy labels his wounds which give him the privilege of a trip home under three heads, a "blighty," a "nice blighty," and a "beautiful blighty." The first generally means the loss of a limb or some other permanent injury, the second the loss of an eye or a hand, and the last a mere flesh wound. The number of blinded, the Major said, has been surprisingly small. Out of 150,000 Canadian casualties, there have been only thirty-five cases of total blindness."

Some of the pictures showed the terrible devastation which German soldiers carried out under orders of the high command before falling back last year. Major Boehm said that he had entered a village behind the Germans and that literally it could not be told which was the store and which the dwelling place. You couldn't distinguish, he said, between a butcher's shop and a blacksmith's. Every single bit of property had been looted and carried away by the Huns.

Major Boehm said that the Allies looked to America to furnish the man power, and he declared that an American force of at least 4,000,000 men would have to be sent to France before we could win.

To Try Mt. Vernon Mayoralty Contest.

WHITE PLAINS, May 9.—Supreme Court Justice Seeger today granted a motion of ex-Mayor Edwin W. Fiske of Mount Vernon to amend his complaint in the quo warranto proceedings he has brought against Mayor W. Edward F. Brush of Mount Vernon, in which he asserted that Mr. Brush was not legally elected to the Mayoralty, and the contest over the election will take place in the Supreme Court during the June term. When Mayor Brush was inducted into office Mr. Fiske contended that on the face of the returns he had defeated Brush by one vote, but now he says he will prove that he was elected by at least six majority.

Anna Held Is Much Better.

Anna Held was able to sit up for more than twenty minutes yesterday in her apartments in the Hotel Savoy after she had taken a meal of solid food, and last night there was every indication of a marked improvement in her condition, it was said at the hotel.

HITCHCOCK IS CHAIRMAN.

Selected to Head Foreign Relations Committee of Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The Steering Committee of the Senate today agreed upon Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska as the new Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations vacated through the death of Senator Stone of Missouri. This decision gives the chairmanship to the ranking Democratic member and conforms to unbroken precedent.

Because of opposition to Senator Hitchcock, due to his early attitude on the war, Administration Democrats on the committee had talked of backing Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi for the chairmanship. This evoked a threat from several Democrats to unite with Republicans upon Senator Lodge of Massachusetts. The selection of Senator Hitchcock ends further contest over this point. The Steering Committee selection of Senator Hitchcock is subject to approval of the Senate. This will be forthcoming.

The Steering Committee picked Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois to be a member of the Finance Committee, vice Senator Stone. Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia was selected for the vacancy on the Military Affairs Committee caused by the death of Senator Brady of Idaho. Senator Robinson of Arkansas was selected to be a member of the Foreign Relations Committee. The chairmanship of the Philippines Committee, vacated by Senator Hitchcock, is as yet unfilled. Senator Reed of Missouri declined to accept it.

BROKER KILLED IN AUTO.

Clarence McEwan Hits Another Car While Driving in Greenwich.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., May 9.—Clarence McEwan, a member of the New York Cotton Exchange, living at 2,765 Broadway, was killed tonight, and George A. Finn, who was with him, was perhaps fatally injured, when the automobile in which McEwan was riding collided with a car driven by William Graham, head gardener on the estate of E. P. Converse.

The car which McEwan was driving was bound toward New York. Graham was coming in the opposite direction. The cars crashed near the reservoir on Upper North Eighth Street, the broker's motor striking the car driven by Graham a glancing blow. It veered off the road, went through a small stone wall, struck a tree and was overturned. McEwan died on the way to the hospital. In the car with Graham were his wife and two children. They were not injured.

SALVATIONISTS GET $71,000.

Army's Campaign for $250,000 Goes On with Vigor.

The Salvation Army drive for $250,000 for war work, the quota of the National War Fund that New York is expected to raise, was continued yesterday with increased vigor, and last night it was reported that $71,000 had been raised. Hand organs made lively music on a hundred or more street corners, while the Army girls rattled their tambories or strong-lunged officers called attention to the fact that the Salvation Army was in need of money to help the boys over there.

Salvation Army officers invaded the Stock Exchange yesterday. Two booths have been erected at the Exchange, and they are in charge of Major Urshall. Within an hour $200 had been collected and the Major was assured that a committee of members would canvass the Exchange and the building for the benefit of the war chest.

The largest donations received yesterday were: Bankers Trust Company, $2,500; James A. Hearn & Son, $1,000; Barnard Baruch, $1,000, and Cleveland H. Dodge, $500.

BILLY SUNDAY SETTLES SUIT

Man Who Says He Wrote Evangelist's Book Drops Action.

On the applications of the attorneys for the Rev. William A. Sunday, the evangelist, Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum signed an order yesterday discontinuing the suit brought against him by Hugh C. Weir for $50,000 damages for breach of a contract under which Weir alleged he wrote "Great Love Stories of the Bible" under Sunday's name, and was to have written other books in collaboration with the evangelist. Miss Lucile Pugh, attorney for Weir, who consented to the discontinuance, declined to discuss the terms of the settlement.

SUES SENATOR LODGE.

Pacifist Who Says He Was Assaulted Asks $20,000 Damages.

BOSTON, May 9.—Alexander Bannwart, formerly a professional baseball player, filed suit here today for $20,000 damages against Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, with whom he had an encounter in Washington in April, 1917.

With a delegation of pacifists Bannwart summoned Senator Lodge from his office in the Capitol into the corridor, where he urged him to vote against a declaration of war. After a heated argument there was a scuffle and Bannwart, in his complaint, alleges that he was assaulted by the Senator. He also complains that Senator Lodge subsequently caused him to be arrested and locked up, and still later made libelous statements concerning him.

FOUND NEW COLLEGE; FACULTY TO CONTROL

Institution to be Devoted to Political Science Will Minimize Administrative Features.

ENDOWMENT FUND RAISED

Teaching Force Will Elect the Trustees and Engage and Dismiss Its Own Members.

The foundation in New York of a new college of political science, to be carried on with as little administrative machinery as possible and with the professors in full control of everything, even to the election of the Board of Trustees, was announced in yesterday's issue of The Nation. Among the founders of the new organization are Winston Churchill, the novelist; Herbert Croly, editor of The New Republic, and Mrs. Willard D. Straight. An endowment fund of $150,000 a year is to be provided, most of which it is said has already been obtained, and of this "90 per cent. is to be spent on brains and 10 per cent. on administration."

The Nation, which calls this "a profoundly important and fascinating educational experiment," says that "the Faculty will elect the Board of Trustees and will also appoint and dismiss its own members. While the school will have a Secretary to attend to registration and collect fees, the usual administrative machinery will be reduced to the vanishing point."

Corporation management and control, labor organization, city, State and national administration, will be included in the field of the new college. "There are," said the announcement, "to be no formal 'departments' within the college, and all courses of instruction are focussed upon the issues of current life. Instead of bending the world to suit the categories of the university, this institution proposes to adapt its instruction to the needs of the present situation.

"There will be seminars and other courses leading to degrees for specially equipped students; field work in public administration and commercial lines; special lectures by distinguished leaders of thought from abroad as opportunity offers; popular lectures at school and other centres for organized labor and others desiring information on current issues.

"It is likely that there may be no fixed curriculum; the courses as well as the lecturers may vary from year to year. Flexibility, adaptation, freedom, experiment, approach from the angle of social need, not of rigidly organized and classified intellectual formulas, are to be the marks of the instruction. It is planned that the program of study shall include modern history, social, political, commercial, and individual; political and commercial geography; international relations; political economy, finance, statistics; labor organization and management; modern social management; public law, jurisprudence, government, administration, and public service; women in the modern social order; anthropology and psychology."

CHARITIES CONVENTION ENDS

Judge F. A. Hoyt Elected President of New York Conference.

The ninth annual convention of the New York City Conference of Charities and Correction ended in Yonkers yesterday with the election of officers. Judge Franklin A. Hoyt of the Children's Court was elected President, William Church Osborn, First Vice President; Samuel Rabinowitz, Second Vice President; George J. Gillespie, Third Vice President; Charles Loring Brace, Treasurer, and George C. Rowell, Secretary. The committee will be under the following persons: Alexander McKinney, Chairman of the Delinquency Committee; Aaron E. Nussbaum, Chairman of the Children's Committee; Miss Jessie M. Hixon, Chairman of the Committee on Families; John A. Fitch, Chairman of the Committee on War Labor Program; Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Chairman of the Committee on Public Health, and Miss Mary E. Timney.

The members of the Executive Committee will be John B. Prest, Mrs. Helen Ingram, Louis L. Firusky, Edwin J. Cooley, Mrs. F. McKee Smith, Edmond J. Butler, Robert W. Hebberd, Cyrus L. Sulzberger, Dr. O. F. Lewis, Morris D. Waldman, Thomas W. Hynes, and Robert J. Wilkins.

OPPOSE GERMAN IN SCHOOLS

Union League Club Also Against Towner Bill Passed at Albany.

Resolutions were passed last night at the regular meeting of the members of the Union League Club, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street, condemning the teaching of the German language in the public schools and the publishing of newspapers in German in this country, and protesting against the Towner bill for the liquidation of branches of enemy insurance companies in this country, which is now before Governor Whitman.

The resolution protesting against the Towner bill states that the club is against the bill as affording opportunity for enemy interests to regain control of their insurance systems during the war. The resolution regarding the German language asserts that the club regards instruction in German and the publishing of German newspapers as subversive of loyalty to the United States. Copies of this resolution will be sent to President Wilson, Governor Whitman, and Mayor Hylan.

Officer Killed in Airplane Fall.

LAWTON, Okla., May 9.—Lieutenant George Sherman, student officer at Post Field School for Aerial Observers, was killed late today when an army airplane in which he was making a flight fell 300 feet. The pilot of the machine was only slightly injured.

AIR MAIL SERVICE TO BEGIN ON MAY 15

Plans Completed for First Trips by Airplanes Between Washington and Belmont Park.

Weather permitting the air mail service between New York and Washington will positively begin on May 15 it was announced yesterday by Postmaster Thomas G. Patten of this city. The service will be opened by an airplane leaving Belmont Park at 11:30 A. M., and another one leaving the Polo Grounds in Washington at the same time. The trip each way is expected to take three hours.

An arrangement has been made by Postmaster Patten with the Long Island Railroad to take the mail for the air service by a special train to Belmont Park in twenty-five minutes. No mail will be accepted for this service after 10:30 A. M., Postmaster Patten said, and the mail will leave the Post Office promptly at 11 A. M. daily.

The airplane from Washington is due to arrive at Belmont Park at 2:30 P. M., and the mail will be in the main Post Office at 3 o'clock. When the mail arrives on time it will be delivered by the regular carriers, but when it arrives too late for the regular deliveries it will be sent by special messenger.

The first mail to Washington on Wednesday will carry among the packages two copies of Secretary Baker's book, "Frontiers of Freedom," to President Wilson and Postmaster General Burleson. In the mail from Washington will be the first special stamp for the air postal service which will be auctioned for the benefit of the Red Cross. The stamp which will be inclosed in a letter to Noah W. Taussig of 111 Wall Street will be canceled and will bear the autograph of President Wilson.

Until the special twenty-four-cent stamps are ready for sale regular stamps may be used. In a few days announcement will be made by Postmaster Patten as to where mail may be deposited for the air service. Parcels will be carried at the rate of 24 cents an ounce, provided they do not measure more than thirty inches in any dimension.

Postmaster Patten, Mayor Hylan, and several officials of the Federal Government will be present at the inauguration of the service at Belmont Park, it was said.

REVOKE GROCERS' LICENSE.

Servus Company Forbidden to Deal in Groceries for Duration of War.

The Federal Food Board yesterday revoked the license of the Servus Trading Company, 114 Hudson Street, for the period of the war, and ordered that the firm's officers, Joseph Blaustein, President; Otis J. de Valler, Vice President; Alexander Bernstein, Treasurer, and Jesse Markel, Secretary, be forbidden to trade in groceries for the same period. The decision was handed down after the complaint of Dr. H. H. Rickards of Ridgely, Md., who sold a carload of yellow meal to the Servus Company on March 25, had been investigated. The physician charged that the company refused to accept the meal on its arrival in New York because the market price had declined.

P. A. Johann, head of the Bureau of Complaints of the Federal Food Board, yesterday recommended that the license of Israel Moses, a baker of 1,919 Second Avenue, be revoked for the period of the war, and that no application for a license be granted to his son, Solomon Moses. Moses, it was brought out, had been ordered to close his bakery for three days for violating the wheat substitute regulation. He closed his place at 1,919 Second Avenue during the three days, but opened another store at 1,923 Second Avenue, which was conducted by his son under the Government license which had been issued to the father.

Chris. Isserman, a wholesale grocer of Greenpoint, L. I., must invest $1,000 in Liberty bonds and contribute $100 to the American Red Cross for overcharging in sugar and flour sales.

Marie Cahill in a New Comedy.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, May 9.—Marie Cahill appeared at the Apollo Theatre tonight in the first performance of a new comedy, "Just Around the Corner," written for her by George V. Hobart and Herbert Hall Winslow. The play describes the adventures of a New York girl who has lost her fortune and goes to a small town to run a country store.

PUTS OFF SENATE VOTE ON SUFFRAGE QUESTION

Action Taken When Canvass Discloses Lack of Support for the Federal Amendment.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Senate action on the House resolution proposing submission to the States of an equal suffrage amendment to the Federal Constitution has been postponed indefinitely because a canvass of the members showed that supporters of the resolution number two less than the two-thirds vote necessary for its adoption.

This amendment was made today by Senator Jones of New Mexico, Chairman of the Senate Woman Suffrage Committee, after he had stated in the Senate that the resolution would not be called up tomorrow as planned. He added that formal notice of the indefinite postponement would be given in the Senate tomorrow.

Senator Jones said there was no indication when the resolution would be called up, but declared that no effort would be made to do so until there were assurances of sufficient votes to pass it. With Congress planning to adjourn July 1, some Senators believed that the resolution would not come to a vote at this session.

Army Deserter a German Subject.

After it had been discovered that he was a German born in Bavaria, Frederick Smith, a deserter who had pleaded guilty yesterday to charge of robbery before Judge Doherty, in the Hudson County Court, Jersey City, broke from his guards on the way from the court to the county jail. After a chase of several blocks he was caught. District Attorney George Vickers learned on cross-examination of Smith that he had arrived in America from Bavaria only a year ago, and after failing in an attempt to enlist in Hoboken, was successful in New York and was sent to Fort Oglethorpe. He deserted from his regiment there last February, and came to Hoboken, where he robbed Paul Albert of 152 Second Street in the Hoboken Hotel.

NEARLY THREE TO ONE.

There is not the least doubt that a feeling of disquiet was excited in the United States by the news that General MAURICE's charges might precipitate a change of Government in England, and that there is a strong feeling of relief over the fact that the change has been averted by the thoroughly satisfactory vote of nearly three to one. The battle is still going on, the battle that we began by calling "the battle of Picardy," and changed to "the battle of Flanders and Picardy," and which we may have to call "the battle of Europe" or "the battle of 1918" before we get through, if we are to find any title that is adequate to its size. It is the battle of Magna Charta and the Declaration of Independence and the Rights of Man against the Dark Ages, fought out now in one gigantic struggle; it is four years of agony brought to a sudden climax. At this moment, when there is need for the tensest concentration against the foe, it was deeply disturbing to have thrust before us the prospect that England might be guilty of the levity of changing commanders for mere party reasons. It is not so, and the common cause has escaped a peril.

The overthrow of Mr. LLOYD GEORGE, if it had been accomplished, would have been accomplished in part because of dissatisfaction with the unification of the allied armies under General FOCH. That would have been only one of the causes; but the inevitable result of the overthrow would have been a feeling of doubt as to how far that unification would be permitted to go, how long it would be allowed to last. The effect of this on the military operations would have been to create irresolution and uncertainty. The overthrow would have been accomplished in part by the desire of other political parties to hold office; and if it had been accomplished the armies would have been inevitably influenced by the knowledge of what Mr. GEORGE's successors stood for. They would have known that these successors are, to say the least, no more skilled in conducting a war than is the present Ministry; they would have remembered failures which were certainly greater than any for which Mr. LLOYD GEORGE can be blamed, and they would not have found their tranquillity increased by the knowledge.

We all know one thing with certainty about LLOYD GEORGE and his associates. We know that they cannot be hoodwinked or played upon by bogus peace offers, that they are firm and resolute in the face of insidious approaches of pacifism. It is of the highest importance that every one of the allied Governments should be above suspicion in that respect, in view of the dangerous "peace offensive" which Germany is about to open. We do not know so much about the men who would have succeeded Mr. GEORGE if he had been overthrown yesterday; and the feeling of uncertainty which would have resulted would have been most unfortunate at this trying time.

It is earnestly to be hoped that the Allies have seen the last, until the present battle is over, of attempts to unhorse the Lloyd George Ministry. We have heard a great deal about the defects of democracy in wartime, and each of the democratic nations has been illustrating its own defects in its own peculiar way. In peace times we often hear much about the superiority of the English political system to ours. In time of war it may be doubted if the English system has so much to boast of. Our system is based on the belief that it is not wise to swap horses while crossing a stream. Suppose that at every stage of the war, at each new complaint that is made about shortcomings in Washington, President WILSON had to appear before Congress and show cause why he should not be deprived of his office overnight. He has no very easy task as it is; it can be imagined how much harder it would be in such a case. It can be imagined how much of the energy which should be devoted to fighting the German would have to be spent in protecting himself against this constantly recurring threat of dismissal. It is "too unwashed a way," as CARLYLE would have said, of dealing with a man who has on his shoulders the vast responsibilities of such a war as this.

It is to the credit of Mr. LLOYD GEORGE's opponents that they have not shown themselves impatient to take advantage of this power of threatening an overturn. But, unless he shows incompetency for the conduct of the war, the menace should not be invoked at all. The English cannot, at this time, think of their party politics as a thing affecting themselves alone; it affects all their allies, it affects the world. The overthrow of LLOYD GEORGE would have been received here with something like dismay, and probably it would have had some such effect in France, coming so soon after he had figured in that unification of the forces which the French and ourselves had so long and urgently desired. This realization of the larger aspects, the world aspects, of their political affairs has undoubtedly had its effect on the English mind. That vote of three to one cleared the air and served well the common cause; it has given confidence and new strength to England's allies. And it must have that effect on the English people; for we do not believe that Mr. STANTON, the Labor member, spoke for himself alone when he interrupted Mr. ASQUITH's question, "What is the alternative?" by the retort: "Get on with the war!" That is, indeed, the heart of the matter; and if that spirit animates the English people, as we believe it does, we shall hear no more of attempts to unhorse a Coalition Ministry for the purpose of bringing in a Liberal or Radical one, or of overthrowing any Ministry whatever over a question of veracity or mistakes of fact.

PRACTICING UPON FISHERMEN.

A few days before Holland reached an agreement with Germany concerning the transportation of sand and gravel, German airplanes were attacking Dutch fishing boats with machine guns. Twenty-four hours before tension at The Hague was relaxed, five victims of these assaults at sea were rescued and landed at a British port. In some way they had avoided the bullets from four airplanes. Their story was confirmed by the condition of their small vessel, which was found several hours later. When news of his airmen's attempt to kill these neutral and harmless fishermen came to the Kaiser, he may have repeated these words from one of his public addresses: "The "God of Battles directed. We have "been His instruments and are proud "of it."

Will Holland send a protest to Berlin? This is not the first time her fishermen have suffered from German attack. Some time ago fishing vessels a few miles from her coast were sunk, and men working on them were killed, by a German gunboat. The public has not been informed that Holland complained to the German Government about this. Probably any protest would have been curtly dismissed at Berlin. German gunners must be permitted to become expert by practice, even upon neutral fishermen. But the Dutch Government must realize that without a formal complaint the official record will be incomplete.

THE RAILROAD WAGE QUESTION.

The report of the Railroad Wage Commission is admirable in performance and startling in result. It ranges all the way between the highest and lowest classes of two million workers, and attempts to do justice to each. The relation of wages is even more difficult to appraise than the relation of rates. The Interstate Commission has been baffled by the relation between the services to the common needs of goods of various sorts from many competing sections and markets. It was not possible to touch a rate without arraying interest against interest, and obstacles to justice which baffled the railways baffled also their regulators. The problem referred to the Railroad Wage Commission is economically of the same nature, and is complicated with a human element. The wage question is affected by ethics as well as by economics, and the treatment of the board is more human and humane than by either the railways or their wage earners. The railways have suffered in dividends, but also they have earned dividends by wage economies. The railways have not treated the subject as justly as the board. They have yielded to the strong, and have overpaid as well as underpaid. The lawmakers conspicuously erred in this manner and matter. In fact there is nobody who has not shared in the acceptance and use of services unjustly requited, and who is not partly responsible for the results.

It is idle to apportion the blame with exactness. It is better and necessary to look ahead rather than behind. There are scandals and wrongs scattered all through railway history which should be neither forgotten nor condoned, but which it is idle to raise when the bill for them is laid at the door of the Director General. For the first time, the nation as a whole is dealing now with the railway question as a whole. It is no reproach to the Wage Board that it confines itself to the wage question. It was a reproach to the Interstate Commission that it dealt with the rate question as standing by itself. If the Commission had considered the whole question, there might have been no need of a Wage Board. Now the entire subject comes before the Director General. He is master of the relation of rates to each other, of the relation of wages to each other, and the relation of their relations to the common good of the entire country. The subject is rather simplified than complicated by the beginning of the new era. Hitherto the treatment has been partisan and irresponsible. The conflicting interests have used force rather than reason to support their contentions. Labor has preyed on labor as well as on capital. Capital has preyed on labor. The law has favored interests alternately. Equity was impossible so long as indivisible factors were dealt with individually, with no responsibility for results.

There are brighter lights in the picture, and the future is sure to be better than the past. It is necessary to remedy mistakes, and as a first step to recognize them by whomever made. As the board remarks, the railways themselves in two years had increased wages $350,000,000 per year, and confronted further demands or "an unfortunate series of labor disturbances." The danger was not from those treated most unjustly. There was no strike threat from the greatest sufferers, who now have a reward for their loyalty to country and employers in receiving the larger share of the hundreds of millions which are to be distributed on considerations of justice rather than what the board calls "strategic values" of an unethical and uneconomical division of the wages fund. There will be little attention to those who already have had increases, but who now are complaining in pitiless disregard of those worse off. The injustice of existing wage scales was so great that it was impossible to increase pay horizontally. The method adopted is an increase on a scale rising as the wages fall. The case is not one for rewarding some at the expense of others, nor yet of dealing exact justice to all. We have seen the results of excessive pursuit of ideals, of enactment of perfection, of following theories until confronted with conditions. We are a reasonable people, and therefore there will be no Bolshevism under the rule of reason and equity. We are on trial before the world as much as either Germany or Russia, and we shall acquit ourselves as true democrats. There will be no defeat of right by might because of jealousy of profits under present conditions, nor because of shirking labor when the reward is all that the case allows.

FIELD ARTILLERY PRODUCTION MUST BE SPEEDED.

The investigation of the production of field artillery, now the most important factor in modern warfare, was begun by a Senate Military Affairs Committee at the urgent solicitation of those who knew that things were not going well. Field guns, especially guns of large calibre, are not made in a day. That was understood even by the uninitiated. But it was believed that the Ordnance Bureau had lost no time in laying the foundations for the manufacture of pieces of all calibres, and was methodically and scientifically working on a program that called for the early production of light guns and for the turning out of the high-explosive guns with no more delay than the assembling of tools and machinery made necessary. A substantial appropriation was available several months before the United States declared war on Germany, and ordinary foresight should have warned the Ordnance Bureau that it must make plans for strengthening the artillery arm of the land forces.

After a year of war, a Senate subcommittee has learned that the production of field guns, even of the lighter kinds, has been "pitifully small" and that the prospect of the delivery in France this year of big guns is discouraging. There are some pertinent questions that may be asked in a spirit of constructive criticism. Have the manufacturers under contract received instructions from the Ordnance Bureau as to the tolerances which must be established before they can begin to make gauges for the adopted French 75, which is the best field gun in the world? By tolerance is meant the permissible range of departure of sizes from "unrealizable actual perfection." Have plants equipped to build the three-inch gun as long ago as last Summer received forgings in any quantity? With regard to the 75s, the drawings and specifications were on hand about the same time, and experts to help in construction were at the service of the Ordnance Bureau. Have they yet been supplied with all the tools to build these guns?

To return to our three-inch gun, an admirable piece which is rated very high, is not the manufacture of the carriages in a very backward state? It is, of course, an old story, for which there seems to be foundation, that months were wasted in trying to improve the recoil mechanism of the French 75s. What seems to be the fact is that the Ordnance Bureau has been straining after unattainable perfection in most, if not all, of its undertakings to get field guns made, in that respect rivaling the Signal Corps in its experiments with airplane motors and fabrics. Moreover, it seems to be true that the Ordnance Bureau, like the Signal Corps, has had no head for big business, and has therefore been overwhelmed by the complications of its task.

It is no answer to the charge of inefficiency and dilatoriness to say that the French and British were ready to supply artillery for a certain number of divisions if the United States would send over the men. The fact of the matter is, our allies had to produce the guns to get the men. It was a case of stern necessity, not of choice. Perhaps shift can be made in France to keep up the equipment of the stated number of divisions, but France and Great Britain cannot have too many guns of their own. In the present German offensive Great Britain's losses of artillery have been serious. France has also lost guns. Neither can spare more pieces for the use of the American Army. For the second half million of our troops, and for additional reinforcements, the United States must provide the field artillery. It cannot be done satisfactorily unless there is an acceleration of production like that which at last characterizes the shipbuilding industry. As Mr. SCHWAB is the man for the job in the shipyards, so must a Schwab be found for the gun plants.

THE GOOD, BEAUTIFUL, AND TRUE

Deep calls to deep, reformer to reformer. Those of us who venerate the direct primary and those of us who venerate prohibition do or should hear with an equal joy that Mr. GEORGE W. ALDRIDGE, the Sage of Monroe and one of our trustiest and best established and beloved Republican old school reformers, is "unequiv-"ocally in favor of and committed to "the renomination and re-election of "Governor WHITMAN."

Attorney General LEWIS comes from the Rochester Reservation. His refusal to be a candidate for renomination was taken by too many of the Whitmanians as a determination to run for Governor in the primaries. For a few hours gooseflesh spread among the faithful. Then Mr. ALDRIDGE, without professing to know whether Mr. LEWIS will invade the Republican primaries or not, renewed his allegiance to the Governor, and confidence was restored.

What chance would a Monroe County candidate have in the Monroe County Republican primaries against the will of Mr. ALDRIDGE, who graciously makes, anticipates, interprets that of the people? What chance in the Republican primaries of any county would any candidate have against Governor WHITMAN, the Darling Child of the Primary? It is strange that any Whitmanian could have had any fear as to Attorney General LEWIS. He is an able lawyer and a citizen of strong character and attractive qualities, but what would happen to him in a primary? Primaries are for those who know how to run them. The Governor and his associates in statesmanship possess that art. An anti-Whitmanian Republican wrote, in yesterday's TIMES, of > the incumbent of high office who is able by systematic and unscrupulous use of patronage and influence to bend the party organization to his will, and by so doing to gain a highly favored place in any primary contest.

This is most unjust. What did reformers like Mr. GEORGE W. ALDRIDGE and Mr. FRANCIS HENDRICKS, patron saints of Whitmanism, ever care for base respects of political patronage? They live for the good that they can do, and the primary exists for the good it can do good men like them and the Governor. It is wrong to talk of patronage in the political baker-and-fishmonger sense in connection with the Governor. His "specialty" is a loftier patronage, espousal with all the passion of his incandescent temperament of noble causes, not without full sheaves of votes, such as the direct primary, woman suffrage, and prohibition.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Wise Action Taken By the "Antis."

Nothing could have been more injudicious than for the women of the State who opposed the extension of the suffrage privilege to all adult citizens to have decided as a class that they would not exercise that privilege after it had been granted to the "pros" and imposed on the "antis." A few individual women, taking counsel of obstinacy and resentment instead of reason, did, indeed, refuse to vote when their first opportunity to do so came, but the intelligent majority realize that with privilege goes obligation, and that for them to refuse to go to the polls would simply be to give their late opponents added power and facilitate the success of influences considered by them dangerous and reprehensible.

It is in expression of the opinions and purposes of this intelligent majority that the Executive Committee of the Woman Voters' Anti-Suffrage Party has now made formal recognition of the fact that, for New York women, suffrage exists, and that it is, therefore the duty of every woman, not only to vote at every election, but to qualify herself for political action and efficiency by enrolling in whatever party she likes best—or dislikes least.

That is good advice, and the women who do not heed it—who sulkily refrain from participation in politics simply because they did not want the vote—should be made to understand, if possible, that thus they are playing into the hands, not of suffragists, as such, but the suffragists whose affiliations are of a kind to make certain that they will vote against public interests as known outside of radical circles. It is only by voting that the woman of conservative tendencies can assist in preventing or delaying further changes in the laws of the country to which she is still as much opposed as before she was enfranchised—the imposition, for instance, by constitutional amendment of woman suffrage on States that do not want it, or the triumph of socialistic ideas at a time when socialism, at least of the official party brand, is indistinguishable from pro-Germanism.

Possibly It Is Authentic.

Among the minstrel jokes of forty years ago, none was surer of "getting a laugh" than the one about what Brother Bones claimed to be a remarkable silver spoon, then in his possession. When the interlocutor, after the usual repetitious interchange of question and answer, had carefully prepared the audience for the "point" about to be made, Brother Bones informed him that the spoon was remarkable because it was found in New Orleans after the departure thence of BEN BUTLER.

If one were to accept as authentic the remarkable document given out by our Department of State as the translation of a warning distributed by German agents in Spain, the Kaiser's propagandists want the Spaniards to believe that the penalty for abandonment of neutrality is to have done in the country committing this error of judgment exactly what General BUTLER was charged with doing—pure slander, by the way—in the city where his rule was so bitterly resented. For among other loot proudly listed in the schedule of German acquisitions in Belgium are 1,876 silver spoons.

At first thought, that seems strangely few silver spoons to find in a land as rich as Belgium was before the war, but presumably—still assuming the authenticity of a document so highly guaranteed—all the other silver spoons had been sent over into Holland or France betimes, and the 1,876 were the poor pickings that remained. Anyhow, that is as plausible as that the Germans would prepare an elaborate list of their thefts—for even in war the taking of private property is theft—as well as of the number of churches they had destroyed and of the prisoners whom they had maltreated.

On general principles, and judging from human nature as commonly known, the Germans would not do a thing so stupid, and it seems almost certain that the State Department has been trapped into giving out as a German production what is really the work of an ironical and ingenious enemy of Germany. That decision, however, is not quite safe. Many another proof has been given that the workings of the German mind are different from those of other minds, and that an almost pathetic belief in the efficacy of "frightfulness"—in the possibility of frightening non-Teutonic peoples into submission—still exists in Germany. It may be, therefore, that this document really is of the origin ascribed to it, that its statistics are approximately correct, and that the Germans think the "lesson" it teaches will be heeded in Spain.

Vivisection Seen in Action.

It would be enlightening—perhaps—for the people who coerced the too easily persuaded Red Cross to withdraw an appropriation it had made for medical research to consider the news that the same surgeons whom they charged with cruel intentions toward animals are now engaged in finding out how to prevent "trench fever" among soldiers.

This is a serious and often fatal malady, as well as a most painful one, and to conquer it would be a triumph as great, probably, as was the victory over yellow fever, which was one of the beneficent consequences of our war with Spain. As in that case, so in this, the first effort has been to determine with definiteness and certainty the method by which the infection is acquired, and this information has again been acquired by exposing to it volunteer Americans who, in the interests of their fellows and of science, were willing to risk their lives.

Already the "carrier" has been discovered, and again it is an insect. Now will come the work of seeking to create immunity. It may be accomplished by establishing conditions in which the transmitting creature cannot live. On the other hand, it may involve the manufacture of a protective serum or anti-toxin, and if so there will presumably be resort to experiment with animals of one sort or another.

Thus what is called "vivisection" is in full action, and strange indeed must be the mind that judges it reprehensible—that does not accord gratitude and honor to the men who are practicing it.

ART NOTES.

An Exhibition for the Benefit of Blinded Soldiers.

At the Anderson Galleries is an exhibition of nearly eight hundred paintings, sculptures, and other works of art, which have been donated by American artists in all parts of the United States and in England and France to be sold for the benefit of the blinded soldiers, under the auspices of the Permanent Blind Relief War Fund. The artists realize with special keenness the horrible affliction of the blind, and have given wholeheartedly works of importance and dignified character. A number of the letters accompanying the contributions are printed in the catalogue, and all amount practically to the succinct comment of the painter who, "personally, would rather die than be blind."

The exhibition should be considered not as an occasion for criticism but as an opportunity to secure pleasant things, often of great merit, and at the same time to help one of the finest relief undertakings of the war. A number of the pictures are especially pertinent in theme to the cause for which they are given. Robert Henri, for example, sends a picture of a blind Spanish woman singing to the music of a guitar, a piece of vigorous realism, in which the beautiful workmanship counteracts to a certain degree the painful effect of the faithfully rendered type. Mr. Henri writes of it: "This picture is one in which I put my deepest feeling, and the painting is as well as anything I have done. In fact, I consider it one of my very best pictures. It has never been shown to the public because there are so few to sympathize with or understand a frank facing with the tragedy of blindness. My feeling at the time of the painting was to face it frankly, with all my heart and without sentimentality. Sentimentality is a protective mist, which life-slackers throw about themselves to obscure from their consciousness the reality—they wish to pity, but they do not wish to share the hurt."

The exhibition will be reviewed at a later date. The Executive Council of the committee are Harry W. Watrous, Chairman; Howard Russell Butler, William A. Coffin, Charles C. Curran, Daniel C. French, Francis C. Jones, Carman Messmore, Hobart Nichols, Chauncey F. Ryder, George H. Story, Robert W. Van Boskerck, and J. Alden Weir.

The Homing Mule.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Pages have been written setting forth the qualities of the United States Army mule, his infinite wisdom, patience, and endurance, but now he has shown a "homing instinct" second only to that of the carrier pigeon. It is well known that Germany had no mules of her own, and those which recently brought the letters across No Man's Land had the regular "U. S. A." stamped on their hoofs. The suggestion contained is this incident to the Quartermaster's Department is only too obvious.

THE MIKADO'S PROMISE.

Backed by the President, It Should Reassure the Russian People.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The correspondence between the Japanese Minister of Foreign Affairs, Baron Goto, and our own Secretary of State has been published at one of the most decisive moments of the world war. There is no time for long-winded discussions when hours, yea, minutes, are weighing heavily in the balance of fate.

If there are still in our midst "Germans" and pro-Germans, they may be shocked by my statement, but it remains nevertheless true that, for the present, at least, the united solemn signatures of William II., Charles I., Ferdinand I., and Mahmud V. under a State document would be greeted with a shrug of the shoulders and an ironical smile, while a word of the Mikado, a whisper of President Wilson are sure to find an echo in the hearts of all civilized peoples, and their promises are sure to be taken by the world at their face value.

The Bolsheviki are nervously clutching at the arms of their governmental fauteuils; Poland and the Ukraine are ready to join their Slavic brethren in an attempt to crush the German invader; the Slavs in Austria are seething with revolt; if the Hungarian Parliament should be dissolved, we may hear very soon interesting news from Budapest; in brief, now is the time for a Japanese Hannibal to begin his knocks at the doors of Berlin via Irkutsk, Petrograd, and Königsberg.

One sentence of reassurance as to his territorial disinterestedness from the Mikado, interpreted and indorsed by President Wilson, would set at rest all real inquietude of the Russian people. We allies have missed the psychological moment so often; we can really not afford to repeat the same.

WARNINGS FROM GERARD.

Some Interesting Extracts from the Ambassador's Private Letters.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It may be of interest now to recall extracts of letters forwarded to me by Ambassador Gerard from Berlin:

"I do not expect to see Germany 'outhungered.'"—Nov. 9, 1915.

"There is absolutely no chance of peace. The war is going on for a year or more."—Nov. 23, 1915.

"I tell you forcibly that if I were dying and could send but one message, I should warn America to be ready."—Dec. 28, 1915.

"Germany will undoubtedly last through, especially with grain from Rumania, and copper from conquered Serbia and a large mine in Saxony. There is enough rubber in hand for military purposes. * * * I don't think that the blockade, however uncomfortable it may make Germany, will decide the war."—June 21, 1916.

"Hope this Mexican flurry has sobered you and shown the need for real preparedness."—July 26, 1916.

The "Littery Fellers" Saying.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A prominent metropolitan newspaper has more than once quoted the phrase "one of those d—d littery fellers" as from Zack Chandler of Michigan. For more than forty years the writer of this letter has credited these words to Simon Cameron of Pennsylvania, and by consulting the files of THE TIMES accessible in the Public Library has clear proof of his belief. THE TIMES of March 14, 1877, referred to the Senator as a statesman of the old school, mystified by the new-fangled notions of those "literary fellers," thus showing that the phrase was already famous. The numbers of March, 1878, gave fuller information, and the biography of Richard Henry Dana by Charles Francis Adams completed the illumination. There we read that Cameron felicitously but somewhat profanely described Dana as belonging to the literary class, (Vol. II., p. 376.) It may be noted here that there seems to be no fixed spelling of the phrase:

"The words 'one of those d—d literary fellers' is which, as was currently reported, he conveyed his meaning in this last respect, became, indeed, a permanent contribution to American political parlance, and is almost the only thing elicited by the struggle over Dana which took a firm hold on the public mind and memory. There was about them a humor and point as well as a terseness which caused them to pass at once into the vernacular. So far as Mr. Cameron was concerned, the contest could, therefore, have been in its results in no way unsatisfactory; for he both carried his point and at the same time made a lasting contribution to American political speech."

The ghost of Simon Cameron might well exclaim, "How soon we are forgotten!"

The Times in the Trenches.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You may be interested to learn of the appreciation with which we soldiers of the American Expeditionary Force in France greet THE NEW YORK TIMES in the trenches. We do not get a real American newspaper very often, and you would be surprised to see how eagerly the articles are read.

We are seeing real war stuff every day, and are getting practical experience in scientific barbarity. As I write this, at 8 A. M., explosions of shrapnel and high explosives are jarring my pen. Yesterday I decked a shell that fell a few yards away without interrupting my train of thought, so accustomed one becomes to these things.

A few moments ago I picked up some German stuff on the wireless, in which the enemy brags about having bombed Paris on the 16th, (last night,) killing twenty-six and wounding seventy-two. I would be interested to see how this is reported in American newspapers.

THE CALL AND THE ANSWER.

Late a call came o'er the sea—
Call that stirred a nation's heart!
Now, O Land of Liberty,
Is the time to do your part!
We in Flanders hold the line—
Face for you a ruthless foe.
Follow where our Flag's stars shine
That all lands may Freedom know!

Sinews of the war must you
In full measure now supply!
Show yourselves as patriots true
Worthy those who for you die!
Freedom armed in Flanders stands,
Gold she asks of you, not life.
Hear her call to all her lands—
"Share the glory of the strife!"

When that call from Flanders came Over seas white-flecked with foam,
Liberty's torch new glowed aflame,
Answer came from every home—
Came from Maine, from Golden Gate,
From the Isles that we made free,
Puerto Rico, Cuba's State,
Philippines beyond the sea!

Lo! a golden tide now runs,
Bearing ships upon its crest!
Aid for men who man the guns
Comes from East and from the West!
Millions make their offering,
Each and all now freely give,
All we have and are we bring,
Freedom shall not die, but live!

NAMED AS AIDS TO SCHWAB.

Howard Coonley and J. L. Ackerson to Help Speed Up Shipping.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Announcement was made by the United States Shipping Board today that as a result of the expansion of the shipbuilding program and the additional burden of work involved Howard Coonley, President of the Walworth Manufacturing Company of Boston, had been made a Vice President of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and Naval Constructor J. L. Ackerson assistant to Charles M. Schwab, the Director General of the organization.

Charles A. Piez, a Vice President of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, who has been responsible for the executive and administration work of the Shipping Board, will relinquish a number of these duties to Mr. Coonley and will be able to devote himself solely to matters pertaining to shipbuilding and construction work.

Mr. Piez, as General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, a post which he relinquished when Mr. Schwab became Director General, had co-operated closely with Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board in building up the divisions of the organization which had to do with construction work. He will now be able to give all his time to this task and keep in close touch with Mr. Schwab, who has expressed the intention of spending as much of his time as possible in the ship yards in the capacity of a "shipbuilding field marshal."

Mr. Coonley is a Director of the Second National Bank of Boston, the Link Belt Company, the Walworth Company, the Rivet Lathe and Grinder Company, and a Vice President of the Chamber of Commerce of Boston, and the Associated Industries of Massachusetts.

Naval Constructor Ackerson was aid to Rear Admiral Capps, a former General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and until his appointment today as assistant to Mr. Schwab, had remained with the corporation, under the direction of Mr. Piez. He holds the rank of Commander.

URGES MORE SHIP SECRECY.

Creel, at the Request of Navy Department, Appeals to Newspapers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9. — To still further safeguard American transports and other vessels by concealing their movements as far as possible, the Committee on Public Information, acting at the request of the Navy Department, has again made an appeal for secrecy in the matter of ship movements.

"The committee," says the appeal, "is again requested by the Navy Department, to urge upon newspapers and upon all ship owners, ship agents, and brokers to discontinue the publication of news items and advertisements which in any degree indicate the location or movement of vessels. Naval authorities have clearly demonstrated to the committee that the publication of even the most fragmentary or trivial items of this nature may reveal clues upon which the enemy can build up information of extreme detriment to our prosecution of the war.

"This notice is not issued because of any new circumstances endangering ocean shipping—none has arisen—but because it is felt that the voluntary censorship has not yet achieved the fullest possible measure of essential secrecy in the protection of merchant shipping. The Committee on Public Information therefore urges once more that all references to the names of ships, dates of sailing and arrival, and all information of routes, schedules, cargoes, location and movement of ships be deleted from all news and advertising copy in newspapers, magazines, folders, circulars, charts, &c. This request applies to all American, allied, and neutral shipping in the Atlantic, Pacific, South American, and coastwise trades.

"The Committee on Public Information depends confidently upon the press and upon ship owners and agents, realizing the seriousness of the situation, to co-operate to the fullest extent with the naval authorities in the protection of the tonnage available for supplying our troops abroad, and the troops and populations of the countries associated with us in the war."

WANTS GOV. YAGER OUSTED.

Has Oppressed Porto Rican Labor, Gompers Tells President.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Removal of Arthur Yager as Governor of Porto Rico was asked of President Wilson today by Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Gompers charged the Governor with incompetency in handling the labor situation in Porto Rico.

In a letter to the President, Mr. Gompers declared the Governor had refused to better living conditions of the working people. He inclosed an exhaustive report of an investigation of conditions made by Santiago Iglesias of San Juan, Porto Rican organizer for the Federation. His report described the situation as intolerable. The working people were said to be underpaid, and in many cases underfed.

Governor Yager, a Democrat, was appointed from Kentucky by President Wilson in 1914 for a four-year term. Congress extended the term until a successor should be appointed.

The National War Labor Board was asked by Secretary Wilson today to investigate labor conditions in Porto Rico.

MAY ART TOTALS $43,789.

Robert W. de Forest Pays Highest Price, $420, for an Oban Triptych.

Returns of the Japanese print and Oriental art sale of the late Frederic May of Washington at the American Art Galleries yesterday afternoon and evening brought the grand total so far to $43,789. Robert W. de Forest, President of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, paid the highest price in the evening print sale, $420, for a framed Oban triptych of Hiroshige's most important snow scene, "Kisoji no San-Chu: Mountains and Streams on the Kiso Highway." Another framed Oban triptych, "Night View of the Eight Famous Scenes in Kanazawa," by Hiroshige, went to Bernet, agent, for $300, and Frederick W. Gookin paid $220 for the same artist's "Peacock on a Cliff Where Peonies Are in Bloom," a framed Kakemono.

"The Oiran Ujiyama as a Modern Representative of the Poet Kisen Hoshi," by Hosoda Eishi, went to Mr. Gookin for $230. "Shiratsu-Ya of Wakana-Ya," a large portrait head of a woman by Eishi, went to K. Oshima for $250, and another portrait, having the same title but by Eisho, went to Ohina, for $320. F. E. Osborn paid $250 for Hokusai's "Seishonagon," illustrating the famous ode of the barrier gate which was opened ahead of the hour through the simulated crowing of a cock. The returns for the evening were $7,407.

An old Japanese panel of Kiri wood, with the decoration of ferryboat and passengers modeled in pottery in high relief and painted with lacquers, and various enamel colors, brought the highest price of the afternoon, going to Thomas E. Moe for $130. It was signed Ritsuo Seisu. Seaman, agent, paid $110 for an old Japanese iron statuette, an articulated eagle perched on a rock with wings spread, and $55 for an old lacquered Japanese statuette, the seated figure of Daruma.

Two swords, a long and a short, companions, with scabbard of gold and silver lacquer ornaments in gold and other metals, went to C. V. Wheeler for $52.

The returns for the afternoon sale were $3,589. This closed the sale of the general collection of Oriental objects. The print sale closes this evening.

REJECT VOLUNTEERS AS CREDIT IN DRAFT

Reversing Itself, Like President, House Accepts Conference Report on Quota Bill.

EXEMPTIONS ARE CUT OUT

Registration Bill Sent Back to Conference—Kahn Predicts an Army of 8,000,000 Men.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Accepting the suggestion of President Wilson, who originally recommended that in the next draft credit be given to the States for volunteers but later reversed his position, the House today by a vote of 284 to 90 adopted the conference report on the bill providing for the next draft quota, consenting to the elimination of its amendment authorizing credits on quotas for volunteers and thus also reversing itself.

Despite the efforts of Chairman Dent of the Military Committee to induce the House to accept the conference report on the bill for the registration of those who have become 21 since June 5, 1917, the House by a vote of 182 to 118 rejected the Senate provision exempting theological and medical students from the next draft. As a result the machinery for calling into service the 700,000 men who have become 21 since June 5 last year cannot be put into immediate operation.

The position of those opposing the Senate amendment was that the purpose of the selective draft was to place all on an equality and that to make an exception would break down the principle of the law. It was argued that the President had authority under the selective draft law to place divinity and medical students in Class 5 if he deemed it essential, as he had done in the original draft.

Representatives John C. McKenzie of Illinois and F. J. Garrett of Tennessee led the fight against accepting the exemption amendment. It is believed the Senate will recede.

When the bill fixing the quotas for the next draft was up in the House two weeks ago, Chairman Dent read a letter from President Wilson supporting the idea of credits to States for volunteers and influenced the House to amend the bill so as to allow such credits. He said today, in presenting the conference report and asking the House to recede from its position, that he was still of the belief that the credits should be allowed, but that President Wilson, Secretary Baker, and Provost Marshal General Crowder had urged that the credits be not allowed and had asked the House to comply with their wishes. This letter from President Wilson was made public:

> The White House,
> Washington, 7 May, 1918.
> My Dear Mr. Dent: I take the liberty of writing you to say that I have become convinced that I was mistaken in advising you recently with regard to the matter of credits in the draft legislation. When the matter was presented to me, I had not fully analyzed, and I dare say that the gentlemen who presented the matter to me had not fully analyzed, the effects which would ensue by allowing credits for the number who had volunteered. I do not know whether they have changed their opinion in the matter, but I have been convinced by the facts as presented to me by the War Department that I took a mistaken view of the matter, and I now write to say that in my judgment that mistake ought to be corrected. I hope that if I was instrumental in any way in leading the committee of the House to the conclusion they came to, you will express to them my apologies for not having looked into the facts more thoroughly before I advised.

> Cordially and sincerely yours,
> WOODROW WILSON.

Representative Julius Kahn, ranking Republican member of the Military Committee, urged the House to adopt the conference report disallowing credits for volunteers. He said the time had arrived when the country should think seriously about increasing its army to an unlimited size, and pointed out what he termed the injustice of the proposed credits.

"The States indirectly have been given credit for their volunteers," said Mr. Kahn. "Class 1 in the various States would be greatly augmented if the men who had volunteered had been classified. Why should the army be charged with 300,000 men who have volunteered in the navy?"

"Are you aware that the Marines are in the trenches and are doing as good fighting as anybody over there?" asked Representative Cannon.

"There are something like 30,000 Marines, and we need 3,000,000 men in arms," said Mr. Kahn. "We will need, in my humble opinion, 8,000,000 men in our army before we get through. Class 1, in my opinion, will be exhausted within a year, and we shall have to go elsewhere."

DR. PARK GETS $9,000.

Copeland Promises an Additional $6,000 for Laboratories' Use.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, took occasion yesterday to expedite in his department several matters that have been the subject of criticism in medical and labor circles. He called on Dr. William H. Park, Director of the Bureau of Laboratories, and approved immediately of the expenditure of $9,000 for vials and other things needed in the department. He said he expected soon to grant Dr. Park's request for an additional $6,000 to purchase necessary articles.

Several representatives of the Labor Sanitation Conference called on Commissioner Copeland yesterday and requested him to expedite the appointment of additional persons to further the work of industrial hygiene. Dr. Copeland promised to see to it that the money for this work was used. The money was appropriated by the last administration.

Dr. Copeland spoke yesterday afternoon at Delmonico's before the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association, and later at the Strand Theatre, before the Homeopathic Hospital Unit. He declared that it was Mayor Hylan's intention to have the Health Department of this city the best in the country, if not the best in the world.

COPELAND PROMISES AID.

Health Department to Co-operate in Work for Widowed Mothers.

Speaking at the tenth annual meeting of the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association yesterday afternoon at Delmonico's Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Commissioner of Health, said that Mayor Hylan desired nothing in regard to the Health Department other than a clean and efficient administration. Dr. Copeland also said that the Health Department would co-operate to the greatest possible extent with the Widowed Mothers' Fund in its work of caring for destitute mothers.

Among the other speakers were Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Charities, who praised the work of the Widowed Mothers' Fund, and Mrs. William Einstein, President of the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association.

LEGATION SECRETARY A. B. LANE TO MARRY

New Yorker to Wed Miss Cornelia T. Baldwin in Florence, Italy, on June 19.

MISS TALCOTT BETROTHED

Junior League Member to Marry Lieut. T. M. McMillan, Jr.—Troth of Miss Powers and G. S. Bucknall.

Several engagements have been announced. One of international interest is that of Miss Cornelia Thayer Baldwin, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. William Wilberforce Baldwin of Florence, Italy, to Arthur Bliss Lane, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Warren Lane of 49 East Fifty-second Street and St. James, L. I.

Mr. Lane is a graduate of Yale, class of 1916, and for the last two years has been Secretary of the Legation in Rome. The wedding is to take place on June 19, in Florence, Italy.

Announcement has been made of the betrothal of Miss Julia Lake Talcott, daughter of J. Frederick Talcott of 16 East Sixty-sixth Street, and the late Mrs. Talcott, to Lieutenant Thomas M. McMillan, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. McMillan of Mobile, Ala.

Miss Talcott is a débutante of the last season and is a member of the Junior League. She is a sister of James Talcott, Jr., and Ensign Hooker Talcott.

Lieutenant McMillan was graduated from Princeton in 1913, also from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, and is now completing his work in New York for service abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. William V. V. Powers of 373 Park Avenue and Cornwall-on-Hudson have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Van Vorst Powers, to George Stafford Bucknall, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. J. Bucknall of Glen Cove, L. I. Mr. Bucknall recently returned from France, where he served for six months with a Norton Harjes ambulance unit.

Miss Marian Macdonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Stone Macdonald of Brooklyn, is engaged to Major Seward Grant of Montreal, Canada. Miss Macdonald is now in England working with the Volunteer Aid Detachment. Her fiancé went overseas with the first Canadian contingent, and was wounded recently.

The engagement has been told of Assistant District Attorney Louis Goldstein of Brooklyn and Miss Bertha Helen Weinberg, who is well known in that borough for her charitable work. Mr. Goldstein is a former Assemblyman. He was appointed a Lieutenant of the 47th Infantry by Governor Whitman last November. Their marriage will take place on May 28 at the home of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cady Sturges of 116 East Thirty-sixth Street announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Cady Sturges, to Captain James Henly Frier, Jr., U. S. A. Miss Sturges is the granddaughter of the late Jonathan Sturges of this city. Captain Frier, who is a graduate of the United States Military Academy, West point, Class of 1917, is the son of Colonel James H. Frier, U. S. A. He is stationed at Camp Merritt. The wedding will take place on June 8 at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Speers of Montclair, N. J., have received word of the engagement of their son, Peter Carter Speers, who is in India, to Miss Constance Smith. Mr. Speers is engaged in missionary work in Lahore, India, under the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions.

LIEUT. ADLER MARRIED.

Son of Ethical Culture Head Wed Miss M. A. Wootton a Month Ago.

First Lieutenant Waldo Adler of the national army, a son of Dr. Felix Adler and Mrs. Adler of New York, and Miss Mary A. Wootton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Wootton of Philadelphia, were married a month ago in Austin, Tex., the wedding being hurried by war conditions. No formal announcement of their engagement or wedding was made, although their engagement had been known for some time by their families and close friends.

Lieutenant Adler, since his graduation from the University of the South, has been connected with the Pennsylvania Railroad, and is a member of the Bryn Mawr, Polo and University Barge Clubs of Philadelphia. Mrs. Adler is closely identified with Red Cross activities. She will remain in Austin until Lieutenant Adler's duties take him elsewhere. Lieutenant Adler was at Plattsburg and later at Camp Oglethorpe, where he received his commission in the cavalry. He is now in the aviation school in Austin.

Lieutenant Adler's father is the head of the Society for Ethical Culture, which he founded in 1876.

Course for Assistants to Nurses.

In discussing the necessity for wartime training for volunteers in health work in the Extension Teaching Course of Columbia University, Miss Mary E. Wadley, Executive Secretary of the Social Service Department, said yesterday that it had erroneously been made to appear that the object of the short course was to fit lay workers to take the places of graduate nurses, releasing the latter for war work. The object was, she said, only to obtain additional assistants for both doctors and nurses in the less technical work of children's clinics and in the work for undernourished children in Summer school centres. She wished also to correct the impression that such short training would fit a woman to do the part of a trained nurse.

Economy Board Transferred.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The work of the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense has been transferred to the War Industries Board. A. W. Shaw, Chairman of the Commercial Economy Board, will serve as Chairman of the Conservation Division of the War Industries Board under Bernard Baruch.

DINNER TO LORD READING.

Counselor Polk Host to British Ambassador and Wife.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The large number of dinner parties this evening included one by Counselor of the State Department and Mrs. Polk in compliment to British Ambassador and Lady Reading, at which a score or more of additional guests were entertained.

Edward M. Hurley entertained a large stag party at dinner in compliment to Charles M. Schwab.

Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Stettinius, who recently took possession of their new residence in Eighteenth Street, entertained a dinner company of young people this evening in compliment to the Count and Countess Jean de la Greze of New York and Miss Eleanor Lawrence, also of New York, who is the guest of Miss Isabel Stettinius. On Saturday evening these hosts will entertain a dinner company invited to meet Admiral and Lady Grant.

Lieutenant William Cary Sanger, Jr., son of the former Assistant Secretary of War and now with the reserve army at Camp Travis, Texas, has been appointed Military Attaché to the American Embassy in Paris. Lieutenant Sanger is expected in Washington early next week and will be with his parents at their home in Q Street until sailing for his post.

MOTOR SPEEDING INCREASES

1,152 Arrests in One Month for Traffic Violations.

The March report of the Traffic Court, made public yesterday by Magistrate House, showed there were 1,152 arrests for violations in March, against 566 cases in March, 1917. Fines collected totaled $11,700, and 183 persons were sent to jail.

"Speeding is still increasing, and the ever and greatly increasing number of unlicensed chauffeurs and automobiles present a serious problem, which I feel can only be suppressed with a firm administration of the law," said Magistrate House.

There were 328 first, 22 second, and 1 third offender in March, 1918, against 111 first, 9 second, and 2 third offenders in March, 1917. Twenty-three drivers violated the eight-foot law, 24 drove recklessly, 60 failed to keep to the right, 49 were unlicensed chauffeurs, 18 were unlicensed operators, 8 did not display their badges, 59 had improper number plates on their vehicles, 1 driver was intoxicated, 2 had no lights, 119 motor vehicles were smoking, 3 speeded around corners, 7 had swinging number plates, 3 violated the heck ordinance, and 1 left the scene of an accident without stopping.

TEAS FOR SAILORS' MOTHERS

Twenty Are Entertained by the Militia of Mercy.

The first of a series of Spring teas inaugurated by the Militia of Mercy for the mothers of the boys in naval service was held yesterday afternoon at the headquarters, 59 East Thirty-fourth Street. Twenty mothers were present and after several hours of work on garments the rest of the afternoon was spent in discussing the lads. The committee strives to have the mothers meet who have sons on the same battleships, and yesterday six mothers whose sons are now at sea on the same warship found themselves at the same table.

Mrs. William H. Truesdale, President; Mrs. James R. McKee, Mrs. William K. Harcourt, Mrs. Lewis Morris, and Mrs. James Speyer were among those who helped to entertain the mothers yesterday. These teas will be continued every Thursday throughout the summer.

LORD ABERDEEN SEES SWANN

Drive Here for Woman's Health Association of Ireland Will Be Dropped

The charitable work carried on in the United States for some eighteen months by Lord and Lady Aberdeen and their friends under the auspices of the Woman's National Health Association of Ireland, for the special benefit of the children of England, Scotland, and Ireland, will be discontinued. This announcement was made by Lord Aberdeen at a conference yesterday with District Attorney Swann, to whom he related his version of the failure of certain persons to appear at the entertainment in Carnegie Hall on Wednesday.

Carl C. Diener, an employe, had inserted the advertisement in the newspapers announcing that French and American soldiers were to take part, Lord Aberdeen said, and he added he had no reason to doubt the truth of this until the time of the entertainment arrived and only one of the American soldiers appeared. Lord Aberdeen said that Charlie Chaplin, who was also absent, had personally promised him he would attend.

The activities of the charity, which included operations here, in Boston, Washington, San Francisco, and other cities, had brought in a total of $40,000, approximately, Lord Aberdeen believed, and the expenses of the work would average about 15 per cent. of the collections. No charge of any nature was made against the charity.

Judge Swann suggested that it might be better for the allied cause if the charity was discontinued, and to this Lord Aberdeen agreed. The grounds for this suggestion, the District Attorney said, might be found in the fact that enemies would use the occasion to raise confusion in the public mind by asserting that the charity was for war purposes and that it was getting little support.

Ask Compensation Under Prohibition

Compensation for property used in the liquor business, the value of which is destroyed by prohibition legislation, is advocated by the Merchants' Association in preambles and resolutions adopted at a meeting of the Board of Directors yesterday. The Directors at their April meeting appointed a special committee, consisting of William Fellowes Morgan, President of the association, James G. White, and William A. Marble, to consider the proposal that compensation should be made in case prohibition laws are passed.

PARADES TO START RED CROSS CAMPAIGN

Women in Families of Soldiers to March in Appeal for $25,000,000.

COMMITTEE OF 100 MEETS

New York City Expected to Give One-Quarter of $100,000,000 New Fund Within a Week.

Confidence that New York City would contribute its alloted quota of $25,000,000 of the $100,000,000 for the Second War Fund of the American Red Cross was the keynote of all the speeches made last night at the first get-together dinner of the thirty-one team Captains and division Chairmen at the Hotel Biltmore. The details of the campaign, which will cover the week from May 20 to 27, were discussed, and arrangements for the highest possible efficiency were made.

William C. Breed, head of the Committee of One Hundred, that has full charge of raising the money, was Chairman. Among the other speakers were Mrs. August Belmont, J. W. Dehl, Felix Warburg, William Fox, W. Fellowes Morgan, Walter Stabler, Olin J. Stephens, Louis Stewart, Joseph P. Day, Frank Presbrey, and Leo L. Redding.

After voicing his belief that the heart of the American people was upon the Red Cross, Mr. Breed said:

"We wish to see to it that every individual within the city has an opportunity to express his patriotism by contributing to the Red Cross. Our aim is to bring home to the people the fact that every dollar which is contributed to the Second Red Cross War Fund will be used for war relief purposes, and in addition, that the expenses of running this campaign will be borne by the various chapters out of the dues paid by the members of those chapters, or in some other way by voluntary contributions of money or space, which we are receiving from a great number of sources, as we have progressed in our plans during the past two or three weeks. We want people to also understand that the payment for their subscriptions may extend over a period of four months, beginning July 1, Aug. 1, Sept. 1, and Oct. 1. In order to carry the idea to the people of the democratic and broad campaign which we have planned, we have organized along six different lines of solicitation. Those six different lines are the teams campaign, with which you are familiar; the corporation campaign, the house-to-house campaign, the industrial campaign, the profit-sharing days, and entertainments and benefits."

Among the many special features that were reported on last night were the following: three large parades on Saturday, May 18, to inaugurate the drive. In the parade will be the women of the Red Cross, together with the wives, sweethearts, mothers, and sisters of men in the service. This is to be followed by a military parade.

On Sunday, May 19, pastors, priests, and rabbis of the 2,600 religious institutions have been asked to conduct special services, including the reading of the President's proclamation, the message of General Pershing and the singing of the national anthem.

Every day at 3 P. M. every church bell in the city will toll and every factory whistle will blow for half a minute. Then there will be a five second stop and the whistles will blow and the bells toll one time for each million dollars raised. A Red Cross twelve feet high will be started from Houston Street on the first day and as the national campaign for $100,000,000 progresses it will be moved uptown until 100th Street is reached.

The four-minute men will speak to 1,000,000 men, women, and children in the theatres and moving picture houses of the city during the week.

THANKED BY CLEMENCEAU.

French Grateful for Red Cross Aid Given to Refugees.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The promptness with which the American Red Cross Commission in France complied with a request for food for 50,000 refugees gathered at St. Omer and elsewhere during the recent German drive has elicited a message of thanks from Premier Clemenceau. The message, as received at Red Cross Headquarters here today by cable, said:

"I thank you heartily for the generous help given recently by your society to evacuees of Pas de Calais, when you sent them provisions at St. Omer, Anvin, and Bruges. After so many tokens of your bounty toward the population, sorely tried by common misfortune, you are now helping the Pas de Calais people, who, by their energetic attitude toward the enemy, fully merit the interest you are taking in them. Allow me to be the interpreter of their gratitude."

Premier Clemenceau's secretary, one day shortly after noon, called on the Red Cross Commission and asked whether it could supply milk, cheese, beef, and flour to feed 50,000 refugees at Stomer. When the French relief train left at 7 o'clock that evening it carried five tons of condensed milk, two and a half tons of cheese, and the same amount of beef and flour. Additional food was shipped by the Red Cross on a train the next day.

On the same day, in answer to an appeal by the Minister of War, the Red Cross from its warehouse supplies sent seventy-five beds for refugee children housed in a convent in Southern France.

Gift for Poppenhusen Institute.

The Poppenhusen Institute of College Point has received a check for $30,000 from Fritz Achelis, President of the American Hard Rubber Company, in memory of two former foremen of the company, for the creation in the institute of two classes of practical mechanics. This is in recognition of the 100th anniversary of the birth of the founder, Conrad Poppenhusen. Herman A. MacNeil, the sculptor, has presented a commemorative medal.

STETTINIUS SPIKES RUMOR.

Williams, Not He, in Charge of Ordnance, Official Announces.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Edward R. Stettinius, Assistant Secretary of War, issued a statement late this afternoon in denial of the published report that he had been placed in supreme charge of the ordnance production program of the army.

"The statement in a morning newspaper that I have been made 'gun dictator' is very wide of the mark," said Mr. Stettinius. "General Williams, the new Acting Chief of Ordnance, is of course in charge of guns and all ordnance material. General Williams, who has just returned from France, is a man of high ability, and enters upon the discharge of his duties with a keen appreciation of the requirements of our forces abroad and a recognition of the importance of speeding up production in every possible way. He will have the whole-hearted co-operation of Colonel McRoberts of the Procurement Division and Colonel Tripp and Mr. Marshall of the Production Division. Of course I will render every possible assistance to him in the discharge of his duties.

"I believe the fullest support and encouragement should be given General Williams and his staff, and particularly in their efforts to develop the Production Division, to the end that it may reach the highest possible point of efficiency."

BENEFIT FOR HOSPITAL UNIT

President's Autographed Photograph Sells for $300.

A benefit performance for the Woman's Homeopathic Hospital Unit, for service in France, was given yesterday afternoon at the Strand Theatre under the auspices of the New York College and Hospital for Women.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, appealed for funds for the unit. He said that in this country we were feeling the scarcity of practicing physicians, due to their serving at the front. In one district of over 15,000, he said, there was not one physician left.

Leon Rothier of the Metropolitan Opera Company sang the "Marseillaise," and May Peterson, soprano, of the Metropolitan, sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" and three other songs. Sara Gurowitsch, the 'cellist, and Winifred Christie played.

After a speech by Jessica Lozier Payne, who told of the need for women in the medical units, Guy Empey raffled off an autographed photograph of President Wilson for $300. Mrs. Walter G. Grump, President of the New York Medical College and Hospital, presented an ambulance to the unit from the young women of the Semple School. Colonel Nata J. Boardman of the National Woman's Army presented an official officers' car given by Captain Linda Messiter.

TO MOTHERS OF AMERICA.

Mme. Poincare Sends Message to be Read on Mothers' Day.

PARIS, May 9.—France will join in celebrating Mothers' Day (May 12.) Cardinal Amette has directed that special services be held on that day in all churches, and Mme. Poincaré has written a letter to the mothers of America to be read from all the pulpits of that country.

The first Sunday after May 8 is always sacred in France to the memory of Joan of Arc. Thus this year's celebration coincides with Mothers' Day.

Mme. Poincaré's letter, written in the name of the French Red Cross Societies, of which she is the head, recalls that American women sent toys to French babies at the very beginning of the war and are now sending their husbands, brothers, and sons to face the hard trials that the French have known for many months. The American mothers, she says, "can be sure those dear to them will here find cordial welcome and gentlest care."

OLYPHANT LEFT $500,000.

The will of Robert Morrison Olyphant, one time President of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad, who died on May 3 at the age of 94, gave his entire estate, estimated at more than $500,000, to his children, Mrs. Grace V. O. Kellogg, Robert Olyphant, and J. Kensett Olyphant, who died recently before his father, and whose share goes to his three children. The will stated that the testator desired to keep his property in the family.

Mr. Olyhant was the oldest alumnus of Columbia at the time of his death, was a fellow of the National Academy of Design, and member of the American Geographical Society, the Academy of Political Science, and the American Museum of Natural History, to which he contributed during his lifetime.

AVIATOR JEREMY DIES.

Second Death as Result of Aero Collision Near Mineola.

MINEOLA, L. I., May 9.—Ralph E. Jeremy, cadet aviator injured in an aero collision at Central Park, L. I., yesterday, died today in the hospital at Hazelhurst Aviation Field here. His is the second death as a result of the accident, Cadet John B. Erwin having died soon after the crash. Jeremy's body will be sent to his home in Emporia, Kan., where his mother lives. Erwin's body will go to West Point, Miss.

Julian R. Vidner of Washington, D. C., was slightly injured in the accident.

Bury Ex-Deputy Fire Chief Cashman

Funeral services for ex-Deputy Chief John J. Cashman of the New York Fire Department were held yesterday at the Church of St. Jerome, Alexander Avenue and 138th Street, with a solemn high mass celebrated by the Rev. Joseph A. O'Connor, Catholic chaplain of the Fire Department. The funeral procession was led from the Cashman home by the Fire Department Band and the chaplains of the department. Chief Cashman, who was 72 years old, had been an active fire fighter for thirty-seven years before his retirement. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery.

To Erect Monument to Capt. Castle.

In memory of Captain Vernon Castle of the Royal Flying Corps, who was killed recently while teaching an American flier at a Texas aviation field, a large monument will be erected on his grave in Woodlawn Cemetery. Friends of Mrs. Irene Castle, the widow, have begun plans for an elaborate program of exercises for the unveiling of the monument when it is completed.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY FOR POLICE RESERVE

TO RULE BY SUASION

Deputy Commissioner Wanamaker Sees Great Work for His New Force in Putting Down Sedition.

New York City's morals are to be toned up in the near future by the activities of a police reserve of volunteer women. It was announced at Police Headquarters last night that the Police Reserves which Commissioner Enright reorganized out of the Home Defense League, recruited so successfully by his predecessor, Commissioner Woods, was to have the prestige of this auxiliary.

The idea originated with Special Deputy Commissioner Rodman Wanamaker, the new head of the Police Reserves, who passed it along to his chief for approval yesterday in a memorandum, which was later issued to inform the public of the contemplated addition to the forces of law and order. Mr. Wanamaker laid stress in his outline on the thought that since New York women have received the vote they should have an active part in enforcing the laws.

The Special Deputy would not have the women police cope personally with rough and violent lawbreakers; on the other hand, their forte under the plan would be to keep a finger on the city's pulse in an effort to detect signs of unlawful developments before they grew to serious proportions, to watch out for cases of sedition, to uplift the general moral atmosphere of the city in the neighborhood of their posts. If need arose for the use of a nightstick or other instrument for curbing crime, the work would be referred to the men members of the force.

In his recommendation to Commissioner Enright, after describing his plan in general terms, Mr. Wanamaker said:

"Women of character and ability can be easily found to volunteer for this work. After the Inspection District organization shall have been completed and in effective working order, it can be extended to the precinct and then to a block, so as to have in every block of inhabited territory in this city a woman in charge whose post it would be and whose duty should be to keep that block clean and wholesome by becoming acquainted with every person and condition existing therein and reporting, as may be directed by the Police Commissioner, everything irregular or unlawful coming to her notice, so that proper police action may be taken.

"A woman in charge of a block could be assisted by one or more members of the women's Police Reserve, as the condition of the block and the number of women available might warrant, such assistants to be in command of the woman in charge. A central or headquarters, board of women under command of the Special Deputy Police Commissioner in charge, could be appointed to organize and control this force of women under rules and regulations established by the Police Commissioner.

"With a volunteer force of this kind, trained and efficiently controlled, kept free from sensational or advertising methods and held aloof from contaminating vice conditions, a Police Commissioner would be armed with an agency that would be of great use to him personally and to the police and to the city. A women's police reserve would be utilized to do useful public work in many directions in addition to its regular police duty, aiding in the Americanization of the alien elements of our population and reporting cases of sedition and disloyalty, aiding the various war activities, discovering and relieving cases of distress and destitution, comforting and cheering the unfortunate, advising and directing the weak, foolish and idle, and setting an example of high ideals, real unselfishness, and patriotism."

Inspector John F. Dwyer, aid to Mr. Wanamaker, said last night that work on the plan of a women's police reserve would be started at once. Drills can be conducted, he stated, on three floors of the Hallenbeck Building, or in the gymnasium of Police Headquarters, or in some armory. The Inspector said that an aviation division of the men's Police Reserve, comprising 160 men, is to receive instruction in the Hallenbeck Building, near Police Headquarters, immediately. A Curtiss airplane has been obtained for instruction work.

GOLDWIN STARRETT DEAD.

Architect of Many New York Buildings Was Brother of Maj. Starrett.

Goldwin Starrett, senior member of Starrett & Van Vleck, architects, 8 West Fortieth Street, died from pneumonia yesterday at his home in Glen Ridge, N. J. Mr. Starrett was 44 years old. He had been a practicing architect for ten years.

One of the important buildings designed by him was the Lord & Taylor Building. The Hale Publishing Company Building and the new building completed at Court and Remsen Streets, Brooklyn, were designed by the firm. Mr. Starrett was a brother of Paul Starrett, President of the George A. Fuller Company, building contractors. Another brother, Major William Starrett, a member of the Council on National Defense at Washington, was the architect who designed the national army cantonment buildings.

Dr. David Gilbert Yates.

Dr. David Gilbert Yates, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, who had practiced in this city for the last eighteen years, died yesterday at his home, 149 West Eighty-first Street, in his forty-eighth year. Dr. Yates was visiting surgeon at the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary and an attending physician at the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital. He was a member of the American Medical Association, the County Medical Society, the New York Academy of Medicine, and the New York Medical Society. Dr. Yates was born in New Jersey and was graduated from City College and New York University Medical School in 1898.

Colonel Luigi Lomia, U. S. A.

Colonel Luigi Lomia, U. S. A., retired, who served under General Miles in the Spanish-American war, died yesterday at his home, 174 Woodland Avenue, New Rochelle. Colonel Lomia was born in Sicily in 1843, and was graduated from the College of the City of New York in 1863, and entered West Point, where he was graduated in 1867.

GIANTS MOW DOWN PHILS AGAIN AND DEPART FOR WEST SEEKING NEW FIELDS OF CONQUEST

GIANTS START WEST WITH GREAT RECORD

McGraw's Men Complete First Home Series with Eighteen Victories and One Defeat.

PHILLIES BEATEN AGAIN

With Umpire Moran Surrounded by Space, Fans See Only a Ball Game Instead of Carnage.

The Giants wound up their Spring stay at the Polo Grounds yesterday and went away from here with a record of eighteen out of nineteen games. They again beat the Phillies under Coogan's Bluff by a score of 4 to 1, compiling a second string of nine straight victories already this season.

Charley Moran, the umpire who got into a jam with the Philadelphia players on Wednesday, umpired on the bases yesterday. Here he was entirely surrounded by space and no one was able to approach him at close quarters. Rigler was behind the bat and no one swung on Rigler. Manager Pat Moran objected to some of Rigler's work early in the game, but Rigler promptly informed Pat of the great value of silence.

The only difference between the game yesterday and the others that the Giants have won, was that McGraw's men waited longer than usual before getting down to business. They didn't win until the sixth inning. Holding back so long stirred up a lot of false hopes in the Phillies and it isn't a nice thing to do, because when the Giants tore into Erskine Mayer, the Phils were leading by a score of 1 to 0 and they had every intention in the world of winning a game.

President Tener of the National League was a spectator. He went to Harlem not so much to see the ball game as to get a squint at Umpire Moran. The umpire had only Managers McGraw and Pat Moran to protect him Wednesday, so Mr. Tener happened around, thinking that perhaps he might have a chance to do some umpire protecting. The new indicator-holder's work yesterday was no example of what he can do. If Mr. Tener wants to see something good, he wants to be there some day when Moran is busy.

Burns Spoils a Shutout.

Big Jeff Tesreau was at his best yesterday and the Phils never had a chance to win. If it hadn't been for a muff by George Burns early in the game, the Quakers would have been whitewashed. Five scattered hits made up the Phillies total of batting and in only one inning, the fifth, were they able to group two safe bangs.

Mayer held the Giants in check for five innings and then McGraw's aggressive batsmen tore into the Quaker's curves and had the game in their grasp before they called a halt.

Mayer was battered hard in the fifth, but great fielding support saved him. Holke pounded a red hot smash at Mayer, who bravely knocked it down while McGaffigan picked up the ball and threw him out at first. McCarty ripped a grounder at Stock so hot that it smoked. Tesreau then smashed a liner over short, Bancroft jumping high into the air to make a sensational one-handed catch.

It was a great day for Benny Kauff. He had a perfect day at the bat with a two-bagger, two singles and a walk. Ross Young went out at first at the start of the sixth and Kauff smashed a two-bagger off the right field wall. Burns slapped a single off Bancroft's shins, the ball hopping away so far that Kauff scampered through with the first Giant run. Zim singled to right, sending Burns to third, and then McGraw yanked Rodriguez, the Cuban filler, from the pastime and injected Joe Wilhoit.

Game Tucked Away.

Wilhoit evidently knew that Fitzgerald, who was playing in right for the Phils, was a poor judge of fly balls, for he smashed a liner out in that direction and Fitz played it so poorly that it went for a hit, Burns scoring. Fletcher continued the bombardment of Mayer and his single scored Zimmerman.

The Giants got another in the seventh when Ross Young peppered a two-bagger to left and scored on Kauff's single to right.

The only look-in of the Phillies happened in the first inning. Fitzgerald poked a fly to left which George Burns muffed and scattered the ball around so much that Fitz reached second. Bancroft sacrificed him to third and McGaffigan walked. As McGaffigan was being thrown out at second Fitzgerald scored with the Phillies' only run.

CUBS MAKE SERIES EVEN.

Sanders and Harmon Unable to Check Bruins and Pirates Lose.

PITTSBURGH, May 9.—Chicago won today's game, 6 to 2, and thereby divided the series with Pittsburgh. Sanders, starting the game for Pittsburgh, gave way to Harmon after he yielded four runs on five hits in six innings.

Harmon also was unable to stop the visiting batsmen, four hits in succession in the eighth inning scoring two more runs.

Vaughn pitched well, and although his support wavered at times he was always equal to the task of retiring the side. Pittsburgh played listless ball.

ROBINS TASTE OF VICTORY.

Tables Are Turned and Braves Are Beaten by 3 to 1.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 9.—Rube Marquard pitched Brooklyn back into the winning column today, beating the Braves in a light hitting game. The 3-to-1 score was even large for the product of straight baseball, but the Dodgers were entitled to at least a 1-to-0 score.

Marquard pitched warm weather ball, the Braves making only two real hits, while the Brooklyns got eight against Boston's entry from Indianapolis, the stocky Fillingim, who later on should strengthen Stallings's weak pitching staff.

Johnston played first base today owing to Daubert's indisposition, and his muff of a little fly, with a man on first base, in the Braves' opening inning provided the home club with its only score. Brooklyn counted in the first inning on Olson's double, a sacrifice by O'Mara, and Herzog's boot of Wheat's roller. In Boston's half, with two out, Herzog and Wickland singled and then Johnston lost Smith's fly in the sun, finally muffing the ball.

The Braves reached second base only once during the remainder of the game. In the fourth, after hits by Wheat and Johnston, with an in-between pass to Myers, two Dodgers were caught at the plate, a ticket issued to Schmandt forcing in a run after that.

Two innings later Rawlings lost an easy roller from Myers, who stole second and scored on a clean hit by Hickman. Wickland, who was tried against left-hand pitching for the first time today, made both of the Braves' undoubted hits.

YANKEES OUST VEAN GREGG FROM MOUND

Gather Five Runs in Second Inning and Get Final Game from Mackmen, 7 to 3.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 9.—A batting rally which drove Vean Gregg to the clubhouse and netted five runs for the Yanks gave Miller Huggins's team the odd game of their series with the Mackmen at Shibe Park this afternoon. The big drive came in the second inning, after the home team had picked up a two-run lead in the opening frame, and though the Yanks were halted during the remainder of the game, they never again were in danger. The score was 7 to 3.

Brilliant pitching by Herb Thormahlen held the Mackmen at bay after the New Yorkers had made their outburst against Gregg. The young southpaw of the Yanks really pitched nine complete innings of shut-out ball, but the game does not go into the records that way, as Russell had yielded three runs before Thormahlen made his appearance on the hill.

Long drives by Marsans and Peckinpaugh turned the tide in New York's favor after Russell had made his sorry showing in the opener. The Cuban drove a long double to left centre with the bases crowded, and Peck followed with a triple to the left-field corner, the ball following the foul line in its route to the fence.

With Gregg out of the way, Mack picked out Adams, one of his youngsters, and he pitched almost as good a game as Huggins's relief pitcher, but the game was gone before Adams began to work.

A home run drive by Elmer Miller in the eighth inning was the only mark against Adams after he replaced Gregg with one out in the second inning. Miller's drive landed some distance up in the high stand.

The Yankees got away to a lead with one run in the opening inning, but the Mackmen quickly erased this advantage in their half. Peckinpaugh singled to right with one out in the first frame and advanced on Baker's infield out. Pratt hit along the right field foul line for two bases and Peck scampered home.

Then came the big blow-up by Russell. Jamieson greeted the Yankee pitcher with a double to right and Kopp worked him for a pass. Walker attempted to sacrifice and the bunt rolled into a safe hit. Russell picked up the ball, and though he had no chance to get Walker at first base he made a throw for the bag.

The ball sailed far over Pratt's head when the latter covered first base, and rolled to the bleachers, then to the outfield. Jamieson and Kopp scored and Walker reached third base before the ball came back. Burns followed with a single to left which scored Walker and Huggins signaled Russell that he might retire.

In the second Bodie singled to centre, and Gregg walked both Miller and Hannah, filling the bases. Then he fanned Thormahlen. Marsans hit to the bleachers wall for two bases, scoring Bodie and Miller, and sending Hannah to third.

Peck's triple chased both Hannah and Marsans over the plate, and Peck followed when Baker rolled to Gardner. Larry had an easy play at first base, but tried for Peck at the plate, and the latter beat the throw.

Gregg was excused at this stage, and Adams took up the pitching burden. The latter quickly retired the side, and allowed the Yanks only four hits during the remainder of the game. Miller's homer in the eighth was the only run scored after this big rally.

Boland's Wildness Sends Tigers to Defeat by Score of 6 to 3.

CLEVELAND, May 9.—Through Boston's defeat today by Washington, Cleveland took the lead in the American League race by winning from Detroit, 6 to 3. The teams played off a postponed game.

Boland's wildness in the first two innings gave the locals their victory. After holding Detroit to four hits, Morton developed a wild streak in the ninth and was taken out.

HOLY CROSS WINS IN 12TH.

Daley's Triple Topples Fordham, 5 to 3, After Keen Battle.

Holy Cross defeated the Fordham nine in a twelve-inning game on Fordham Field yesterday by a score of 5 to 3. The game developed into a pitchers' battle between McQuade and Gill after the seventh inning and the Worcester lad was able to go better over the long route. The game was exciting and both teams uncorked many fielding thrills. It was the first defeat for Fordham on Fordham Field this season. Gill, for Holy Cross, fanned seventeen batters. Holy Cross scored twice in the second inning on a single, a fielder's choice, and two errors. Fordham flashed to the fore in the sixth inning, having garnered one run in the fourth. Abbott singled and Coletti delivered his second home run in two days, a vicious circuit drive to right.

Holy Cross tied the count in the seventh inning. Martin singled, stole second, and came home on Scanlon's wild heave over second. This run gave the Worcester lads a new lease on the game.

In the ninth and tenth innings Fordham threw away chances by poor base running. Gill, Holy Cross's hard-hitting pitcher, singled in the twelfth. He was forced out at second on Statz's grounder.

Then O'Neill singled and Daley proved a hero by smashing a triple to left centre, scoring Statz and O'Neill. Daley tried to stretch the hit, but was nailed at home.

Fordham got Dwyer and Martin on in the twelfth on a walk and single, but could not score.

ARRANGE FOR LOCAL RACING

Jockey Club Appoints W. S. Vosburgh as Steward at Jamaica.

At a meeting of the stewards of The Jockey Club held yesterday officials were appointed, in view of the opening of the racing season in the metropolitan district, which is set for next Thursday at Jamaica. W. S. Vosburgh, the official handicapper of the club, was appointed steward for the opening meeting. His duties as handicapper will be easier in future, as a new official was created, that of secretary to the handicapper. The first incumbent will be Harold Vosburgh, a son of the handicapper.

Other stewards to serve during the season will be F. R. Hitchcock at Belmont Park, H. K. Knapp at Aqueduct, Andrew Miller at Empire City, and F. R. Hitchcock at Saratoga.

The appeal of the Government for field glasses was taken up, and attention called to the fact that The Jockey Club had a large number of these glasses, which had been reserved for members of the club and their guests at the different race meets. It was decided to present these to the Navy Department.

On the report of the stewards of the Havre de Grace meeting the license of W. Ward was suspended. F. G. Martin was fined $200 for entering the horse Friendless in violation of Rule 116.

Tommy McTaggart again applied for a jockey's license, but it was refused as were the applications of Charles Borel, M. Nathan, Charles Martin, and J. McIntyre. The applications of W. J. Burke, J. W. Moore, L. P. Sharp, and Frank Kelly for trainers' licenses were refused. A number of licenses were granted.

Major August Belmont received word from France yesterday that a full brother to Hourless had been foaled at the Haras de Villas stud of the Chairman of The Jockey Club in Normandy, France. The breeding of Hourless was more or less of an experiment, as Major Belmont did not own his sire, Negofol. When Hourless proved a success, his dam, Hourglass II., was again bred to the French sire, and the colt was foaled on April 13. In all probability, he will be shipped to this country as a yearling and entered in the principal stakes.

GOLF MATCHES PLENTIFUL.

Leaders to Play Over Local Courses in Exhibitions.

The competitive golf season for the metropolitan district will get in full swing starting today, when the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association plays its first one-day tournament of the season at Arcola. It will be an eighteen-hole medal play affair, with prizes awarded for the low gross and low net, and the receipts going to the Red Cross.

While the women are making merry at Arcola the Columbia Golf team, which defeated Pennsylvania last week, will meet the Williams College golfers at Garden City in a team match with four ball contests in the morning and individual affairs in the afternoon. Captain Scott is the leader of Williams, and will play against A. L. Walker, Jr., leader of the Columbia team.

Two exhibitions of note are scheduled for tomorrow and two more for Sunday. At Garden City tomorrow Jim Barnes, Western open champion, and Jerome D. Travers, former national amateur and open champion, will play an eighteen-hole four-ball match against Walter Hagen, former open champion, and John G. Anderson, Westchester County amateur champion. Montclair is to be entertained by a handicap match in which Mrs. William A. Gavin will play against Robert White, professional, at Montclair.

The exhibitions Sunday are to be held at Oak Ridge and Hackensack. At Oak Ridge Hagen and Barnes will play against Tom McNamara and Tom Kerrigan, former professional at Siwanoy and now in the Naval Reserves. Kerrigan has been granted a furlough for the match. At Hackensack Mrs. Gavin will play against Max Marston in a handicap match over eighteen holes.

Title Bout Barred in Utah.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 9.—The proposed Willard-Fulton heavyweight championship bout will not be held in Utah, it was announced at the office of Governor Simon Bamberger here today. The laws of the State will not permit of the contest, according to an opinion of the Attorney General, given at the request of the Governor. Ogden sporting men have been endeavoring to secure the battle in that city.

Brooklyn Prep Defeated.

Brooklyn Prep School's baseball nine suffered its first defeat of the season yesterday, when the Peekskill Military Academy nine trounced the team from Brooklyn in a close game at Peekskill, N. Y., by the score of 3 to 2. Perry, the Peekskill twirler, showed good control, and fanned ten of Brooklyn's batters.

JACK HARE, JR., HAS BIG LEAD AT FINISH

Carries Top Weight Easily and Wins Woodberry Handicap by Two Lengths.

PIMLICO, Md., May 9.—Candidates for the rich Preakness Stakes had a public trial this afternoon in the running of the Woodberry Handicap for three-year-olds, and the result showed that it will take a mighty good horse to beat W. E. Applegate's Jack Hare, Jr., in the $15,000 event on May 15. Jack Hare, Jr., picked up top weight of 123 pounds today, showed brilliant speed at the beginning of the race, and afterward was rated in front to win as he pleased by two lengths from Harry Payne Whitney's Flags.

Jack Hare, Jr., turned the mile in the fast time of 1:39 2-5, but the most remarkable feature of his victory was that he took into camp George Starr, previously undefeated as a three-year-old, and looked on as a probable favorite for the Preakness. George Starr was in receipt of six pounds from Jack Hare, Jr., and finished in fourth place, sixteen lengths behind the winner.

There was a severe shock for the form players in the running of the Pimlico Nursery, for which a purse of $2,500 was offered. Harry Payne Whitney's Blue Laddie had won both of his previous races so impressively that he was looked on as almost a certainty. In the scramble over the four and a half furlongs the Whitney crack was shuffled back several times and was beaten in a close finish by W. A. Gamble's Madame Byng and E. B. McLean's Bon Jour. Madame Byng paid better than 40 to 1 in the mutuels.

The summaries:

FIRST RACE.—For 2-year-olds, purse $500, five furlongs. Little Maudie, 112 pounds, (McAtee,) $4.50, $2.80, and out, won; Sweeplet, 112, (Buxton,) $2.20 and out, second; Dunedin, 115, (Troise,) out, third. Time—1:02 4-5. Unwise Child also ran.

SECOND RACE.—For 3-year-olds and upward, selling, purse $700, one mile. Julia L., 105 pounds, (Ensor,) $22.80, $10.20, and $7.70, won; Millrace, 90, (Denye,) $15.80 and $8.40, second; High Low, 95, (T. Rowan,) $25.90, third. Time—1:43. Umatilla, Dervish, Miss Kruter, Dr. Swords, Poor Butterfly, Sunny Hill, Maxim's Choice, and Saxham's Journey also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Steeplechase, for 4-year-olds and upward, purse $700, two miles. Louvois, 147 pounds, (Byers,) $4.70, $3.80, and $4, won; W. F. Knebelkamp, 144, (Turner,) $8.20 and $4.60, second; Ormeshead, 144, (Crawford,) $7.90, third. Time—3:57. Sixty Four, Brand, Jack Carl, The Carmet, Dorcris, and Commodore Gaunt also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—The Spring Juvenile, for 2-year-olds, $2,500 added, four and a half furlongs. Madam Byng, 112 pounds, (Lyke,) $85.50, $18.20, and $4.50, won; Bon Jour, 112, (O'Brien,) $4.70 and $2.80, second; Blue Laddie, 118, (Robinson,) $2.30, third. Time—0:54 4-5. Ophelia, Blairgowrie, Mahony, and Ster Realm also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—The Woodberry Handicap, for 3-year-olds, purse $800, one mile. Jack Hare, Jr., 133, (Peak,) $6.30, $4.40, and $3.50, won; Flags, 115, (Robinson,) $9.60 and $5.60, second; Recount, 112, (Troise,) $6.40, third. Time—1:39 4-5. George Starr, Hill Hampton, Zululand, Mary Maud, and Col. Cluff also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—The Jockey Club Selling Handicap, for 3-year-olds and upward, purse $700, six furlongs. Kirstie's Cub, 98 pounds, (Callahan,) $88.70, $23.50, and $13.80, won; Langden, 102, (McAtee,) $5.30 and $4, second; King John, 100, (Kummer,) $7.80, third. Time—1:14. Adele, Favour, Tie Pin, Bierman, Master Karma, Theresa J., and Eddie Henry also ran.

SEVENTH RACE.—The Jockey Club Selling Handicap, (second division,) for 3-year-olds and upward, purse $700, six furlongs. Louise V., 100 pounds, (McGraw,) $5.80, $3.50, and $2.90, won; Cadillac, 105, (Lyke,) $5.50 and $3.90, second; Back Bay, 99, (Ensor,) $3.60, third. Time—1:14. Hondo, Wonderland, El Mahdi, Jack Mount, Election, Pierre a Feu, and Swoon also ran.

C. C. N. Y. Freshmen Win.

The freshman baseball team of the College of the City of New York gained its sixth victory out of eight games played, when it beat Yonkers High School at Yonkers yesterday, 3 to 2. The freshmen will meet Bushwick High School in the Stadium tomorrow.

MATCH RACE FOR PIMLICO.

Omar Khayyam May Meet Cudgel, Bondage, and Crank Again.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 9.—The sum of $10,000 has been offered by the Maryland Jockey Club for a match race to be run at Pimlico next Tuesday or Wednesday between Wilfred Viau's Omar Khayyam, Commander J. K. L. Ross's Cudgel, Mrs. James Arthur's Bondage, and Crank, owned by Samuel Ross. The owners of the last three thoroughbreds have practically agreed to the race, and all that remains to make the contest a certainty is the permission of Viau.

The quartet of thoroughbreds met yesterday in the Pimlico Spring Handicap, and, although Cudgel won, the race turned out in such a manner that there is still much discussion as to which is the best horse.

Mountaineers Win on Diamond.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., May 9.—In one of the chief games on the local schedule the West Virginia University nine defeated the University of Virginia today by the score of 7 to 4.

BASEBALL VETERANS PLAY.

Billy Sunday and Other Former Stars in Chicago Exhibition.

CHICAGO, May 9.—Baseball stars of a former generation, many known only by reputation to present-day enthusiasts, met in battle again today in a game staged, despite the rain, for several hundred Jackies from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. Among the veterans were "Billy" Sunday, once the sprinter of the National League; Fred Pfeffer, one of the greatest second basemen the game has known; "Tony" Mullane, who pitched for the "Reds," and "Jimmy" Ryan of the old Colts. Jake Stahl played first base, and was the "youngster" of the aggregation.

The veterans were divided into two teams, the All-Nationals and All-Americans. The Nationals won the game in the fourth inning when, with the score 14 to 9, rain made the continuation of the contest impossible.

MONTCLAIR MARKSMEN WIN.

Jersey Schoolboys Take Match by 965 to 921.

The Montclair Academy rifle team closed its season with a victory over the New York Military Academy representatives in a correspondence match, according to the scores announced yesterday. The tally favored the Montclair marksmen by 963 to 921. This gave the New Jersey schoolboys their sixth straight success of the season.

To the several hundred salesmen in our four stores we say "Emphasize to your customers the fact that the fabrics in the garments you are offering were contracted for a year ago and our prices are based upon the prices paid, and not upon the cost of replacement which would now be higher."

We have said this before, both in the papers and to our men, but it needs reiteration.

The other things we deal in — haberdashery, hats, shoes—are treated precisely the same way. Normal profits added to actual cost. We try to keep down prices rather than boost them.

OPPOSES EMPLOYING WOMEN ON CARS HERE

Labor Department Investigator Asserts They Should Not Be Lured Into Such Work.

SERVE TO KEEP WAGES DOWN

Also Reports That They Will Be Unable to Resume Former Places at Home or in Industry.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The Department of Labor is opposed to the employment of women as conductors and guards in the subways and on surface lines in New York and other large municipalities. Such a conclusion was reached by Benjamin Squires of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, following an investigation made in Manhattan and Brooklyn, and his findings were set forth in an official report made public today. Mr. Squires sums up his opinions in this paragraph:

"From the facts brought out, it must be evident to any thinking person that it is practically impossible to make the conditions of street railway employment even tolerably endurable to women employes, and that the operation of street cars is one of the last occupations into which women should be lured or forced."

The report shows that on Feb. 15 last there were 432 women conductors employed by the New York Railways Company, or approximately 30 per cent. of all of the conductors employed. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company on the same day had 138 women conductors on its surface lines, and 297 women guards and conductors on its subway trains. They represented 5.6 and 21.7 per cent., respectively, of the total number of conductors and guards employed.

While admitting that, as the transit companies assert, women in their employ as guards and conductors are receiving the same wages as men, the Federal investigator expresses the belief that the employment of women is responsible in no small part for the fact that wages of all employes of the operating department have not increased as rapidly as have wages in other industries.

At the time of the investigation, the report says, women conductors worked twelve hours and more on most of the days they were employed. It was also shown that 46.6 per cent. of the women employed by the New York Railways Company began their work between midnight and 8 A. M., either by choice or allotment, and that the work of 41.7 per cent. of all of the women employes ended between 10 P. M. and 4 A. M. Conditions were about the same on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit. The report then continues:

"Those who advocate the employment of women as street car conductors have given scanty consideration to irregularity of hours, to 'within' time and to night work, or else they regard these as more than compensated by the comparative lightness of the work. It is necessary, however, to take into account the nervous strain resulting merely from riding for hours at a time on a car that is constantly starting and stopping, and from handling crowds at rush hours.

"On many cars the conductor is obliged to be on his feet constantly, and the principle has been clearly established that a woman cannot work at employment requiring constant standing without seriously endangering her health. Moreover, the conductor is exposed to cold, damp, and draughts even on the best type of inclosed-vestibule and centre-door cars.

"The point has been made repeatedly by the companies during the investigation that even when women have a choice they frequently select night runs. At this time the cars, of course, are less crowded and the work less strenuous, except, perhaps, during the after-theatre rush hours on certain lines. Some of the women have remarked that they preferred the night runs because it left them the day free to do other things. Others with families have said that the night runs enable them to look after the children and prepare the meals during the day.

"The disastrous consequence of employing women on night work to enable them to work all day for their families have been so thoroughly demonstrated in other industries that it needs no further demonstration in street car operation. Lack of sufficient rest must very soon so lessen the vitality that the woman is not only unfit for street railway service, but unable to resume her former place either in the home or in industry."

The investigator presents the statements of the New York Railways Company and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to the effect that the selective draft has drawn heavily on their employes and that others have volunteered or gone to war industries.

"It is in reference to those who leave for higher wages in other industries," the report states, "that the wage scale of street railway employes is significant. It is denied that women are employed to fill easy jobs or to lower the wage scale of men. However, the wage rates in most industries have advanced very greatly, while the rates of street railway employes in New York City and Brooklyn—and probably elsewhere—have advanced much less rapidly.

"First-year conductors are now paid 27 cents per hour on the New York transit railways companies lines and on the surface lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. First-year subway conductors employed by the latter company are paid 26 cents per hour; first-year guards, 24 cents. In 1914 the rate of first-year surface car conductors was 24 cents; of first-year surface-subway conductors, 23 cents; of first-year subway guards, 20 cents.

"There is thus an advance to first-year surface car conductors of 12½ per cent. in four years; to subway conductors of 13 per cent.; to first-year guards of 20 per cent."

GEN. DONNELLY RESIGNS.

Army Officer Was to Have Faced Court-Martial Yesterday.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The resignation of Brig. Gen. Arthur B. Donnelly of the Missouri National Guard has been accepted "for the good of the service." This announcement was authorized tonight by Adjt. Gen. McCain, but he declined to discuss the case. General Donnelly was charged with conduct unbecoming an officer and his trial by court-martial was suspended today by order of President Wilson soon after it had begun at New York.

The court-martial of Brig. Gen. Arthur B. Donnelly of the National Army, who is charged with conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman, in that he played cards and drank with subordinates, which was to have begun on Governors Island at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, was postponed at the last minute. The postponement was on orders received from Adjt. Gen. McCain in Washington, who acted under instruction from Secretary of War Baker. The court adjourned to meet at the call of Major Gen. William H. Carter, the President.

Sues for $2,000,000 in Real Estate.

Mrs. Hortense Tracy, who filed suit several years ago against sixty property owners of New York to recover a dower interest in realty once owned by Edward Tracy, wealthy real estate speculator, who posed as a bachelor, on the ground that she was his wife, and whose actions were discontinued, began new suits yesterday involving nearly $2,000,000 of realty in the section between Seventy-second and Ninety-first Streets and Fifth and Lexington Avenues. Among the defendants named are Andrew Carnegie, Milo M. Belding, Henry C. Emmet, and Sarah C. Mills.

APPELLATE DIVISION—Second Department—Admission to the Bar.

Candidates whose names are appended and who have been certified by the State Board of Law Examiners as having passed the law examinations, are notified to file, on May 15, 1918, at 10 A. M., with the Clerk of the Appellate Division, at his office, Borough Hall, Brooklyn, evidence of good moral character. Such evidence, must include at least two affidavits from attorneys in the Second Judicial Department acquainted with the applicant, which must state that the applicant is to the knowledge of the affiant a person of good moral character, and must set forth in detail the facts upon which such knowledge is based, and such affidavits must be made by practicing attorneys of the Supreme Court personally known to a member of the committee. The committee does not meet on the above date. Applicants should not seek introduction on that day. Affidavits on printed forms will not be accepted.

Each candidate shall also file the certificate received from the State Board of Law Examiners and a sworn statement answering fully all questions appearing upon a form which will be furnished by the Clerk of the Court.

Each candidate must be introduced personally to at least one member of the committee by a practicing lawyer known to such member. A strict compliance with the foregoing requirements is essential. Information may be sent to any member of the committee.

DR. PAES HEADS REPUBLIC.

Takes Seat as President of Portugal—Elected by Large Majority.

LISBON, May 9.—Dr. Sidonio Paes, who recently was elected to the Presidency of the Republic of Portugal by direct and universal suffrage, was formally proclaimed President of the republic today.

Complete returns from the election show that Dr. Paes received a great majority of the ballots, the vote in the Portuguese colonies adding to the lead he established on the continent.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Make Big Advance on Heavy Buying Orders—Steel's Leadership.

For the third time this year the Stock Exchange handled more than a million shares in yesterday's session, but the two preceding big days came so soon after the turn of the year, on Jan. 2 and 3, that they might almost be credited to 1917. The upward movement which was retarded by profit taking in the steel shares on Wednesday assumed new impetus from the opening yesterday and carried prices of many active issues up from 1 to 5 points. The spirited rise served to recall the record day in the history of stock trading in this country, which occurred just seventeen years ago yesterday and culminated in the famous Northern Pacific panic.

The commanding position of the Steel shares in yesterday's market was emphasized by the frequency with which large blocks of that issue appeared on the tape on an advancing scale. From 102, the low for the day, the price moved to 107⅞ with only minor reactions, and the close saw a net gain of 4¼ points. As the day wore on bullish enthusiasm broadened to include other issues which had shown only small response to the wave of buying orders. Industrial Alcohol advanced another 3 points, several smaller steel issues from 1 to 3 points and American Sumatra Tobacco to 114¾, closing up nearly 6 points for the day. The railroad issues were firm, but more or less neglected.

Attempts to find reasons for the upward swing which has carried stocks so far since the close of the loan campaign last Saturday resolved themselves finally into the conclusion that the war is going decidedly in favor of the Allies. There has been no open talk of peace in the financial district in recent months, traders purposely keeping that out of the discussions because of the feeling they have that peace talk is incompatible with full-hearted participation in the war preparations. At the same time there is apparent a strong undertone due to the belief that Germany's resources will not suffice to carry the war on its present costly scale many months longer. Other factors among the new conditions operating in this market are the favorable crop report, the increase in investment funds through widespread economy, and the expectation of favorable action by the Government authorities on the railroad rate question. Money was in demand at 6 per cent. throughout the session.

LONDON MARKET ACTIVE.

Traders Stimulated by the Latest Military News.

LONDON, May 9.—On the Stock Exchange today military news stimulated the market. Investments, including Far Eastern securities, were in good demand. Chilean stocks responded to a fresh spurt in Valparaiso exchange, while Argentine railways hardened.

Industrials were firm, particularly munitions. Mining securities were buoyant.

Money was in ample supply and discounts were quiet.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Sinclair Oil Gained in March.

The Sinclair Oil and Refining Company's report for the March quarter reflected the unfavorable operating conditions of January and February. Of the net earnings of $1,985,440 before interest and taxes, $1,084,298, or 54 per cent., was produced in March. Information so far received from petroleum companies operating in the Southwest indicate that the severe Winter weather and transportation tieups cut heavily into shipments. The Spring improvement has been noteworthy. Cosden & Co., another big producer and refiner of Oklahoma, is understood to have shipped a larger value of products in April than in any other month of its history. After writing off $712,911 for depreciation and depletion, the Sinclair Company had a balance of $561,268 in the first quarter available for dividends, equal to a little more than 56 cents a share of stock.

Large Crop of Rumors.

The Stock Exchange fairly teemed with bullish rumors yesterday, ranging from a story that the British forces had broken through the German lines to one that the Government was considering an effort to repeal the Sherman law. Steel common was bid up actively after a rumor gained hearing that the anti-trust suit against the corporation was to be dropped. The Exchange Governors recently put a rule into effect aimed to check the spread of rumors of an unsettling character, but it could not be learned that action was taken to inquire into yesterday's crop.

Steel Leader in a Big Day.

The boiling stock market resulted in a turnover of 1,114,893 shares, the largest for any date since Jan. 9, when 1,342,623 shares changed hands. Steel common accounted for 335,700 shares, or more than 30 per cent. of the aggregate.

Heckscher Out of Central Foundry.

August Heckscher resigned yesterday as a Director of the Central Foundry Company, and was succeeded by R. A. Fairburn. Mr. Heckscher's action attracted attention in the Street, for the reason that he was believed for a number of years to be the largest individual stockholder of the company.

The New Ordnance Works.

The announcement of plans for the construction of a giant ordnance plant by the Steel Corporation for the Government arouses speculation as to the effect of this contemplated unit on the earnings of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company from ordnance work in future years. Material effects in dollars and cents are submerged, however, in thoughts of the purpose of the new plant—to help win the war.

Stock Prices at New High Level.

A result of yesterday's strong stock market was to lift the average price of fifty representative issues to the highest level of the year. At 71.05, the average was .10 above the previous maximum of 1918, established on Feb. 19. The demand for bonds was more insistent than on any preceding day of the year.

May 9, 1901 and 1918.

Yesterday was the anniversary of the Northern Pacific corner in 1901. Outside of their activity, the sessions, according to traders who recalled the memorable day seventeen years ago, had little in common.

Cost-Plus Versus Fixed Price.

There seems, from the shipbuilders' gossip, to be considerable history behind the brief announcement that the Submarine Boat Corporation's contract for building ships at Port Newark has been canceled and replaced by a new contract at a fixed price per ship. There was significance in the remark of one man who has an intimate acquaintance with the whole affair, "Score one for Charley Schwab." Meanwhile, it is obvious that with steel prices and wages stabilized by the Government, one of the strongest arguments for the cost-plus, or so-called agency, contract, disappears, and the fixed price contract, with a free hand and definite responsibility, always has been tremendously appealing to people who have confidence in themselves and their organization. Incidentally, Submarine Boat made a new high record for the year on the Curb yesterday.

The Future of the Yards.

One of the questions that is being much debated by leaders in the new American shipbuilding industry is: What will become of the present immense expansion of shipyards, which, once the war losses have been made up or are well on the way to being made up, will be far greater than will be needed to maintain the world's fleets and provide the normal yearly increase with the growth of commerce? One possible answer is supplied by a remark of the head of one of the biggest entirely new yards. "With our rail connections, our deep-water frontage, our layout of warehouses, shops, yard trackage and so on, and particularly our immense fitting-out basins and piers," he said, "we have the makings, with very little alteration, of the finest ocean freight terminal in the world."

Nationalized Shipping.

The possibility of nationalized shipping cropped up again in Sir Owen Philipp's remarks at the annual meeting of Lamport & Holt, Ltd., a report of which has just reached here. Sir Owen declared roundly that "the sea is, and always will be, open to all the world, so that shipping * * * is the very last thing to which the principle of State ownership could be safely applied."

Cotton Differences Regulation.

The disproportionate demand for high-grade cotton at present, due to strict specifications in Government orders, has had an upsetting influence in the cotton trade, because the price differentials for the lower grades are by law based on average prices in actual first-hand sales at eleven Southern markets, and at this season of the year, particularly in a falling market, sales at many of these markets are small, if not non-existent, and the quotations present no real criterion of market conditions. N. L. Carpenter & Co., in order to remedy this, propose either the elimination of the inactive markets from consideration in making the prices, or the retention of differences established about midseason throughout the dull months.

Airplane Stocks and Investigation.

Wright-Martin and Curtiss Aero, the two curb airplane leaders, have not yet shown signs of perturbation at the various Government investigations into the industry. On the contrary, both stocks have been rather stronger than before, and some of the Wright-Martin "boomers," who were so energetic some months ago, are now talking about more big contracts for Hispano-Suiza motors as a sequel to the investigation and the restricted usefulness of the Liberty motor.

Talking Peace Again.

For the last few days the Cotton Exchange, after an almost complete abstinence of several months, has been returning to one of its favorite amusements—peace talk. Apparently it is the opinion of the talkers that prices are now once more so low that "peace talk is bullish in cotton."

Trade in the Philippines.

The National Bank of Commerce in New York has issued a long and careful analysis of the commercial possibilities of the Philippines, among whose most interesting features are that there is a scarcely-touched field there for agricultural machinery, a steadily growing market for cheap automobiles, in which the United States has things all its own way, and for farm tractors, and that the Filipino is rapidly learning to wear American boots and shoes.

John M. Cates Gets Exchange Seat.

The Stock Exchange membership owned by Cortland Dines of the Denver brokerage firm of Dines & Co. was posted for transfer yesterday to John M. Cates, the former Yale football player. Mr. Dines bought the seat on March 19 for $59,000, and disposed of it for $55,000 to Mr. Cates in order to enter the navy. Mr. Cates is a member of the Denver house of Wilson, Cranmer & Co. After being graduated from Yale in 1906, Mr. Cates was coach of the football team at the Naval Academy.

U. S. STEEL TO BUILD BIG ORDNANCE PLANT

Monster Factory for War Material to be Erected and Operated for the Government.

INTERIOR LOCATION CHOSEN

Corporation's Experts in All Lines Put at Nation's Call Without Compensation.

The vast plans of the United States Government for the conduct of the war to victory were emphasized yesterday through information made public by Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the Steel Corporation, in respect to the construction of a giant ordnance plant. The project had been hinted at in Government circles for several weeks, but Judge Gary's announcement was the first authoritative discussion of it.

"At the solicitation of the Secretary of War," said he, "the United States Steel Corporation has undertaken to construct and equip for, and at the expense of the Government, upon a site in the interior of the country, a plant for the manufacture of cannon and projectiles of large sizes and in great quantities, and to operate the same when finished.

"At best, the time required will extend over a considerable period, and the cost will be large, but the work will progress with all practicable speed, and economy in the use of money will be practiced. It is hoped and expected the results will be creditable to the country.

"The work will be in the immediate charge of a committee consisting of a Vice President and the Controller of the Corporation, and eight others designated from the officers (Presidents or Vice Presidents) of the various manufacturing subsidiary companies, and all selected because of their education, experience, and peculiar fitness. This committee will keep in close touch with the building and operating organization which is being formed, and with the officers of the Steel Corporation and with the War Department.

"Officers of the corporation and of the subsidiary companies will receive no compensation for their services. Accurate books of account will be kept which, with all records, files, and other documents and papers, will be open and subject to examination by Government officials or other properly appointed representatives.

"General plans are being rapidly prepared and will soon be ready for examination by the Ordnance Department or other bureau, and, when approved, the corporation will be given a free hand in construction and operation, holding itself responsible for the faithful performance of the duty imposed by the terms of the contract. The corporation, in consequence of the magnitude of its business, most of which, directly or indirectly, is in aid of the military necessities of the Government and its allies, had hoped to avoid the necessity of engaging in work of the kind now entered upon, but was persuaded by the War Department that it was imperatively required under existing conditions."

Judge Gary limited his discussion of the new plant to the formal statement, and it could not be learned where the works were to be located. It has been reported that the site would be near Pittsburgh, close to existing plants of the Steel Corporation which would facilitate quick deliveries of construction material and assure an adequate supply of fuel at all times.

WILL MAKE LARGEST CANNON.

Secretary Baker Tells of Ordnance Factory Plans.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Secretary Baker announced today that the War Department had entered into an arrangement with the United States Steel Corporation by which that corporation undertakes to construct, equip, and operate for the Government a modern ordnance plant, upon a site to be selected, in the interior of the country.

"A committee formed from officers of the corporation and its subsidiary companies," said Secretary Baker, "men fitted by education and experience, will be in immediate charge of the work. These men will receive no compensation. The plant is to be built, equipped and operated at the expense of the Government by the United States Steel Corporation without profit. Cannon of the largest calibre will be manufactured, as well as heavy projectiles in large quantities.

"While the United States Steel Corporation, like other steel manufacturers, are full of work and have always gladly undertaken production of finished materials wanted by the Government, they were persuaded by the Secretary of War to undertake this additional task which they patriotically agreed to do, and have placed their best energies and the strength of their economic position at the disposal of the War Department."

RAILROAD EARNINGS DROP.

"Soo" and C., B. & Q. Lines Also Report Higher Expenses During 1917.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 9.—Gross earnings of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railroad, including the Wisconsin Central Railway, in 1917 showed a small increase over the previous year, according to the annual report issued here today. The figures for 1917 were $34,540,491.39, compared with $34,472,084.31 in 1916. Operating expenses, however, were $22,964,793.67, as compared with $19,241,591.67.

Net earnings fell from $15,230,492.64 to $11,575,697.72, while fixed charges were $8,799,490.15, as against $8,622,019.90.

The Wisconsin Central earned $13,814,210.99, compared with $12,895,763.97. Its operating expense was $8,870,023.86, against $7,183,445.89.

CHICAGO, May 9.—A decrease of $3,818,232 in the operating income of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company for 1917 as compared with the previous year is almost identical with the increased tax accruals, according to the annual report made public today.

Taxes, partly by States, but mostly by the Federal Government, jumped from $4,820,197 to $8,400,178, an increase of $3,579,977. Operating income dropped $2,818,232. Operating revenue, $122,342,706, increased $13,131,602, and operating expenses, $78,632,343, increased $13,306,639.

THE COTTON MARKET

Trading Is More Active and Stronger—Prices Advance from 75 to 88 Points.

The local cotton market was not only considerably more active yesterday, but also stronger than it has been for some time. The market was so thoroughly liquidated by recent declines that the cumulative effect of some quiet accumulation by trade interests which has been going on this week, together with the development of uneasiness among the big short interest, found expression in advances which at their maximum added $4 a bale to prices. The close was very steady, with prices well maintained and net advances of from 75 to 88 points.

With the underlying market conditions favorable for an advance, the usual crop of news and gossip tending in the same direction was not lacking, but not much of it seemed worth taking with great seriousness. Weather map readers saw cooler weather and retarded cotton growth in the Southwest, and there was an entire procession of bullish war, or rather peace, rumors. More concrete was the talk of steady increases in overseas movement, following the falling marine insurance rates and the progress of the shipyards. Moreover, nothing came from any Southern market to indicate that the determination of spot holders had been weakened by the recent declines.

The opening was steady, and not particularly active, from 2 to 6 points. There was a bit of selling on the weather, but observers noted that some of the floor operators who are credited with being most heavily short, took prompt advantage of offerings at anything below the opening. The most active hours of the day were in the early afternoon, and coincidentally the market went up fastest then. There was some buying of October attributed to trade sources, but this did not follow the market up, and toward the close, although prices stood up, business fell off considerably.

One of the minor bits of good news for the trade was the receipt of an application for the licensing of a new 50,000-bale warehouse on the Brooklyn waterfront. Four-fifths of its capacity, it is said, is already bespoken. No exports were reported yesterday. Southern spot markets were unchanged to 75 points higher, the changes being in the direction of parity, and moderate business.

BURLINGTON EARNINGS CUT.

Net Income of $29,406,033 Shows a Decrease of $3,597,692.

The report of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company for the calendar year 1917, issued yesterday, shows a net decrease for the year of $3,818,230 in railway operating income, but this, relative to the total of $35,280,757, is rather less than the average loss last year of roads generally considered in the Burlington's class, and the net income of $29,406,033 after all charges, showing a decrease of $3,597,692, as compared with 1916, still amounted to $26.53 a share on the 1,108,391 shares of capital stock outstanding. The earnings per share in 1916 amounted to $29.76.

The Burlington, in August, 1917, paid an extra dividend of 10 per cent. on its stock out of accumulated surplus, in addition to its regular dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum. Payment of dividends, sinking fund withdrawal, and "appropriations of income" were made which exactly consumed the net income for the year. A surplus of $4,098,745 had been left on the books the previous year, despite appropriations written off of $17,264,595. The company's balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1917, shows a profit and loss surplus of $115,604,586. The gross income for the year was $122,342,707, with net revenues of $43,710,364. This was practically identical with those of the previous year, on a considerable increase in gross revenues. The decline in net was practically entirely due to heavy increases in taxes.

RESERVE BANK HERE EARNS $3,733,000

Profit for 1917 Nearly Nine Times Greater Than $426,000 of Previous Year.

TOTAL INCOME $4,929,213

$2,455,000 Came from Bills Discounted for Members and $1,843,000 from Acceptances.

A remarkable expansion in the business and activities of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York is shown in the annual report for the year ended Dec. 31 last. The bank's income, which was only $983,609 in the previous year, amounted to $4,929,213 in 1917, of which $2,455,000 came from bills discounted for members and $1,843,000 from acceptances. The total expenses were $1,195,000, leaving net earnings of $3,733,000, which compares with $426,000 in the preceding year.

After deductions for unissued reserve notes charged off, depreciation reserve, franchise tax, and dividends, there remained a surplus of $649,363. The bank paid $1,942,000 in dividends to the member banks holding its stock. There is $18,695,000 capital paid in, comparing with $11,865,000 a year earlier.

An interesting table in the annual statement shows the comparative cost of the bank's activities in connection with the first two Liberty Loan campaigns. The total outlay for work in this district for the 3½ per cent. loan was $48,041, of which $10,281 was spent by the publicity department. For the second loan expenses jumped to $542,362, of which publicity was charged with $222,861. Salaries in the publicity department were $26,000, printing and stationery cost $97,000, and miscellaneous items $75,000. The bank will be reimbursed for its loan expenses by the Treasury Department.

"Attention is called to the continued increase in the volume of bankers' acceptances created, which have circulated in a steadily broadening open market. At the close of the year 1916 it was stated that there were outstanding about $250,000,000 of dollar acceptances, including bills of foreign origin on American merchants. It is estimated that at the end of last year the volume of such paper had increased to from four to five hundred million dollars. The increases, while general in all classes of bills eligible for discount with reserve banks are most notable in the bills arising from domestic transactions and from the increasing trade between the United States and the Orient.

"The more general recourse during the year to bankers' credits for financing the large seasonable movements in commodities is an indication of a wider understanding and appreciation, by the borrower and banker alike, of the advantages of this form of financing transactions that in themselves furnish the means of discharging the obligations incurred by the taker of credit and acceptor," says the report. "With the increased volume of business, the number of accepting banks and purchasers of bills also has steadily increased. The names of many well-known institutions located in the larger cities of the country have now become known as acceptors through their acceptances offered in the open market in New York. Dealers report an increasing interest on the part of out-of-town banks as investors in prime bills, evidenced both in the number of new buyers and the volume of their purchases. Indicative of the increase are the reports of two houses whose sales this year have in each case exceeded $300,000 and neither of which handled over $60,000,000 of bankers' bills last year. The larger number of dealers and bill brokers specializing in bankers' acceptances is another indication of the widening interest in the development of the open market."

TRANSFER TAXES DISCUSSED

State Controller and Aids Plan Means for Getting More Revenue.

More than 200 transfer tax appraisers and attorneys from the various counties of the State were present yesterday at the conference arranged by State Controller Travis to discuss new inheritance tax legislation. The meeting was held in the rooms of the Merchants' Association in the Woolworth Building, and will continue today. Deputy Controller William Boardman presided. Recent legislation designed to prevent the loss to the State in the future of taxes in such cases as that of the estate of Mrs. Hetty Green, in which case, it is estimated, the State has lost about $12,000,000 in taxes, was discussed.

State Controller Travis, in his address of welcome, pointed out that the transfer tax laws have thus far added more than $200,000,000 to the State's receipts, and that during the last three years four estates alone paid $15,000,000. State Senator Knight of Wyoming County, Lafayette B. Gleason, attorney for the State Controller in New York County; Samuel B. Botsford, transfer tax attorney in Erie County, and City Controller Craig also spoke. Controller Craig mentioned one man living in New York who has $30,000,000, but has never paid a cent of personal taxes here. He believed that such cases require remedial legislation.

EXPORTS TO BELGIAN CONGO

War Trade Board Gives Assent to Limited Shipments.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The War Trade Board announced today that arrangements had been completed with the Government of the Belgian Congo by which a limited quantity of the commodities most needed there will be licensed for export.

Prospective importers in the Belgian Congo will be required to obtain the approval of their Government for all orders.

Exporters in the United States applying for licenses will be required to attach supplemental information Sheet X-18 to the regular application Form X, and to state therein that they hold a bona fide order from the consignee named in the application for the quantity of the commodity specified thereon, and that such order has been duly approved by the Government of the Belgian Congo.

All such applications now on file with the War Trade Board will be canceled and applicants duly notified of the cancellation.

Trade With Venezuela

Arrangements can be made by exporters in this country whereby they may consign goods direct to the branch of the American Mercantile Bank at La Guayra, which is the port of entry for the Caracas district of Venezuela. No charge for this service is made to American clients of this bank. This enables them to retain possession of the goods until the draft is accepted or paid, which is a distinct advantage to American trade. Collections made at reasonable rates and approved drafts purchased. Further particulars may be obtained from the

Unnecessary

Tax Puzzles

No inconsiderable part of the present confusion over Income and Excess Tax returns grew out of confusion in the laws themselves.

Law was superimposed on law—so that comparison and duplication of effort were necessary at every stage.

The demand for simplification is widespread, and Congress is sure to attempt amendment and readjustment.

DOW, JONES & CO., Publishers of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL, purpose to point out the incongruities, duplications and injustices of the present maze of laws.

They will set forth suggestions for betterment resulting from their study of the situation and from the experience and study of others.

The first of a series of articles dealing with "Tax Puzzles" will appear in the

STEEL COMMON SOARS IN MILLION-SHARE DAY

Gains 4 1-4 Points to 107 1-4, a New High Record for Year, Because of Crop Prospects.

The rising tide of stock quotations, in evidence all the week, gained in strength yesterday, and the product of heavy buying, particularly in the steel issues, was a turnover in excess of 1,000,000 shares. Prices were bid upward from 2 to more than 6 points, with the activity and vigor of Steel common making it easily the feature of the session. Steel rose 4¼ points to 107¼ at the close, a new high record for the year. The day's business was the largest since Jan. 2 and 3, when sales greater than 1,200,000 shares each were recorded.

Speculative interest on the part of the public appeared to be stimulated by the excellent crop prospects reported by the Government on Wednesday, and also by the absence of disturbing news from the western battlefront. Commission houses with telegraphic connection to interior points were active buyers of Steel and certain railroad stocks. The demand broadened into the bond market, where railroad and seasoned industrial issues were advanced in many cases to new high levels for the year.

These were some of the stocks to score important gains: American Sumatra Tobacco, 5⅞; Bethlehem Steel, Class B, 2¼; Canadian Pacific, 4⅝; Corn Products, 2¼; New Haven, 1¼; Pullman, 3½; Texas Company, 3¼, and United States Industrial Alcohol, 8 points. The best quotations were reported toward the close of the day.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.

The crop news coming to hand yesterday was mostly favorable, especially from the Northwest, where it was said that soaking rains will just about assure the crop. Wheat is coming up to a good stand, and it was further said that many patches that have not been plowed in years were being planted in wheat. A number of favorable crop accounts were also received from Kansas, and it was quite generally agreed that the Winter wheat crop at the moment is considerably better than the figures given out by the Government as of May 1.

RYE.

Reports from the West showed the rye market demoralized, and it was also easier here, with No. 2 Western quoted at $2.36 cost and freight to arrive New York export. Holders of No. 2 rye in Chicago were said to be willing to sell at 25 cents under Tuesday's prices.

CORN.

Important advances occurred in the corn market reflecting nervous activity on the part of a large short interest, which was somewhat alarmed over the prospects for lower temperatures in the West, and possibly frost. After advancing 1⅝c over the previous night on July contracts, the market had an afternoon setback due to more favorable war advices from the western front, but steadied up again near the close, which was practically at best point of the day on July and net unchanged on May contracts. Cash corn was quiet here; kiln dried No. 3 yellow being quoted at $1.55, cost, insurance and freight New York and No. 4 yellow $1.57, cost, insurance and freight New York.

OATS.

The feature of oats was a jump of 2⅜c in May contracts, which sold at 76c, and closed only a little under highest of the day, at 1⅜@2c net rise. Cash oats were firm here, natural being quoted at 84@85c, and clipped white, 86@89c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

In sympathy with grain the provision market showed moderate firmness early, but met realizing sales which weakened the market in the afternoon, so that final prices were generally under the previous night. The arrivals at Chicago were 32,000 hogs, with 25,000 expected on Friday. There were 4,000 hogs at Kansas City and 14,000 at Omaha.

COFFEE.

The coffee market recovered part of Wednesday's losses during yesterday's trading. General business remained very quiet, but there was some buying by trade interests late in the afternoon, and, after opening unchanged, the market closed at a net advance of 3@7 points. The local spot market was dull and unchanged on the basis of 8⅜c for Rio 7s and 11c for Santos 4s.

SUGAR.

While it is true that only a moderate amount of refined sugar has been available from brokers the last day or two, at the same time the demand has been less urgent and the retail trade is able to supply the wants of their customers. Prices were unchanged at 7.45c for fine granulated. In raw sugar no new developments occurred and prices remained at the fixed level of 4.985c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 6.005c for centrifugal.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 5,589 packages. Supplies of high grades of fresh creamery were a little short, and the market had a slightly firmer tone, without much change in values. Secondary grades are still ruling quiet. Ladles rather easy, and packing stock in light demand. Creamery, higher than extras, a lb., 46½@47c; extras, (92 score,) 46c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 43@45½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 38@42c; thirds, 35@37c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 48¼@49c; extras, 47½@48c; firsts, 44@47; seconds, 40@43c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 45½@46c; good to prime, 43@45c; common to fair, 36@42c; renovated, extras, 39½@40c; firsts, 38@39c; lower grades, 34@37c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35@36c; ladles, current make, firsts, 34@34½c; seconds, 32@32½c; lower grades, 30@31½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33c; 32½c; No. 2, 31@31½c; lower grades, 28@30c.

EGGS.—28,097 cases. Arrivals are still running lighter and have shown a considerable decrease so far this week. Trade is rather quiet and selective, being best for the higher qualities obtainable under the top prices asked for storage packings. There is little demand for the latter for storage purposes, but some lots are being taken for current use in the range quoted. Most of the current packed Western eggs, ungraded, are selling at 35¼@36c, with ordinary and lower qualities, including stock from southerly sections, ranging downward. Some of the best Northern eggs are reaching 36¼c, and the outside quotation for firsts is raised to cover these sales. Good dirties and checks are in fair demand and steady to firm, some prime checks selling a little higher than recently quoted. Nearby white eggs rather plentiful, but the supply shows a small proportion of strictly fancy goods; only such reach top quotation; a good deal of the supply has no outlet above 39@40. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 38@38½c; storage packed firsts, 37@37½c; regular packed extra firsts, 37c; regular packed firsts, 35½@36½c; seconds and poorer, 33½@35c; fresh gathered No. 1, dirties, storage packed, 34c; No. 1, regular packed, 33@33½c; No. 2 and poorer, 31@32½c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 30@31½c; under grades, 23@29c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites fine to fancy, 41@42c; ordinary to prime, 38@40c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 38@40c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 37@39c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 38@39c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 36@37c; duck eggs, 30@45c; goose eggs, 50@60c.

Gross Receipts of $12,584,367 Show Decline of $2,386,748—Weather and Labor Blamed.

The American Beet Sugar Company was notably successful in solving its labor problem at the Colorado plants last year by erecting housing facilities for its employes. The report for 1917, issued yesterday, said that the work begun two years ago brought such favorable results that $100,000 has been appropriated to build houses in the sugar beet growing fields of California. The Colorado houses so far constructed of "adobe" number 138.

"The factory management, as a rule," the annual statement said, "supplies labor for the beet farmers in all districts. Beet culture requires more labor than other agriculture, and an assured supply of labor is an important inducement to farmers to plant beets."

The company's gross receipts from sugar last year amounted to $12,584,367, a decline of $2,386,748 from the total of the year before. The fiscal period ende March 31. Manufacturing and selling costs and taxes absorbed $10,117,076, an increase of $848,964. Outside income amounted to $667,896, leaving a balance of $3,135,187 for dividends, compared with $5,126,676 in the 1917 year. After paying the preferred stock dividend, the total available for the junior shares was equal to $18.90 a share, against $38.84 in the preceding year.

"Notwithstanding the material increase in the domestic beet acreage in 1917-18, warranting a sugar estimate of 20,000,000 bags," H. Rieman Duval, President, said, "unfavorable weather and labor conditions reduced the actual outturn to 15,276,000 bags—the smallest since 1914—against 16,400,000 bags in 1916-17. There are now unsold 3,400,000 bags, compared with 2,000,000 a year ago. The 1917-18 production of this company was 1,696,544 bags, against 2,155,963 bags in 1916-17. There are now on hand 334,346 bags, compared with 277,100 bags of sugar a year ago."

The report said that a plant was in process of construction at Oxnard, Cal., at an estimated cost of $123,939, to extract potash, ammonia, &c., from waste water from the beet factory. "This plant, it is expected," the report added, "will be ready for operation when the factory begins work the coming Summer, and it is estimated that the profit on its production this campaign will exceed its cost, and that thereafter, even with peace prevailing, the value of its products will insure continued profitable operation."

The average selling price of the sugar produced was $7.72 per bag, an increase of 87 cents over the preceding year's average. The cost of production was $6.21 per bag, against $4.24 the year before, and the net earnings per bag decreased $1.10.

OVERMAN BILL UP MONDAY.

House Expects Extended Debate, but No Prolonged Delay.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Agreement to take up next Monday the Overman bill giving the President authority to reorganize Government departments was reached today in the House.

There will be opposition, and probably extended debate, but the House leaders expect no such fight as that which held the measure in the Senate for many weeks.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Stocks closed strong in a very active market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange yesterday. Steel shares, especially Steel common, supported by heavy buying orders, started a sharp advance after midday and closed at 107, a gain of 4 points. The action in this issue gave the general list assistance in the upward movement, with the result that, at the close, prices of a majority of the issues were at new high levels. Losses in the earlier profit taking movement were more than regained. The gains in the leading securities at the close were from 1 to 4 points.

LEGAL NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, FOR the Southern District of New York.—THE CLEVELAND AUTOMATIC MACHINE COMPANY, Complainant, against BIJOU MOTOR LIGHTING COMPANY, Defendant.—In Equity No. 15-86.

On reading and filing the petition of Joseph Bijur, E. Bright Wilson, and Louis V. Hubbard, Receivers, verified, the 29th day of April, 1918, and sufficient cause appearing therefor,

Let the defendant, the creditors and stockholders of the defendant, and all other persons interested, show cause at a term of this Court, to be held at Room No. 3 in the Woolworth Building, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 14th day of May, 1918, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, why an order should not be entered accepting the offer made by the General Electric Company to the Receivers, dated April 29th, 1918, and being a confirmation of the informal offer made by that company, addressed to the creditors and stockholders of the Bijou Motor Lighting Company, dated March 28, 1918, for all of the assets of every kind and character of the defendant, including cash, accounts receivable, patents, trademarks, trade-names and all tangible assets, and directing the Receivers to accept the same forthwith, a copy of which said offer is annexed to the above-mentioned petition of the Receivers, to which reference is hereby made for the full terms thereof; and

Let publication of a copy of this order to show cause, in two issues of The New York Times and the Hudson Observer, and mailing by the Receivers of a copy of this order to show cause on or before May 4th, 1918, to all creditors who have filed their claims with the Receivers, and to all creditors who appear upon the books of the defendant who have not filed claims, and to all stockholders of the defendant, at the addresses shown upon the proofs of claims, or upon the books of the defendant, be due, sufficient and timely notice of said offer and of the hearing thereon.

And the Court will, at the time and place above named, pass upon said offer and upon any other offers which may be received, upon or prior to said hearing, and will make such order with respect thereto as to the Court may seem proper.

Dated, New York, April 29, 1918.
MANTON, United States Circuit Judge.

EXPORTS TO NORWAY NOW PERMITTED

Schedules Enumerating Commodities and Quantities of Each Made Public.

RULES AS TO GUARANTEES

Appropriate Certificates from Authorized Associations in Norway Required from Shippers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The War Trade Board announced tonight that, in consequence of the conclusion of a general commercial agreement with Norway, exports to that country of commodities embraced in the schedules attached to that agreement were about to be resumed.

The schedules enumerating the commodities, and the quantities of each, which Norway is entitled to import from this country or from other sources were also made public. Exports from the United States will be licensed subject to the general policy of conservation and to the general rules and regulations of the War Trade Board.

The board further announced that no purchases for export nor arrangements for the manufacture for export of any article should be made before an export license had been secured.

Various commodities included in the schedules of exports have hitherto been consigned to one or another of the Norwegian import associations, which are now in process of reorganization. The War Trade Board will not consider applications for licenses to export any of these commodities until the appropriate import association shall have issued a new certificate of guarantee covering the consignment specified in the application.

Guarantees issued by such associations prior to May 10, 1918, will not be accepted. Prospective importers of such articles must obtain the appropriate certificate of guarantee, dated subsequent to May 10, 1918, from the proper association and forward the serial number thereof and the name of the association issuing the same to the prospective exporter in the United States.

Export licenses will be valid only for shipments to be made on vessels flying the Norwegian flag.

The schedules of commodities with the quantities of each which Norway will be entitled to import, as laid down in the agreement, are as follows, the amounts being for a year's consumption and calculated in metric tons unless otherwise specified:

TELLS JEWELERS TO BE FAIR

President of Wholesalers Says Day of "the White Lie" Is Over.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 9.—Declaring that certain existing practices menaced the jewelry industry of the future, Joseph E. Reagan of Indianapolis made a plea for a square deal to the public before the National Wholesale Jewelers' Association, of which he is President, at the eleventh annual convention here today.

"Jewelry men must clean house," Mr. Reagan said. "Manufacturers and dealers must see the handwriting on the wall. It is a mark of intelligence, as well as patriotism, for us to start in now to put into practice those things that will be forced upon us later as a matter of self-preservation. There is no place for grafters in the jewelry business.

"We must establish good-will and confidence, and both assets must be built up through earnest co-operation. Honesty is not only the best policy, it is the only policy. Dishonesty is an economic waste. It bears down. There are a lot of white lie slaves in the jewelry business who must be routed out. This association must both practice and preach the doctrine of the square deal."

H. L. Brown of the Waltham Watch Company, Waltham, Mass., predicted that there would be a scarcity of watches for new stock, and that prices would rise. Manufacturers are seriously effected by the labor problem, he stated.

Men's Socks in Demand.

Trade in men's socks for Summer wear is said to be as active as the limited supplies available will permit. Demand has been very good in all sections, and higher prices have apparently had no deterring effect. Two-color combinations in ribbed half hose are said to be particularly popular this season. Such combinations as black with white, red or green; tan with white, green with blue and green with white seem to be getting the major part of the business. But it is said that few retailers have been able to get more than enough to carry them through the immediate future.

New "Helmet" for Sports Wear.

The French army helmet is the basis for the design of one of the latest novelties in sports hats for women to make its appearance in the local market. One such model seen has the sky blue cloth of the French uniform for the narrow turned down brim of the helmet while its crown is covered with tinfoil colored to give the appearance of old used steel. Others are made with olive-drab brims and crowns of dull greenish copper-colored tinfoil. It is thought that they are among the most striking novelties of a military nature that have been produced this year.

Vogue for Colored Handkerchiefs.

The vogue for colored handkerchiefs for women is said to be growing rapidly and to be spreading to all parts of the country. According to reports from the local trade, the pure white handkerchief in some sections has become almost a thing of the past. Though stripes and checks are still in demand, it seems that just now most attention is being paid to those handkerchiefs made in solid colors with white borders in geometrical designs. Pink, brown, green, lavender and blue are the colors most frequently seen in these lines. It is said that the better qualities of linen are the most popular.

More About Special Orders.

The growth of the "special order" evil, which was mentioned in Tuesday's TIMES, is said to be especially marked in the shoe trade, and particularly so in relation to the better grades of merchandise. In certain quarters it has grown to such an extent that attempts have been made to check it by charging a premium on all single pairs. This plan, which has hardly been in effect long enough to have a very marked effect one way or the other, calls for the payment of anywhere from $1 to $3 a pair over the regular wholesale price on all "specials." It is said however, that this amount does not begin to cover the direct and indirect cost of making single pairs.

To Standardize Business Forms.

In order to standardize the various forms that enter into the conduct of the retail millinery business, with an eye to making things quicker and more accurate for the powers that be, the Retail Millinery Association of America is asking its members all over the country to send in samples of the forms used by them. These forms, which will include sales slips, cost finding sheets, workroom slips, style questionnaires, &c., will be gone over here as they are turned in. The best ones will be taken as models in the conduct of the campaign for standardizing. Considerable advantage to the retail end of the millinery business is expected to be derived in this way.

Season of Many Styles.

Reports as to the success of the Eton jacket and the bolero coat suits do not all agree. Whereas one manufacturer will say that Eton jacket suits have not been good this Spring, another will claim that he has sold all he could make of this type of garment. And the same disparity exists as to bolero suits. "As a matter of fact," said one large manufacturer, "it has not been a season of one or two, or even three styles. Taking the country as a whole, everything within reason has been good. What did not go in one section went in another, and general business has therefore been very good."

Japanese Silks Are Very High.

Late reports from the Yokohama raw silk market indicate that prices there are very firm on the high record basis of 1,600 yen, ($800,) a picul of about 133 pounds for Kansai No. 1, and 1,570 yen, ($785,) a picul for Sinshiu No. 1. Unsold stocks there now total about 9,000 bales, which is somewhat larger than the supply that existed at this time a year ago. The first crop of new silk at Canton is reported to total 8,000 bales, with the quality good. American buying in that market lately has lessened sharply the supply of sixth crop silks. While there is an awakening interest in steam filatures and tsatlees reported from Shanghai, it appears that nothing of importance has developed there as yet. Milan reports firm prices in spite of the quieter business resulting from the enforced curtailment of shipments to Switzerland. The local market has moved up sharply in the last week as a result of the conditions in the primary centres. The advance is said to average 30 cents a pound.

Gray Goods Sales Increase.

A larger business was done in the local gray goods market yesterday than for some time. One of the big Southern factors, first hand, came into the market with offerings of spot 38½-inch 64-60s at 17½ cents, and sales of these goods at that price had a disturbing effect all through the market. The result was a quite general drawing-in of horns on the part of the mills. This, in turn, brought about sales of July-August 39-inch 72-76s at 22 cents from first hands, while 39-inch 68-72s and 56-44s were sold from the same sources at 19 and 14¾ cents, respectively, for delivery during the remainder of this month. First hands also did business on 27-inch 64-60s at 12¾ cents for July-September shipment. From second hands 38½-inch 64-60s were again sold at 17 cents for delivery in the last quarter of this year, while late contracts of 60-48s in that width sold from the same sources at 15 cents. These were the mills' closing prices on printcloths:

39-inch, 68-72s	19c	38½-inch, 60-52s	15⅝c
39-inch, 56-44s	14¾c	38½-inch, 60-48s	15⅛c
38½-inch, 64-64s	18¾c	27-inch, 64-60s	12¾c

AUTO OUTPUT NOT TO BE CUT

No Demand from Government Further Curtailment.

As a result of the three-days' meeting in Washington between representatives of the automobile industry and the War Industries Board and other authorities, the Directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who met yesterday at 7 East Forty-second Street to discuss the situation, gave out a statement which indicated that no demand has yet been made for a radical curtailment of the production of passenger cars.

The committee which discussed motor car manufacture with the War Industries Board, the War Department, the Railroad Administration, and other departments, made this statement:

"After a thorough investigation the committee was convinced that the Government demands were very great, and volunteered all possible assistance and pledged the entire resources of the industry to speeding up the war program, keeping in mind at the same time its accomplishment, with as little disturbance to general business as possible.

"Until the Government needs are more definitely known the industry, in addition to the manufacture of airplanes, tanks, tractors, shells, mine anchors, helmets, and other munitions, will apply itself to help solve the great problem of transportation which is directly in its lines."

Some time ago the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce authorized a voluntary curtailment of passenger cars of 30 per cent. The Government has shown no tendency to reduce the output of motor trucks which are being made in quantities for the army. The demand for trucks has increased largely because of railroad congestion and the utility of trucks for urgent transportation.

NEW FREIGHT EMBARGO.

Move to Reduce Congestion in Baltimore and Philadelphia.

An important measure to reduce freight congestion at the export centres of Philadelphia and Baltimore was announced yesterday in a new embargo order to go into effect on May 15. The Philadelphia-Baltimore-Pittsburgh Conference Committee, a branch of the National Railroad Administration, ordered that after that date domestic freight in carload lots will not be permitted to be shipped from outside points to freight stations, team tracks, or private sidings in the two cities without special permits covering each individual shipment.

The embargo, according to announcement made by Samuel Rea, Chairman of the Conference Committee, will probably be effective at least for the duration of the war. In order that the permit privilege may not be abused, the consignee instead of the shipper must get a permit before freight will be allowed to go forward. The reason for this step is to insure prompt removal from cars of freight received at these cities.

"The new regulations will bring about practically the complete pooling and interchangeable use for incoming carload domestic traffic of the terminal facilities of all railroads serving Philadelphia and Baltimore," said the announcement. "If the station of one road is congested, the shipments may be diverted to the station of another road. A somewhat similar plan, adapted to the especial requirements of the Port of New York, has already been placed in operation there, and has brought marked improvement in reducing congestion and increasing the volume of freight handled."

They Write Too Poorly.

A certain dry goods store was having so much trouble as a result of badly written and misspelled names on sales slips that the idea was hit upon of having the customers write their own names when the goods purchased were to be delivered. A short trial of this scheme, however, brought no relief, for most women customers wrote so poorly that the sales slips were often more puzzling than under the old system. Several reasons were given for this, including the fact that many wrote their names without taking off their gloves, that they wrote them hastily and carelessly or that they actually misspelled them. Similar trouble is told of in the case of stores which have a signature system of protection in the event of a "charge-carry" purchase. Not only are many signatures written so hurriedly or poorly that they do not correspond with those on the credit office's cards, but Mrs. John Brown will as likely as not sign as Mrs. Mary Jane Brown, Mrs. M. J. Brown, or plain Mrs. J. Brown. All of which makes life hard for the credit manager.

Speculation in Piece Goods.

It is said that speculation of a disturbing kind is going on in certain materials, particularly serges, wool velours and broadcloth. "The speculators," explained one authority in the local trade, "will go to a small cloak and suit manufacturer who is not fully aware of the fabric situation and will offer him a substantial profit for his materials. Sometimes the profit is greater than it would be if he were to cut the materials into garments, and he accepts the offer, thinking that he can replace the goods from some source not known to the purchasers of his stock. He later finds that he cannot do this, and, frequently, in order to maintain his establishment, has to buy back his own goods, paying the speculators a handsome profit."

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Private House Buying on East Seventy-sixth and East Eightieth Streets.

Two Lenox Hill residences passed into new ownership yesterday, further reflecting the steady interest which is being manifested in high-class private houses in the blocks near Fifth Avenue.

The five-story modern dwelling, with elevator, at 21 East Eightieth Street, formerly the home of the late Mrs. Anson W. Hard, has been sold by the executors of the estate, W. R. K. Taylor and Augustine J. Smith, to a client of Pease & Elliman for occupancy. The house, which adjoins the home of Henry W. Robbins, is in the same block with the dwellings owned by Frank W. Woolworth, and acquired recently for the occupancy of members of his family. The house just sold is assessed at $85,000, but has been held at $110,000. The reported consideration, however, was somewhat below the holding figure.

Negotiations were also completed for the sale of the four-story residence at 21 East Seventy-sixth Street, on a lot 19.6 by 102.2, between Fifth and Madison Avenues. The property was owned by the Farmers Loan and Trust Company, as trustee of the estate of Samuel Callaway, and has been held at $75,000. Other owners in the block include Herbert Parsons, Franklin B. Lord, Elizabeth B. Fahnestock, Harry Content, and Lois M. Lyman. Pease & Elliman also negotiated this transaction.

Important Midtown Lease.

An interesting transaction from both the real estate and banking standpoints was reported yesterday, which will bring a new tenancy to the midtown section.

The National City Company of Wall Street leased for a long term of years at a rental aggregating nearly $1,000,000, through Douglas L. Elliman & Co., from the Park Avenue Operating Company, J. Curry Watson, President, the corner store in the Ziegler Building, at the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street.

Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Company, when asked about the uptown move, said: "We are attempting in our distributing scheme to handle distribution of investment securities in much the way merchandise is handled, and throughout our twenty-five correspondent offices in the United States, we are seeking ground-floor locations to the end that a person having surplus moneys may be able to walk from the street into one of our investment stores to buy a bond or short-term note, with as little trouble as he would walk into a store to buy a pair of gloves.

"Our opening of an uptown office on one of the most prominent and busy corners of the City of New York is but a logical step in our plan of merchandising. There is no reason why on Fifth Avenue, crowded as it is with people of means, there should not be a store in which money may be invested as well as stores in which money may be spent."

$150,000 Sale on Amsterdam Avenue.

The Winter Realties, Benjamin Winter, President, purchased from the Palher Realty Company the six-story Clorinda Apartment, at the southeast corner of 106th Street and Amsterdam Avenue. The structure occupies a plot 47.10 by 100, and was held at $150,000.

All Cash Deal on University Place.

William Cruikshank's Sons sold to a client of the Charles F. Noyes Company, for all cash, 82 University Place, a four-story dwelling just north of Eleventh Street.

The property was valued and assessed at $25,000. The present leases in the building will be canceled, and the new owners will immediately alter the property from plans of John H. Knubel, architect, for business, studio, and living purposes.

Dwelling Deal.

The William H. Butler estate has sold the three-story dwelling at 66 West Twelfth Street, on a lot 19.4 by 103.3, to a buyer represented by Pepe & Bro. The adjoining house at 64 was recently sold to Cortlandt Palmer.

Buyers at Auction.

Frederick Brown, the operator, was a buyer at the special sales day, yesterday, held by Joseph P. Day. Mr. Brown paid $81,600 for the five-story apartment house at the southwest corner of Dawson and 163d Streets. The property was sold for the account of the William L. Loew estate.

Edward Berger, pawnbroker, bought for investment the four-story building at 567 Seventh Avenue, at the stand of M. Morganthau, Jr., on a bid of $33,200. The property was sold at foreclosure in an action instituted by the East River Savings Institution on claims aggregating about $33,000.

Buying in the Bronx.

Laurence C. Haines purchased from Dora P. McCaffrey a plot 57.2 by 50.5 by irregular, on the south side of 165th Street, 45 feet west of the Grand Boulevard and Concourse.

The Swanson Holding Company sold to an investor the two five-story flats on the northeast corner of Seabury Place and 172d Street, on a plot 100 by 100.

Richard Moller sold 1,423-25 Charlotte Street, near Jennings street, a five-story new law house, on a plot 40 by 100, to an investor. The seller acquired the property at auction last January.

An investing client of Sterling & Sterling purchased from the Lawyers' Mortgage Company, 426 East 136th Street, on a lot 18.7 by 100.

Brooklyn.

B. J. Sforza sold for the Brooklyn and West End Mortgage and Realty Company, to Pasquale Peliggi, for occupancy the two-story two-family brick house at 1,282 Seventy-fourth Street, on a lot 20 by 100 feet.

F. C. Sautor sold for Mrs. Louise Watkington, the three-story brownstone dwelling, 458 Eighth Street, to a purchaser, who will occupy.

Queens Borough Sales.

The house and plot 50 by 140 at 38 Old Locust Street, Flushing, owned by Kate B. Pratt of Oyster Bay, has been sold by J. Albert Johntra, to Nicholas De Marino of Flushing.

The Hayford Realty Corporation sold to F. Sharman the dwelling and plot 40 by 100 feet on the north side of Eighteenth Street, forty feet west of East Boulevard, Whitestone.

Omnia Corporation sold to H. Zimmermann the dwelling of 752 Seneca Avenue, Ridgewood.

R. A. Pierce sold to H. D. Horn the dwelling on the northwest side of Belmont Street, 220 feet southwest of Laurelton Boulevard, Laurelton.

New Jersey.

S. S. Walstrum-Gordon & Forman, sold for Frank M. Stevens to Mrs. Sarah K. Taylor of Harrington Park, N. J., the recently constructed dwelling on Overbrook Road, Ridgewood.

Westchester County.

The Clark, Lee, Tibbits Company, sold for Orlow S. Knepper, his residence 10 Prospect Street, White Plains to Miss Irma Fisher of White Plains. The property was held at $12,000.

Long Island.

F. R. Woodbury of Forest Hills has purchased a Colonial home on Newbold Place, Kew Gardens, L. I.

Connecticut.

C. J. Goulden sold his residence opposite Ye Olde Greenwich Inn, at Sound Beach, to John MacLelchie, of Greenwich, through the agency of Lawrence Timmons. The place was an old landmark and has been held at $20,000.

$200,000 Front Street Lease.

The former power station at 17 Front Street, on a plot 65 by 105 by irregular, near Broad Street, has been leased by the New York Railways Company to the Baltery Warehouse Corporation for a term of twenty-one years at a total rental involving about $200,000.

After extensive alterations the property will be used for warehouse purposes. Julius Haas was the broker in the transaction.

Commercial Leases.

The Cross & Brown Company leased the entire building at 629 to 633 East Sixteenth Street to the Neptune Forwarding Company; the store at 52 East Thirty-fourth Street to the Encyclopaedia Britannica Corporation, and the entire building at 241 West Sixty-eighth Street to Motor Parts Company.

Louis Schrag leased for the estate of G. Willett Van Nest the store at 159 West Twenty-third Street to Morris Schiff.

The Leonard Morgan Company leased the three-story loft building 538 West Fifty-third Street for the estate of John Wilson to the Royal Chemical Works for one year.

Torrens Bill Signed.

The Torrens system of registering real estate titles may be made applicable in New York State under the terms of the Youker bill, which Governor Whitman approved yesterday.

Recent Buyers.

Alfonso P. Villa, a raw silk merchant, is the buyer of the dwelling 18 East Seventy-second Street, sold Wednesday.

Mrs. Florence Cohen is the buyer of the dwelling 330 West Eighty-sixth Street. The premises will be altered into small apartments.

Realty Note.

The Bordeaux, a six-story elevator apartment house, 95 by 116, at the south corner of Riverside Drive and 127th Street, has been taken over by the newly formed 549 Riverside Drive Corporation, with a capital of $82,000. Directors are A. W. Drow, E. F. Cary, and F. L. Tuttle, Jr.

War Time Real Estate
(To Close Estate of Late Chas. E. Wood)
Stupendous Offer
140 New York City Garden Plots
From $250 to $490 Each
$5.00 First Payment $5.00 per Month
These beautiful quarter acre plots, on the south side of Staten Island, close to the beaches, and within the city limits, are ready for cultivation—an ideal spot for this summer's garden, where enough vegetables may be grown to pay a large part of the cost of your plot.
In order to hasten the settlement of Chas. E. Wood's estate and give city dwellers a chance to lessen the cost of living, we are offering 140 plots at about half their pre-war prices. But quick action will be necessary to secure one. These plots are high, dry and in a most attractive section. The improvements alone cost us a substantial portion of the price we are asking.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The Colorado disturbance of Wednesday night is central tonight over Iowa, with increased intensity and with an extensive and rapid rise in pressure immediately to the westward, resulting in general showers over the entire northern portion of the country from the Pacific to the Ohio Valley and the lower lake region.

Strong winds and gales blew over the plains States, the Northwest, and the extreme Upper Mississippi Valleys. In the Atlantic States, the South, and Southwest, the weather was fair.

It is decidedly colder throughout the plains States, the central Rocky Mountain region, and the Northwest, with freezing temperature in Northern Wyoming, accompanied by snow. In the lower lake and eastern upper lake region it is considerably warmer and high temperatures continue to the southward and southwestward, except in the coast States.

Showers will fall Friday from the Upper Ohio Valley and upper lake region eastward, reaching the coast States by Friday night and continuing Saturday from the lower lake region eastward. In the upper lake region and the Ohio Valley the weather will be fair Saturday, while in the South it will be fair Friday, followed by showers Saturday.

It will be much cooler Friday in the upper lake region and somewhat cooler in the Ohio Valley and western lower lake regions. It will be cooler Saturday quite generally east of the Mississippi River, except in the upper lake region and the southern portions of the East Gulf and South Atlantic districts.

Winds for Friday and Saturday along the North Atlantic Coast will be increasing south, becoming strong, rain by Friday night; Middle Atlantic Coast, increasing south, shifting to southwest and becoming strong, cloudy Friday, rain at night or Saturday; South Atlantic Coast, moderate south, except gentle east off the South Florida coast; fair.

FORECASTS—TO-DAY AND SATURDAY.

Eastern New York, Southern New England, and New Jersey.—Showers Friday night and probably Saturday; cooler Saturday in the interior.

Western New York.—Showers Friday and Saturday; cooler Saturday.

Northern New England.—Showers Friday or Friday night, and probably Saturday; cooler.

Eastern Pennsylvania.—Showers Friday in the western portion, and Friday or Saturday in the eastern portion; Saturday showers and cooler.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

BREAK IN HARMONY OF CITY OFFICIALS

Sinking Fund Meeting Develops Disputes, Indicating Future Disagreements.

HULBERT MAKES COMPLAINT

Craig Opposes Other Tammany Members and Hylan Acts as Peacemaker.

Two disputes, indicating a serious future division among members of the city administration, occurred at yesterday's meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission. In both cases Controller Craig took a decided stand against other Tammany members of the commission and Mayor Hylan played the rôle of peacemaker. The first controversy occurred over the appointment of subcommittees to handle special business that comes before the commission. At last week's meeting President Alfred E. Smith of the Board of Aldermen offered a resolution for the appointment of three committees to take up the leasing of docks, waterfront privileges, and the leasing of property other than on the waterfront. The commission voted to appoint such committees.

The Controller yesterday moved that the vote be rescinded and that all such matters be referred to a committee of the whole. The motion was lost, as only the Controller voted for it. The Controller, not satisfied with the vote, insisted that the matter be discussed. President Smith said he was willing to fight it out, but the other members of the commission showed no disposition to prolong the argument. The Aldermanic President insisted that the business of the commission should be referred to separate committees. When the Controller showed no disposition to agree Mr. Smith, in the interest of harmony, changed his attitude.

Smith Advocates Co-operation.

"This is a small board," he said, "and if we cannot co-operate, what's the use of trying to do business? I am willing to give in for the sake of co-operation, but I serve notice now that in the future I will strenuously object to the referring of matters to individual members of the board. All matters must be referred to this committee."

The commission thereupon rescinded its action of a week ago, and hereafter all matters will be referred to the committee of the whole.

The next item on the calendar was the matter of leasing a pier to the United States Government. After asking a few questions, the Controller requested to be excused from voting, on the ground that he had no right to vote on a matter with which he was not familiar.

"I have got to a point where all the enthusiasm and heart with which I entered my present position are being taken out of me," said Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert. The matter was finally disposed of, and the matter of the insurance of municipal ferryboats was reached.

"Are you feeling better now, Commissioner?" asked Mayor Hylan. There was no reply, and it developed that the Controller was not ready to vote on this matter either.

"I want to tell the Commissioner that the Controller can work faster than the Sinking Fund Commission," declared Mr. Craig.

Commissioner Hulbert disputed this and the Controller retorted by saying that he was still waiting for answers concerning questions arising last January.

"I'm doing everything I possibly can and I'd like to have a little bit of co-operation and not so many obstacles," said the Controller. The Dock Commissioner then complained about the lack of a report from the Fort and Terminal Committee regarding the disposition of High Bridge, Mr. Craig being Chairman of the committee.

Fears Federal Action.

"The first thing we know we'll have the United States Government taking possession of High Bridge from the Sinking Fund Commission," prophesied Mr. Hulbert. Following this arose the question of leasing 200 feet of the pier at Fifth Street and the East River to the Pawtucket Company for five years at a rental of $8,400 a year with the privilege of renewal for a like term. The Controller objected to the lease, saying that he had been trying to find out something about the capitalization of the concern.

"Well, the Controller's office doesn't seem to know anything," said Commissioner Hulbert. "I'm told to refer matters to the Controller's office, and I send you reports, and when they come up here nothing is known about them. I'm getting tired and disgusted."

"We know that you are working very hard," put in the Mayor in a mollifying way.

"Yes," retorted the Dock Commissioner. "I get down at my office at 8 o'clock in the morning and work until 10 o'clock at night trying to get these matters straightened out."

"We'll put this matter over for a week," suggested the Mayor.

"Yes, you'll put it over for a week," complained Mr. Hulbert. "that's what you do with everything. If you put this over, we are likely to lose the lease."

"I'm ready to vote on this right now," put in Mr. Smith. The matter was put to a vote and carried, Controller Craig refusing to vote.

Send Milk to French Babies.

An organization called the Committee for Free Milk for France has been formed for the purpose of sending a ton of milk a day to the suffering children and wounded soldiers of France, it was announced yesterday. The committee was formed by Miss Josephine Osborn, who is the Chairman, and Mrs. Warren McConihe, who is Vice Chairman. The home of Samuel Untermyer, at 875 Fifth Avenue, is the headquarters of the committee, and contributions will be received there.

WAR AND CITY BILLS SIGNED BY WHITMAN

Governor Approves Measure to Allow Municipalities to Annul Contracts Made Before War.

FAVORS WIDENING OF CREEK

Federal Government Must Help Improve Coney Island Waterway—Mohansic Hospital Abandoned.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 9.—Senator Lockwood's bill authorizing the Public Service Commission of the First District, with the consent of the New York City Board of Estimate, because of war conditions, to suspend operations under any rapid transit railroad contract, was signed by Governor Whitman today. The bill empowers the commission when an emergency exists to cancel the contract without default and proceed under new arrangements to complete the work. The bill permits these new arrangements to be made with the same contractor. The bill gives the city officials the right to issue bonds to carry out the work if necessary.

Another war measure along the same lines of the Lockwood bill also was signed by the Governor today. It is the Walters bill, which authorizes State, county, or municipal departments to cancel contracts for public improvements which were made prior to the declaration of war against Germany. Under another provision of this measure it is provided that where the cost of the work done since the beginning of the war exceeds the contract price, the actual cost may be paid to the contractor. This bill was found necessary to bring relief to a number of contractors who were struggling with contracts made before the war and losing money because of the increased cost of labor and materials.

Governor Whitman has signed the bill of Senator George A. Slater abolishing the Mohansic State Hospital and the New York State Training School for Boys in the town of Yorktown, Westchester County, and making a State reservation of the property to be known as the Mohansic Lake Reservation. The Governor is to name a commission to have charge of the property, and the members are to serve for five years without compensation. The Commissioners may permit establishment on the reservation of places for food and refreshment, golf courses, baseball grounds, and children's playgrounds. The commission also is empowered to permit the New York Society for Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents to use part of the land for agricultural purposes.

The Governor also signed the Twomey bill, which gives New York City the right to assess property acquired by the State for the Barge Canal at the junction of the East River and Newtown Creek, Brooklyn. The Leininger bill, providing that Barge Canal terminal property owned by the State on the eastern shore of the East River, adjoining lands acquired by New York City for the Queensboro Bridge approach, may be assessed by the city, also became law today.

Approval or disapproval of devices for transparently illuminating license plates on motor vehicles, so that the numerals are visible at least fifty feet, is put up to the Secretary of State by the terms of the McWhinney bill, which was signed today. Upon application, these approved plates may be issued in exchange for current number plates of ordinary type upon payment of the charge for the device.

The Governor also signed the Dowling bill limiting the amount of the appropriation to be asked by the Trustees of the City College of New York in any year for salaries and maintenance.

Senator Wagner's bill establishing a teachers' retirement fund for Hunter College became a law today.

The Governor gave his approval to the Sutherland bill making it incumbent upon the New York City Dock Commissioner to adopt plans for improving Coney Island Creek so as to provide a ship canal, 200 feet wide, connecting Sheepshead Bay with Gravesend Bay. No work is to be done, however, until the Federal Government has agreed to pay its share of the cost of the improvement. One million in 6 per cent. certificates may be issued to raise the State's share of the expense.

The Governor signed the Youker-Torrens system bill regulating the manner of taking titles to real property.

Increases for civilian employes of the State receiving less than $2,000 annually are provided in the Fearon bill signed today. A 20 per cent. increase is provided for employes receiving $1,000 a year or less, while a 15 per cent. advance is made to employés receiving not more than $2,000 annually. Between 18,000 and 20,000 persons are affected.

The Mohansic bill signed by the Governor provides for the abandonment of the project to establish the Mohansic State Hospital for the Insane on a 600-acre tract in the heart of the Croton watershed. It also limits the number of persons that may be placed on the adjacent 500-acre site of the New York Reform School for Boys at Yorktown Heights to fifty. This includes boys, guards, and teachers. Originally the Mohansic institution was planned for the accommodation of 6,000 patients and the Yorktown Heights school for 800 delinquents.

The State has spent in all $504,398 on the Yorktown Heights school and approximately $193,000 on the development of the hospital site.

The approval of the bill by Governor Whitman has crowned with victory a fight that has been carried on for the last five years by the Merchants' Association through its Committee on Pollution and Sewerage, of which Edward Hatch, Jr., is Chairman. Mr. Hatch soon after the land for the two institutions had been acquired, took the stand that the location of a hospital and a reform school in the Croton watershed was a distinct menace to the purity of New York City's water supply.

Mr. Hatch petitioned Governor Sulzer to have the law providing for the location of the two institutions in the watershed repealed on the ground that sewage from the institutions would imperil the health of New York City. The matter was referred to Dr. Eugene H. Porter, then State Health Commissioner, who disapproved of the plan. A bill was then introduced, repealing the law. It passed both branches of the Legislature, but was vetoed by Governor Glynn in deference to a request from Dr. Goldwater, then Health Commissioner of New York City.

Dr. Goldwater had acted under instructions from Mayor Mitchel who, like his predecessors in the Mayor's office, was in favor of having the hospital located conveniently to New York City. When the dangers were pointed out to Mayor Mitchel he promptly reversed himself. Governor Whitman by that time had taken office. He at first opposed any check to the development of the two sites, but he also changed his mind and ordered all construction work stopped. He has remained steadfast ever since, in opposition to the pollution scheme despite the fact that political pressure was brought to bear at Albany from the influential Republican organization in Westchester County.

It is understood that the Middletown State Hospital is to be enlarged to accommodate in part the number of patients that would have been provided for in the carrying out of the Mohansic project.

2,000 UPTON MEN FIGHT TEN-MILE FOREST FIRE

Dig Trenches and Build Backfires —Three Farm Buildings Destroyed.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, N. Y., May 9.—More than 2,000 soldiers have been fighting a forest fire which started east of the rifle range early last evening, and by tonight had progressed along a half-mile front ten miles toward Riverhead. The men were equipped with picks and shovels and gunny sacks and were transported to the blazing area in fifty-six motor trucks. Members of the cantonment fire department were detailed to direct the soldiers who dug trenches and built back fires in an effort to check the flames. It is believed here that a heavy rain is the only thing that will stop the fire before it works its way to Long Island Sound.

One hundred thousand ducks in four duck farms imperiled by the fire were saved by the Riverhead Fire Department. Three buildings on the farm of John B. Warner were destroyed. It is estimated that 6,000 acres were burned over by the fire yesterday afternoon.

Governor Frank S. Lowden of Illinois came to camp today to visit his son, Pullman Lowden, who is a Sergeant in one of the units here. General Bell arranged to have Governor Lowden address 5,000 men, who gathered on the plaza in front of the Liberty Theatre. In his speech he said: "We are living in the most crucial moments of all history. Sometimes we get impatient when we hear that equipment is not forthcoming fast enough and that movements in some places are slow, but we need have no doubt of three things: The loyalty, constancy, and courage of you boys. You go forth to fight the battles of righteousness for a God of righteousness against the old German god that has been resurrected from savage forests to threaten the world."

ILLINOIS AND IOWA SWEPT BY A TORNADO

Three Killed and Property Damage Is Great—Many Buried Under Buildings Near Davenport.

CHICAGO, May 9.—Belated reports coming in tonight over wires crippled by the storm told of the death of at least three and probably several more persons and damage to property mounting into thousands of dollars as the result of a tornado which swept over Central Illinois and Iowa this afternoon.

At Franklin, Ill., two women were killed when the chimney of their home fell, and throughout Christian, Shelby, Mason, and Morgan Counties in Central Illinois, the property damage appeared to have been great. A farmer residing near Nashua, Iowa, was killed during the storm.

DAVENPORT, Iowa, May 9.—More than a score of persons were injured, one probably fatally, when a tornado wrecked the northern part of the town of Eldridge, north of here, and swept over the surrounding country late today.

Many farm buildings were demolished. Emma Damann was carried 300 feet through the air and escaped with no injuries more serious than a broken collarbone.

To Protect Your Business or To Protect Yourself

—against the loss of time of an employee through accident or illness.

When one of your employees becomes incapacitated through accident or illness, it means a money loss to your business, both through continuing the sick man's salary and through the loss of his earning ability.

You can now protect the time of your valuable men against both accident and illness on the most favorable terms ever offered.

—against the loss of your own time through accident or illness.

You do not hesitate to protect yourself against loss by insuring your property holdings. Yet property is something which can be replaced as long as you are able to earn money.

Your own time once lost, can never be replaced. Every day you lose through accident or illness is a day's income lost. Here's a form of insurance protecting you against financial loss through loss of time at a lower cost than ever before.

It Pays You:

$200.00 monthly (one day to one year) for loss of time from illness.
$200.00 monthly (one day to four years) for loss of time from accidents.
$400.00 monthly (one day to four years) for loss of time from travel accidents.
$5,000.00 increasing to $7,500 for loss of life, sight or limbs, from ordinary accidents.
$10,000.00 increasing to $15,000 for loss of life, sight or limbs, from travel accidents.

This policy covers all accidents—any illness. No medical examination. Costs $57.00 annually.

Under another plan, which costs $24.00, You Get:

$100.00 monthly (one day to one year) for loss of time from illness.
$100.00 monthly (one day to four years) for loss of time from accidents.
$200.00 monthly (one day to four years) for loss of time from travel accidents.
$1000.00 increasing to $1,500.00 for loss of life, sight or limbs from ordinary accidents.
$2000.00 increasing to $3,000.00 for loss of life, sight or limbs from travel accidents.

When writing for further information, please be sure to use your regular business letterhead, state your age and business, and whether you wish to take out a policy protecting yourself or a policy protecting you against the loss of time of your employees.

Getting Back to Our Story

Now that we have seen the Third Liberty Loan safely "over the top," it is time to talk of other ways to win the war. One very effective way to help is by economizing on clothes, thus saving wool and labor that are needed to "carry on" to a victorious peace.

Maybe somebody, some time, will find a better way to practice clothes economy than to buy good clothes and let them do the economizing for you. But, to date, nobody has done it.

However, Hart Schaffner & Marx discovered the secret of good clothes many years ago. And the lasting satisfaction and longer service their good clothes afford is the only sort of clothes economy worthy of the name.

Who Discovered RICORO?

"I am the Columbus of Ricoro," said the Civil Engineer.

"I was doing some work for a cigar factory in Porto Rico. The Manager presented me with a box of 100 fine-looking cigars, saying 'These are Ricoros. They are sold in America by the United Cigar Stores.'

"As soon as I lit one I knew I was captured.

"'Thanks for the gift,' I said; 'but I see where it gets me into expensive habits.'

"'Expensive nothing!' said the manager, 'that size Ricoro retails at 3-for-25c. That's one of the reasons we're so proud of it.'

"'Proud!' I said; 'Man alive—you ought to be!'"

Sooner or later you'll discover—

Ricoro
the "Self-Made" Cigar

Some day, somewhere, somebody will hand you a Ricoro and as you puff up you will feel like kicking yourself for not having discovered Ricoro sooner. All sizes and shapes—6c to 2-for-25c.

BORGLUM ACCUSED OF PERSONAL ENDS IN AIRCRAFT HUNT

Trying to Form Airplane Company While Making Investigation, It Is Charged.

K.W. MIX MAKES STATEMENT

Head of Indiana Concern Tells of Negotiations Which Made Him Suspicious.

FACTS GIVEN TO SENATE

Thomas Says This Shows Borglum's Charges Valueless, but Inquiry Will Be Pushed.

A "Frame-Up," Says Borglum, Calls Mix Deeds's Tool

Gutzon Borglum gave out this statement in New York last night:

"This scurrilous frame-up, which I charge it to be, has been in the hands of the Government for months, and is now sprung when it has finally become evident that I shall insist and persist until the airplane failure is honestly and thoroughly investigated.

"The charges by Mix, a confessed tool of Deeds, and Mix's engineer, are liss unreservedly, both in inference and statement, as applied to me in anything I ever did directly or indirectly that was improper in my capacity as representative of the President. On the contrary, Mix sought my assistance to help him find informed aeronautic ability and other aid that would enable him to produce or reproduce a small plane he had in mind, and my efforts were to assist him to stimulate an interest in a production he had in mind. There is absolutely nothing else in this story."

Mr. Borglum declined to add anything to this statement, saying:

"We'll go into the rest tomorrow. After that I am going back to Washington to sit in the trenches until this thing has been thoroughly aired from top to bottom. I am enlisted for the war, and I'll see this thing through or go to hell—and you can put that in the paper, too."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10.—What amounted to charges that Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, sought to use for personal gain the commission given him in January by President Wilson to inquire into the aircraft program, were laid before the Senate today by Senator Thomas of Colorado. Documents were presented and read into the record which were intended to show that Mr. Borglum, while engaged on the inquiry intrusted to him, was dealing with a manufacturing concern with the purpose of forming an aircraft production company that would receive assistance in getting contracts through Mr. Borglum's reputed standing with the White House. The documents, which included sworn statements, letters, and telegrams, come from the files of the Army Intelligence Office.

The story in brief, from the view suggested by the documents presented to the Senate, is that Mr. Borglum became acquainted on a railroad train with Kenyon W. Mix, Jr., whose father is said to be the controlling factor in the Dodge Manufacturing Company of Miskawaka, Ind., and subsequent meetings between them resulted in discussion about the formation of a company to manufacture military airplanes for the Government. With Mr. Borglum at the time of the encounter on the train was Hugo C. Gibson, an engineer, associated with the British Munitions Ministry at its New York office, 120 Broadway.

In a statement by Mr. Mix, which forms the principal documentary exhibit, Mr. Mix says that "these two men intimated to me that they could produce designs for a plane that would be faster than the Albatross." The Dodge Company had the latest Albatross designs and was intending to build a machine of that type.

Mr. Mix became interested, he saw Mr. Gibson in New York, and says that Mr. Gibson told him that Mr. Borglum had confidential relations with the Government which would be to the advantage of the Dodge concern as well as to themselves. That was in December. On Jan. 2 President Wilson gave to Mr. Borglum a letter authorizing him to make inquiries in official quarters to ascertain the truth of allegations Mr. Borglum had made in connection with the military aircraft production program. Soon afterward Mr. Mix met Mr. Borglum in Washington and saw the letter from the President to Mr. Borglum. According to Mr. Mix, Mr. Borglum

Nearly 250,000 Italians In Foch's Reserve Army

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Italy's contribution to the reserve army General Foch is building up behind the lines in France for supreme emergency uses numbers nearly 250,000 men, official dispatches today say, and the force is being strengthened steadily.

Another dispatch quotes a statement made by Premier Orlando on his return from France, where he attended the Interallied War Council.

"I have conversed with the highest military commanders of the Entente armies," said the Premier, "and while taking into consideration the possible surprises and fluctuations of the war, they expressed full confidence that the Germans will not reach their essential stratagic objectives. General Foch has, in common with the great commanders, the power of drawing fresh strength from difficulties and of maintaining his energy in proportion to the danger."

LEADERS OPPOSE NEW REVENUE BILL

McAdoo's Plan for Legislation at This Session Is Disapproved in Congress.

CHAIRMEN TO CONSULT HIM

Sufficient Funds Provided Now to Last Until Early Next Year, It Is Asserted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Congressional leaders, irrespective of party, are opposed to the passage of another revenue bill in this session of Congress, despite the increases in the estimates of the executive departments. These estimates have mounted so enormously since Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo submitted his annual budget to Congress as to make imperative the raising of at least $5,000,000,000 by early next year to meet the expenses of the Government.

Leaders in financial legislation in Congress generally admit that the necessity exists for raising more money than will be provided for by the last revenue bill, just going into complete operation, and by the last loan and the fourth loan to be negotiated in the Fall. They, however, cannot see that any advantage will be gained by Congress passing another revenue bill this session, as the revenues to be raised by it would not be obtained by the Government until next year.

On the other hand they say the appropriations provided for the army, the navy, and the Shipping Board—representing the greatest items of expenditures—will not be used to a great extent until toward the end of the next fiscal year, in May or June. The argument is made that with another loan sufficient money can be found to carry the Government until early next year, by which time a new revenue bill can be enacted for the calendar year 1919.

Democratic leaders are opposed to additional revenue legislation for the foregoing reasons, and Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee assert that the cost of the war in the future and the extraordinary expenses of the Government should be obtained through loans, as the nation has reached the highest record for raising revenues through direct taxation. More than 35 per cent. of the revenues for the Federal Government now comes through direct taxation.

Plan of Direct Taxation.

Most of the responsible Democratic leaders, and even Secretary McAdoo, hold that half the burden of the war and the expenses of the Government during the war period should be by direct taxation. Representative Kitchin, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, favors raising additional revenues through doubling the excess profits, corporation, and income taxes, and these will be the essential provisions in the next revenue bill.

Mr. Kitchin and Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Finance Committee, representing the majority sentiment of the committee dealing with revenue legislation, each declared against holding Congress in session until after the November elections to act on a revenue bill. While both have received a memorandum from Secretary McAdoo pointing out the "imperative necessity" for such legislation this session, they are determined to oppose the proposal unless Mr. McAdoo can show them what is not apparent to them, "the necessity for having more money immediately."

A conference has been arranged with Mr. McAdoo by these Chairmen of committees which must frame revenue legislation. It cannot be held until next Tuesday, when Mr. McAdoo, now confined to his home by illness, will be able to present in detail the financial situation. Even should the demand for additional revenue be pressing, these Dem-

ROOSEVELT GIVES THE FACTS CALLED FOR BY BURLESON

Says Metropolitan, Collier's, and Tribune Were Discriminated Against.

ACCUSES CREEL OF ATTACK

New York Postmaster's Decision Against Metropolitan Did Great Harm, He Says.

These Publications, Colonel Declares, "Opposed the War and Directly or Indirectly Aided Germany."

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, coming into town from Oyster Bay to answer Postmaster General Burleson's challenge that he prove his charge that the Government was showing favoritism in its enforcement of the Espionage act, issued a statement yesterday in which he cited the Government's attacks upon certain publications "which had patriotically upheld the war," while other newspapers, such as the Hearst publications, which had "opposed the war or attacked our allies or directly or indirectly aided Germany" were allowed to maintain their position unmolested by the Post Office Department and the Administration in general.

Colonel Roosevelt said his statement was merely preliminary to a further and fuller discussion of the subject which he intended to submit in a letter to "some Senator" for a permanent record. The victims of unfair discrimination cited by the Colonel yesterday were the Metropolitan Magazine, Collier's Weekly, and The New York Tribune, which publications, according to the Colonel, "have consistently upheld the war, but have also told that small portion of the truth which it was absolutely necessary to tell about the Administration's failure to conduct the war efficiently." On the other hand, he maintained that the "prime examples of failure by the Administration to proceed against really hostile and damaging utterance" was afforded by "a failure of the Administration to deal with Mr. Hearst's papers as it has dealt with certain other papers."

Cites Hearst's Editorials.

The Colonel cited some of the Hearst editorials as evidence of sympathy for Germany, and as evidence of "Hearst's continued effort to excite hatred between the United States and England." He concluded his statement by pointing to the "ardent tribute" paid by a German correspondent to Mr. Hearst and Arthur Brisbane, in which the German correspondent is reported to have described them as "auxiliaries of valued influence" to Germany. The Colonel's statement was as follows:

"Postmaster General Burleson's statement was issued formally from the office of information of the Post Office Department. I shall, therefore, answer it completely and at length in a letter to some Senator, so as to have it appear permanently in the records, precisely as Mr. Burleson's statement appears. Meanwhile, I make the following brief preliminary statement.

"The Metropolitan Magazine and Collier's Weekly and The New York Tribune have consistently upheld the war, but have also told that small portion of the truth which it was absolutely necessary to tell about the Administration's failure to conduct the war efficiently, and have only told it when it was imperative so to do, in order to speed up the war. Collier's has been attacked by Mr. Creel, officially speaking as President Wilson's representative, and as giving a message from the United States Government to the American people. He has also attacked the Metropolitan and The New York Tribune.

"The Post Office Department, through the New York Postmaster, on March 2 last notified the publishers of The Metropolitan that its March issue was nonmailable under the Espionage act. This action was widely published throughout the country. It was calculated to do great damage to The Metropolitan. The Metropolitan immediately asked the Postmaster for the grounds of his action, but got no answer. On March 9 it telegraphed the Postmaster General, asking whether the action was taken by order of the Postmaster General, and, if not, what steps the Postmaster General would take to repair the damage done to The Metropolitan. On March 11 the Postmaster of New York wrote to The Metropolitan, reversing his action of March 2, but making no apology and giving no explanation.

"Postmaster General Burleson on March 11 replied to The Metropolitan, stating that accusation had been made that an article in it was a traitorous effusion, but that he did not know whether the complaints were justified, and that no orders had been issued about it by the department. He did not answer The Metropolitan's question as to what steps would be taken to repair

Russia Gets Another Ultimatum from Germany

LONDON, May 10.—Dispatches from Moscow say that the newspapers there publish statements that an ultimatum was recently handed to the Council of the People's Commissaries by the German Ambassador, Count von Mirbach, which demanded the immediate execution of measures making Russia virtually a German colony.

The main points of the ultimatum were the settlement of the prisoner question, complete cessation of arming troops and the disbandment of units recently formed for the occupation of Moscow and other cities of Great Russia.

RUSSIAN ROYALTIES ARE NOW AT KIEV

Former Dowager Empress Marie and Grand Duke Dmitri in Ukrainian Capital.

DICTATOR WAS HER PAGE

Grand Duke Said to Have Taken an Active Part in the Recent Coup d'Etat.

BY ARTHUR RANSOME.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, May 9.—The German General Grener, replying to representatives of various Socialist parties in Ukraine who protested, said there could be no question of the restoration of the Rada. Hetman Skoropadski was recognized by the German authorities and would remain. Further, Grener said, it was a mistake to see in this the re-establishment of the monarchic principle.

Arrests have been made among persons connected with the Rada.

The correspondent of a paper in Kiev says former Grand Duke Dmitri Pavlovitch took an active part in the coup d'état, and that the former Dowager Empress Marie Feodorovna has arrived at Kiev. Skoropadski was one of her pages. It is curious to note that Skoropadski as late as 1911 publicly declared that the Ukrainian separatist movement was the fruit of Austrian intrigue. Since then he and other politicians of the Right have shown that they prefer Germany to revolution.

An evening paper prints a strange interview with Nicolai Guchkov, ex-Mayor of Moscow, from which it seems that Guchkov is very well informed about the plans of the Ukrainian reactionaries. He says:

"According to my information, Skoropadski, before the beginning of the negotiations with Great Russia, will invite her representatives to change the present Government, meaning thereby probably not merely a change of persons but of the general political coloring of the Ministry."

Should this be so, it will be yet another proof that the interests of the Allies coincide with those of the Soviet Government.

The official Izvestia says:

"Each new act of the German Government in connection with Russia merely deepens the gulf between Germany and her eastern neighbors. The German military party is preparing for itself irreconcilable enemies in the east and is not making friends in the west."

I believe that is absolutely true, and that Germany, step by step, is increasing her own difficulties in Ukraine. The bourgeois Rada, for example, had guaranteed by the peace agreement to supply 30,000,000 poods of corn to the Central Powers before May 1. Owing to the passive and sometimes active resistance of the peasants they succeeded in only supplying 3,000,000. That is to say, that for the betrayal of the Russian revolution the German people so far have received less than 1 pound of flour all round.

Later lists of the Ministers of the Cabinet of the autocratic Hetman differ in detail from the list cabled Tuesday, but the main characteristic of all lists is the same. It is a cabinet of Cadets and members of political groups even further Right. It is committed to a germanophile policy.

The German declaration admits that the Rada had no base of popular support and no authority, since it was unable to free the banker Dohry, who was arrested by an anti-German society. The Germans promise to give all possible support to Skoropadski against revolts, which they evidently consider probable.

A Socialist paper, which was issued uncensored and immediately suppressed, contains a report of a sitting

FLANDERS ARTILLERY DUELS

Germans Most Aggressive in Vimy, Robecq, and Dickebusch Sectors.

FIGHTING AROUND AVELUY

Local Engagements Continue After British Recapture of a Trench Lost Wednesday.

GERMANS ON DEFENSIVE?

Berlin Reports the Repulse of Allied Attacks on Kemmel, Luce, and Avre Fronts.

LONDON, May 10.—German artillery was particularly active today in the Vimy and Robecq sectors of the British front and south of Dickebusch. North of Albert, where the British last evening recaptured the small section of the front trench taken by the Germans yesterday morning, there was local fighting today, says tonight's bulletin from Field Marshal Haig.

Official reports from Berlin noto a "strong increase in the firing" in the region of Mont Kemmel, on both sides of the Luce and on the west bank of the Avre, followed by allied advances, which are said to have been repulsed, and announce German successes of May 8 in the Kemmel region, but ignore the Allies' recovery of ground in this sector yesterday.

Following is the text of the day report issued by the British War Office:

The small portion of our front trench northwest of Albert gained by the enemy as a result of his attack yesterday morning was reoccupied by us during the evening by a counterattack. We took a few prisoners.

The hostile artillery was active last night in the Valleys of the Somme and Ancre Rivers and at different points on the Lys battlefront.

Berlin Says Allied Attacks Failed.

BERLIN, May 10, (via London.)—The German official communication issued today says:

On the battlefront throughout the day there was lively artillery activity only in the region of Mont Kemmel, on both sides of the Luce Brook, and on the western bank of the Avre.

The strong increase in the firing in these sectors was followed by enemy advances. During the repulse of these and during lively reconnoitring activity we took a number of prisoners.

In the evening and during the night the artillery battle was frequently revived between the Yser and the Oise. On the remainder of the front the fighting activity remained restricted to reconnoitring engagements.

The supplementary official communication issued by the War Office this evening says:

An English local attack north of Albert was repulsed. A French advance in the Apremont Wood also failed.

Records German Gain of Wednesday.

Completely successful local attacks southwest of Ypres on Wednesday resulted in the capture of 675 prisoners, according to Thursday's official statement from German General Headquarters. German troops, it is added, took by storm strongly fortified positions on a front of more than a mile. The statement reads:

Between Ypres and Bailleul lively artillery activity continued throughout the day.

Local attacks we made south of Dickebusch Lake were completely successful. On the eastern bank of the Vyverbeek, Rhineland and Baden troops took by storm strongly fortified enemy positions over a width of two kilometers. Here apparently they ran into a French and British attack and dissipated its strength. The enemy's attack was only fully developed on both sides of the Renighelst-Kemmel road. It was repulsed, as were counterattacks against our newly captured positions. We took 675 prisoners belonging to six French and two British divisions, which suffered heavy and sanguinary losses.

FOE'S BIGGEST FORCES STILL ON THE SOMME

British Expect Main Drive There —Their Losses Five Times the French.

LONDON, May 10.—"The bulk of the German reserves is still in the rear of the Somme front, and it must be assumed the enemy's big, main effort will be in that direction," said a representative of General Delma Radcliffe, Chief Director of Military Operations at the

King George Sends a Message of Welcome to American Troops Who Parade in London Today

LONDON, May 10.—King George is sending the following message of welcome to each officer and man of the American forces passing through England:

Soldiers of the United States: The people of the British Isles welcome you on your way to take your stand beside the armies of the many nations now fighting in the Old World the great battle for human freedom.

The Allies will gain new heart and spirit in your company. I wish I could shake hands with each one of you and bid you godspeed on your mission. GEORGE R. I.

The American troops who will parade in London tomorrow will march over a route three miles long. They will start from the Wellington Barracks, Hyde Park, at about noon, and pass through some of the most fashionable streets of the metropolis. The regiment will be headed by its staff officers on horseback. On its way the column will pass by the American Embassy, where Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador, will receive the salute from each man and acknowledge the dipping of the colors.

A few minutes later the Americans will pass in review before King George at Buckingham Palace. Afterward they will return to barracks.

American flags began to appear today on scores of houses along the route of march, and there is every indication that London will give the Americans a flattering reception.

SHUN ARMY RULE, CURZON WARNS

Tells British That the Empire Prefers Lloyd George to Any Other Premier.

GRAVEST WAR PERIOD NEAR

Troops May Have to Give Ground, He Says, but the Spirit of the People Is Firm.

LONDON, May 10.—Speaking at the annual meeting of the Primrose League today, Earl Curzon, Government leader in the House of Lords and member of the British War Cabinet, defended the British War Cabinet. The present Government, he said, was predicted by some to be doomed to a short existence. He continued:

"We have been told frequently during the last few months that our Government was in weekly, if not daily, peril of having an end put to its existence. Against it only yesterday was directed a lethal blow which somehow glanced off the target.

"The present is not a moment for prophecy. It is a moment for grappling with hard facts, because the military menace is greater than at any time during the last four years. It may truthfully be said that the enemy is at our gates, and the hour of destiny is with us at this very moment."

Earl Curzon said that he was thoroughly astonished when he read in the newspapers proposals made by responsible persons that the right thing to do at this emergency was to place Generals and Admirals inside the Cabinet. The strange thing about this suggestion, he said, was that it was made by those who "shrieked about German militarism."

"Let the Generals and Admirals," he continued, "attend Cabinet meetings as they do every day and advise Cabinet Ministers, but the moment a soldier is placed in control of policy and administration the soldier is spoiled, and he does not improve administration. The names of great soldiers have been used by party politicians. This is deplorable in the extreme, fatal to military discipline and a dangerous form of contagion. Such a practice is extremely obnoxious to the army itself."

Earl Curzon said that mistakes might have been made, but "since the present Government has been in office the Empire has given forth a war effort which has never been equalled in history. The position of England today is that she is at the moment the pillar and bulwark which is upholding the liberties of the world."

Earl Curzon did not assert that the present Government was indispensable. There were, he said, other patriotic, disinterested men who might take office and discharge their duties well, but the British Empire would sooner have Lloyd George as Premier than any other statesman.

"If Lloyd George had fallen yesterday," he said, "the rejoicings would have been in Berlin, and not in London, Paris, Calcutta, or Montreal. The country is sick of railings and wallings made under the shelter of the forms of distinguished soldiers. The moment a country allows a military administration to assume the upper hand it is on the path that leads to disaster."

He said that yesterday's vote in the House of Commons was much more than a mere refutation of charges against the Ministry. It was a warning to snipers and sharpshooters to desist from those tactics and that the Commons had no sympathy with these manoeuvres.

"Grave times are ahead," he continued, "and British soldiers may have to give ground. Encouragement is to be found, however, in the unity of command, in America's effort, and in the

HEAVY FIRING IS INCESSANT

Wire Entanglements Have Not Been Completed, but Dugouts Have Begun to Show.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY UNDER GENERAL FOCH IN FRANCE, May 10.—On April 28 we held with the French on the Picardy line. The graves of our dead dot new fields in France. The American sector, in the current battle of the Somme, lies five miles east of Montdidier as the boche planes fly. Of gas and shell we have tasted the worst the enemy had to offer at the pinnacle of his recent thrust.

The opposing lines run north and south. The enemy is between us and the rising sun. Behind our rear echelons is the main road between Amiens and Beauvais. Amiens, the German objective, is thirty-five kilometers away on our left. Beauvais is the same distance on our right, and two hours by train from Paris. We are between the Germans and the sea.

We occupy a country almost as new to war as were the fields of Flanders in the Fall of 1914. A little over a month ago this was peaceful farming land, far behind the belligerent lines. Today its sprouting fields of early wheat and oats are untended and bearing their first harvest of shell craters.

Tales of the Homeless.

Hurriedly abandoned villages now occupied by troops tell once more mute tales of the homeless. Villagers, old men, old women, and children, have recently fled, driving before them their cows and farm animals, even as they themselves have been driven back by the rain of German shells. In their deserted cottages remain fresh traces of their departures, and the ruthless severing of home ties generations old.

On every hand are evidences of this return of a war of half movements. One day one may see a battery of light guns swinging into place by the roadside, see an observing officer mount by ladder to a treetop and direct the firing of numberless rounds into the rumbling east. And then, by the next morning, they will have gone away—changed position, rumbled off to other parts and places, leaving in the field only the marks of their cannon wheels and mounds of shell cases.

Between the infantry lines there is yet to grow that complete web of woven wire entanglements that mar the landscape on long-established fronts. Standing silent sentinels over some of the front line trenches are trees, church steeples, dwellings, and barns. Dugouts have just begun to show their entrances in the surface of the ground and crossroads have started to sprout with rudely constructed shelters.

Fat sandbags are taking the places of potted geraniums on the sills of first floor windows. War's toll is being exacted daily, but this country has yet to pay the full price. It is in the process of reduction to a stripped and bared terrain, but it still holds much of its erstwhile beauty.

Heavy Artillery Fire.

An American censorship, insistent that modesty shall mark all American reports of activity or inactivity in the sector we occupy, prevents me from expressing my truthful opinion of the seriousness of the situation being faced by our soldiers. I am hoping that there is no objection to my pointing to the French reports, which, in reference to this sector, class the daily artillery manifestations as being active and heavy. The ordnance duel is a matter of principal concern at present in this sector, and the daily exchange of shells is many times in excess of anything

British Admiralty Report On Action at Ostend

LONDON, May 10.—Operations designed to close the ports of Ostend and Zebrugge were successfully completed last night, when the obsolete cruiser Vindictive was sunk between the piers and across the entrance to Ostend harbor.

Since the attack on Zeebrugge on April 23 the Vindictive had been filled with concrete and fitted as a block ship for this purpose.

Our light forces have returned to their base with the loss of one motor launch, which had been damaged and was sunk by orders of the Vice Admiral to prevent it from falling into the hands of the enemy. Our casualties were light.

SOUTHEAST COAST PORT, England, Friday, May 10.—The brilliant operation at Ostend last night, when an attempt was made to close the entrance to the harbor by sinking across it the obsolete concrete-filled cruiser Vindictive, was, according to the testimony of those who returned to this port after taking part in it, equally as successful as that at Zeebrugge.

The Vindictive lies about 100 yards up the channel with her bows pointing toward the harbor. She probably has not blocked up the whole of the channel, but has made it impracticable for big ships, though smaller vessels may find a way out.

The position in which the Vindictive lies is such that the natural action of the current will deposit silt that will assist the British object.

"It is one of the smartest and cleanest bits of naval work we have had in modern times," an old graybeard told me. "And if you doubt what I say, here is my boy who was on a destroyer which stood off about a quarter of a mile from the Vindictive when the gallant old ship fulfilled her task."

Story of the Attack.

The boy to whom he referred told a simple, straightforward story of the attack and of the gallant rescue of the Vindictive's crew by one of the destroyers and their escape almost as by a miracle from any of the shots which were fired at them.

"It was a beautiful, clear starlight evening when we left," he said, "and there was no mist and no haze on the sea. We could see great distances. We arrived off Ostend Harbor at 2 o'clock in the morning, the officer directing the operations being with us on one of the destroyers.

"The squadron was made up of the Vindictive, destroyers, and a small number of motor launches. There are always a lot of them near the entrance to Ostend Harbor, and they have been doing work for months past of which the British Navy is proud. About a mile away from the coast we had the Vindictive ahead of us, steaming slowly, not more than perhaps eight knots, and the destroyers following behind, my own very near to her, but not actually in the first line. She slowed down gradually until she got quite close in to the coast.

"It is almost miraculous that until practically at the moment when she reached her destination the Germans were unaware of our approach. We were using a smoke cloud as before, and on this occasion even more successfully than at Zeebrugge. At any rate, we had no indication we were sighted until the Vindictive was about a quarter of a mile from the actual entrance to the barbor gates. Then there was a star shell from the German batteries, followed by perhaps twenty others, and suddenly about twenty guns at various parts of the coast commenced to fire at the cruiser. This firing lasted only a few minutes, probably because as she was approaching the entrance of the h[illegible] had gained partial shelter from its walls, and partly because the Germans were afraid the shells would hit some of their own ships which were inside.

"We saw the Vindictive broadside on across the channel, just as if she was coming to anchor at her own port and in the middle of one of her own squadrons. Then there was firing by machine guns, which seemed as if it must have killed or maimed every one who was on the deck of the Vindictive. As we afterward learned, only five men were killed. All of them were on the upper deck of the Vindictive."

Operation Highly Successful.

LONDON, May 10.—The British Navy has completed its operations for the bottling up of the German submarine mouths on the Belgian coast by the sinking of the scarred old cruiser Vindictive, stuffed with concrete, at the entrance to Ostend Harbor.

The feat, accomplished in the early hours of Friday, was the second exploit of the Vindictive with the object of closing the submarine bases, and it appears to have been highly successful. The Vindictive went in under a heavy fire from the German batteries, and her crew escaped, leaving only a few dead men on board motor boats, which transferred them to torpedo boat destroyers.

The Vindictive's dash was covered by a bombardment from several cruisers. The German official account of the affair seems to have been written to save the face of the Germans. It says that several cruisers which attempted to enter the harbor were driven off but that one, an old one, stranded.

Naval men here believe that their plans, which were worked out by Admiral Keyes and approved by Admiral Jellicoe when he was First Sea Lord, were wholly successful.

The Press Association says that the Vindictive lies at an angle not effectively blocking the channel, but that a partial and very serious blockade has been achieved, and under the conditions of tide and silting prevailing, this obstruction will certainly tend to increase.

The Berlin official report calls the attempt to block the channel a failure.

A dispatch from Dover says: "The decision to send the Vindictive to Ostend was made a few days after her return from the Zeebrugge raid, and the task of filling her with concrete was begun immediately.

"As in the joint raid on Zeebrugge and Ostend, this latest British naval exploit was kept a well-guarded secret. As an evidence of this it is recalled that after the battle-scarred cruiser returned from Zaebrugge an urgent request was made that she be sent up the Thames to London for public view. The authorities did not encourage the proposal, however, and the agitation subsided. All the time the old vessel was being overhauled for her last voyage.

"As on the former occasion, the operation to block Ostend Harbor was under the direction of Admiral Keyes.

"Some of the men who participated in the affair returned here today. They say it was completely successful.

"The firing which covered the sinking of the Vindictive began about 1 o'clock this morning and lasted until 3 o'clock. The bombardment was very heavy and could be heard at Dover.

"The night was clear with the stars shining brilliantly, but there was a haze over the sea."

Regarding reports that German submarines have been unable to enter Flemish ports and have had to return to Germany, Reuter's Limited says it is unable to obtain confirmation in naval quarters.

Photographic and other evidence from Zeebrugge shows that the Bruges Canal is still entirely blocked as a result of the British raid of April 23 and that it cannot be used. The obstructions, it has been found, were better placed than was at first supposed. German attempts to clear the waterway are meeting with no success as a result of British air activity and other causes.

Plan Carefully Studied.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, May 11.—The Chronicle naval correspondent writes:

"The Vindictive has been used to complete what the Sirius and Brilliant could not accomplish. Since her return from the great enterprise at Zeebrugge an army of workmen were employed fitting her for her final adventure. The operation was as brave and gallant as any of the kind yet recorded, though it was more simple in character than the enterprise at Zeebrugge. There was nothing foolhardy or daredevil about it. It was the outcome of long calculation and designed for the particular object which has been achieved. Whether it has been completely achieved we cannot definitely say. Possibly there may yet be a channel at one end or the other through which small craft may pass, but the silting goes on rapidly, and if the opening is not quite fully closed we may hope it soon will be, that the splendid operation will leave an obstruction which will occupy the enemy for many a long day."

BERLIN, May 10, (via London.)—The British attempt to blockade the harbor of Ostend was a failure, according to an official statement issued today, which reads:

At 3 o'clock Friday morning British naval forces, after a violent bombardment, again made a blockading attack on Ostend. Several enemy ships which, under the protection of artificial fog, tried to force their way into the harbor were driven off by the excellently directed fire of our coastal batteries.

An old cruiser, entirely battered to pieces, lies aground before the harbor outside the navigation channel. The entrance to the harbor is quite free.

Only dead men were found on board the stranded vessel. Two survivers of the crew had leaped overboard and were captured, according to information so far received.

At least two enemy motor boats were shot away and one monitor was badly damaged. The blockading attempt, therefore, had been completely foiled. Once again the enemy sacrificed human lives and vessels in vain.

AMSTERDAM, May 10.—Strong allied flying squadrons bombed the Mols and the village of Zeebrugge, the German submarine base on the Belgian coast, at noon and in the evening Thursday. No military damage was done, according to an official statement issued in Berlin. Two of the hostile airplanes were shot down by German airmen.

The War Situation

After three and a half years of war, during the last two of which the submarine has played a not unimportant part, offensive action is being taken against the bases of the undersea craft. Previous to the action against the Zeebrugge mole the only idea in combating the U-boat peril was defensive. It was limited as far as we know to defending the shipping by convoys, by arming the merchantmen, and by other defensive measures. There had been no attempt to reach the submarine in its nests. It was permitted to come out unmolested and roam at will, faith being placed in restrictive operations after it had reached the open.

It is only fair to state that there have been two distinct schools on the matter of handling the submarine. One of them advocated going after them at home and destroying their bases by aerial torpedoes or other means. The other school took the position that to go after them with battleships was to court disaster; that it could not be done without taking the chance of destroying the entire fleet participating in the venture.

The problem which confronts the British, in so far as the coast of Belgium is concerned, is simple in its essence, however difficult the solution might have been and was. The Belgian coast, like that of Holland, is very shallow. There are many places, indeed, where within the three-mile limit the water is so shallow that a submarine would rest on the bottom and could not be operated except as a surface craft. There were two points, however, where there were excellent harbors, deep, with ready access to the deeper water of the ocean. These were at Zeebrugge, the seaport of Bruges, with which the coast is connected by a long and deep canal, and Ostend. These had accordingly been turned into German submarine bases, from which all of the operations against the Allies' merchant fleet were conducted.

The British finally decided to attempt to close the entrance to these two ports, the entrance in both cases being very narrow, by sinking ships across them. The first of these enterprises was at Zeebrugge, and is now past history. Apparently it was in every way successful, as reports indicate that it has not yet been restored to use. In fact, the aviators of the Allies have been unusually active in preventing any repairs and other work incidental to the clearing of the mouth of the canal from proceeding.

On Thursday night a similar action was carried out against Ostend, the only other remaining port available for U-boat uses. The British Admiralty, which it may be well remembered is always cautious and conservative in its statements, announces that the attempt to close Ostend was a success. It appears, then, that both of the bases on the Belgian coast have been for the time being destroyed or impaired, and that the submarines may have to return all the way to Germany to be resupplied and repaired. This will greatly reduce their efficiency. The efficiency of any craft, whether as a means of transportation or for offensive operations, is in inverse proportion to the distance which it has to travel before reaching its destination. This is an axiomatic fact. The British action has therefore taken a long stride toward impairing the effectiveness of this particular kind of destruction.

In the various areas of land operations there has been another day of relative quiet. The Germans are evidently still preparing for a renewal of their offensive, preferring to wait before again moving forward until all possible advantages are in their favor. It is a case of intensive preparations of the most concentrated kind.

Previous German successes have been attributed in no small degree to the prolific use of gas shells. They have before each one of their great attacks deluged the artillery positions of the Allies with shell of this character, and when they have taken effect and to a certain extent paralyzed the allied artillery, the infantry has moved forward. This, however, involves the extensive use in immense numbers of heavy shell, the transportation of which involves great difficulties, particularly when the route over which they must come has first been torn up and later subjected to the concentrated fire of the Allies' heavy artillery. The accumulation of a great store of material of this class is a time-consuming operation which may well explain in good part the delay between attacks.

Of one thing we may be certain. When Germany does attack again she will be ready and, profiting by the experience gained in her last effort when she practically had this battle won and did not know it, will be on the lookout for every emergency. While the attack lasts there will be in all probability hard days, days of doubt and possible depression, just as there were in the last attack before it was stopped.

But tho Allies are prepared now, they will not be taken by surprise, and the only question will be whether Germany can be made to pay a grossly excessive price for whatever gains she may be able to make. For it will do Germany no good to reach the channel ports unless she has sufficient strength after they have been reached to take advantage of her success. Her first problem, however, has not been solved. The channel ports are still many miles behind the Allies' lines.

RUMANIA TO HAVE NEW PARLIAMENT

Foreign Minister Announces Policy of Honest Neutrality Toward Belligerents.

KING ORDERS ELECTIONS

Proclamation Declares Country Can Now Work to Remove the Scars of War.

AMSTERDAM, May 10.—The Rumanian Parliament hee been dissolved by royal decree, according to a dispatch from Bucharest. New elections have been ordered and the new Parliament will convene on Juns 17.

In a proclamation to the population of occupied end unoccupied territories the Rumanian Government announces the conclusion of peace, according to a Bucharest dispatch, and adds that the country re-enters a state of neutrality "under the protection of its constitutional institutions, which were unassailed by the war."

Rumania, it adde, can now work to remove the scars of war by consolidating the position created by peace. All questions and disputes between Rumania and the States with which she hes been at war are settled and relations with them will be reaumed.

In an interview in the Lumina of Bucharest, Constantian Arion, the Rumanian Foreign Minister, is quoted in a Bucharest dispatch today as alluding to the "painful arrangements" embodied in the peace treaty between Rumania and the Central Powers, notably with regard to territorial concessions. These he attributes to the "light-mindedness" with which tho war was waged and ths "faulty preparations" made for it.

The Foreign Minister nevertheless asserted thet an economic situation had been created for Rumania, after difficult negotiations, which permitted fruitful labor and made Rumania's future secure.

After expressing satisfaction at the union with Bessarabia, M. Arion said Rumania in the future would preserve a strictly honest neutrality toward all the belligerents.

LONDON, May 10.—"The Bucharest peace is no peace by understanding, in the spirit of tbe peace proposal of the Central Powers in Dscember, 1916, end of the Reichstag peace resolution," a Centrel News dispetch from Amsterdam quotes the Frankfurter Zeitung as seying in commenting on the Rumanian treaty. "It is peace concluded according to tradition, between victor and vanquished."

It has been learned from well-informed Rumanian circles thet the first result of the peace treaty bstween their country and the Central Powers is that there is not a single pro-German left in Rumania. The fall of Count Czernin, the former Austrian Premier, clearly brought about a hardening of policy toward Rumania. Baron Burian and Dr. von Kuehlmann, the German Foreign Secretary, egged on by Pan Germans, tried to achieve success and then obtained it by force.

The majority of Rumanians realize that the only hope of seving their country from becoming a virtual German dependency is allied victory, of which they are confident.

HINDENBURG HONORED FOR RUMANIAN PEACE

Kaiser Orders Name and Arms of Field Marshal Inscribed on Gate of Marienburg Castle.

AMSTERDAM, May 10. — Emperor William, in congretulating Field Marshal von Hindenburg upon the Rumanian peace treaty, according to Berlin newspapers of Thursday, notified the military leader that the big entrance gate to the old castle of the Knights of the Teutonic order at Marienburg, Prussia, would have his name and arms inscribed on it. The Emperor also expressed the desire to name other parts of the castle after German Generals. His telegram to the Field Marshal reads:

"News of the conclusion of peace with Rumania fills me with pride and joy. Our eastern front is free. I thank God, the Lord. I thank you, my dear Field Marshal, who victoriously wielded ths German sword.

"In memory of the fact that the Eastern march was protected from conquest by the batle of Tannenberg, I have ordered that the renovation of the Plauen etronghold, the old German Knights Castle of Merienburg, which was planned in 1910 in memory of Heinrich von Plauen, shall now be carried out and that the hig entrance gate shall bear your name and your arms. It is my desire that other turrets of the etronghold beer the names of Generels who especially distinguished themselves in tha defenee of ths Eastern frontisr."

DEBT ALARMS AUSTRIANS.

Army Accused of Squandering Money Despite Empire's Poverty.

LONDON, May 10.—Vienna newspapers represent the financial as well as the political situation in Austria as being most desperete, seys a Zurich dispatch to The Morning Post. The Reichsrat, just before its edjournment, had its attention called almost peremptorily to the empire's finances.

The committee for the control of the national debt reported to the Lower House that not only the large indebtedness of the States to the Austro-Hungarian Bank, but the frequent use made by the administration of the note issuing bank, could but arouse the gravest apprehension from financisl end economic viewpoints. The indebtedness to the note bank is now 1,500,000,000 kroner, it was added, and the notes in circulation have increased correspondingly.

The committee complained that, despite warnings from Parliament, the military authorities squandered money recklessly.

LONDON, May 10.—Brigedier General Sandeman Carey figures in the list of several officers of the same rank promoted to be Major Generals.

A month ago the correspondents at or ncar the front were sending their papers all they could learn about "How Cary stopped the gap." The ball had been started rolling by the British Prime Minister in the House of Commons on April 9, when he had implied that George Glass Sandeman Carey, a fighter hitherto unknown to fame, had practically saved the British Fifth Army, under General Gough, by gathering from ths rear a scratch force and pushing it between the Fifth and Third Armies and keeping it there for six days until relieved.

This force was made up of all sorts, usually classified as "noncombatants"—signalers, road builders, and even clerks—among them some American engineers.

Special to The New York Times.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 10.—An unsinkable ship, which braved the dangers of the submarine zone as a challenge to the U-boats, bee returned safely to this port.

It is understood that the vessel left an Atlantic port in a convoy of forty-three vessels, and when ths fleet reached the danger zone the unsinkable ship left the convoy as a deliberate challenge to ths undersea boats. No attempt was made to avoid the enemy war vessels, and the ship headed a direct course for her destination, which was a French port.

After delivering her cargo the vessel sailed and a second time no effort was made to escape the submarines, which, howaver, failed to appear and attack the vessel.

There was lively artillery fighting in the Adamello area, on the northern slopss of Monte Altissimo, [both on the Trentino front,] and in ths eastern sector of the Asiago Plateau. The fire of the Italians caught enemy columns of troops in the Brenta and Seren Valleys.

All elong ths front there was intense aerial activity. Five enemy machines were brought down.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS, May 9.—Snow in the mountains and rain on the lower Piave keeps infantry operations on the Italian front at a standstill. It is not so with the Italian aviators, who letsly carried out bold raids over Pola, Trieste, and Trent.

An Italien hydroplene, whils scouting over Trieste, escorted by two chasers, was made the target of an intense fire from anti-aircraft batteries. The pilot and the observer, their mission accomplished, were preparing to return when four rapid enemy chasers rose between Pirano and Salvore, rushing to attack them.

British Fight Successfully Against Odds of Tan to Ons.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 10, (Associated Press.)—One of the most daring bits of work ever done by British battleplanes was carried out this week, when two English machines fought twenty German scouts to a standstill, destroying eight of the enemy and forcing several others to abandon the conflict because they had been so badly shot up.

The British machines returned safely from this extraordinary engagement, having abandoned their attack only when their ammunition became exhausted at ths end of a half hour of whirlwind fighting with machins gune.

War Office, in summing up the week's war developments today. "It is equally certain that he will not discontinue his attacks in Flanders.

"In considering the course of these battles it must always be remembered that the capture of any particular position is not a material factor. Mere geographical gains are not the main consideration. It is rather a question of staying power. We must look to the end of the battle.

"While the German gain in Flanders is important, owing to the narrowness of our front, we must not judge by the loss of one position or another. The end of the battle will come when one side exhausts its reserves or reaches the end of its resources before the other.

"The Germans have put in a considerable number of fresh divisions, both in Flanders and on the Somme front, during the last week, and this is satisfactory to us, for it shows that we are getting through their fresh divisions very fast. The enemy's proximity to the heights in Flanders makes it likely that he will continue his attacks there, despite the lack of success during the last week.

"The operations in Mesopotamia during the past week include the occupation of Kirkuk, which was taken by the Euphrates force, with which a mobile force from the Tigris co-operated. The Turks abandoned the town, leaving 600 wounded, three airplanes, and a large quantity of ammunition.

"The developments have had an excellent effect on Persian border tribes, of which a considerable number of now co-operating with us against the Turks. The Turkish plan to evade Persia, contrary to their agreements with Persia, has been scotched for the time being."

In the period between March 21, when the German offensive was begun, and April 25 the losses of the French were only one-fourth to one-fifth those of the British. This statement was made today by the representative of General Radcliffe. Since April 25, he said, there had been no reason to believe the losses of the French had been any heavier than those of the British. (The British losses since March 21 were estimated, on May 4, by the British Military Mission at Washington at nearly 250,000.)

This information was given out in refutation of German propagandist asser-

Paris Is Sure the New Offensive Is Near, But Can't Decide the Point of Attack.

PARIS, May 10.—The numerous local attacks, which the Germans have delivered in the last few days, are regarded here as certain indications of the imminent resumption of the offensive.

All the information that is at hand confirms the belief thet the enemy has finished his preparations. The one outstanding fact is the stoppage of all leave by the Germans and the sudden recall of all men now on leave.

The reported presence on the France-British front of Field Marshal von Mackensen, the great German specialist in siedgehammer assaults, is regarded as significant evidence that the Germens heve in preparation a blow of exceptional importance. It is recalled thet the German Emperor after the signature of peace with Rumania telegraphed his gratitude that he was now being able to conclude a victorious peace with the Entente Powers and, and there is a strong belief that on this occasion the enemy will throw in every available man in a desperate attempt to bring about a final and definite decision. As to where the enemy will strike the military critics show great reluctance to prophesy.

Major de Civrieux, in the Matin, recalls the fact that the enemy opened his offensive on March 2 on a front of fifty miles, and then after a pause of five days resumed his effort on a front of less than half that extent, while the third stage of the battle, which was directed against the Flanders heights, covered a front of only twelve miles.

From this and other factors Clorieux deduces the conclusion that the coming attack will embrace a very wide extent of the front, probably of the offensive of March 21.

The only voice this morning throwing doubt on this theory is that of Marcel in The Echo de Paris, who points out that Ludendorff took four months to prepare his offensive of March 21 and cannot improvise a new effort on anything like the same scale in a few days.

The German preparations have been handicapped by the tremendous allied bombardment which ceaselessly, night and day, is spreading disorder in every part of the enemy's lines.

ALBERT OPERATION COSTLY.

Germans Lost Heavily in Taking a Bit of Trench.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 10, (Associated Press.)—The operation by which the British regained by counter-assault the portion of trench north of Albert, which the Germans captured yesterday, while small, was important. The positions lay on high ground which had been hotly contested ever since the Germans stormed their way into Albert.

The temporary success of the Germans cost them dearly, for they suffered heavily from the rifle and machine-gun fire which was poured into them as they advanced up the slopes.

The operation was undertaken at about daybreak and soon afterward the enemy attempted to reach the British lines east of Bouzincourt, about 2,000 yards to the north. Here also the British were holding defenses on high ground, which the invaders coveted because occupation would give them a better position to work from for another big attack.

The gray coats advanced shouting "Retire!" in the hope of confusing the British. The defenders responded with such a grilling fire that the Germans acted on their cry and fell back, leaving many dead and wounded behind.

The hostile artillery fire was heavy last night south of Arras.

Air services on both sides were very active throughout the day, as conditions were ideal for observation. There was much bombing, and many engagements were fought in the air.

HAIG PRAISES ARTILLERY.

Infantry Know the Great Value of Gun Support, He Says.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, May 10, (via Ottawa.)—Field Marshal Haig today expressed his deep appreciation of the services rendered by the artillery in the recent battle of the River Somme and River Lys. He said that the infantry was the first to admit the inestimable value of artillery suport.

The British Commander said thet he was confident that the reliance of each arm upon the most wholehearted and self-sacrificing co-operation of the other was the greatest possible assurance that all further assaults would be met and defeated.

FRENCH WIN AT GRIVESNES.

Capture Positions Northwest of Montdidier and 258 Germans.

PARIS, May 10.—French troops yesterday captured Grivesnes Park, five miles northwest of Montdidier, taking 258 prisoners and organizing their new positions, according to the day announcement from the War Office, which says:

After a brief and intense bombardment French troops yesterday afternoon took possession of the park at Grivesnes, an important part of which had been occupied by the Germans. In this operation we took 258 prisoners, including four officers, and also a considerabre amount of material.

Notwithstanding the vigorous German artillery fire and attempts of enemy patrols to approech our new line, our infantry maintained the positions which had been captured and organized them.

On the right bank of the Aliette, in the Champagne, near Massiges, north of Rheims, and in Lorraine, at Ailly Wood, the French carried out successful local attacks or repulsed German raids. In thess operations we took thirty-six prisoners, including one officer.

"The artillery fighting has been rather violent in the region of Grivesnes, and between Lassigny and Noyon," says the official communication issued by the War Office tonight.

RENE FONCK DOWNS 6 GERMANS IN A DAY

He Vanquishes the First Two in Ten Seconds and Gets a Third Five Minutes Later.

PARIS, May 10.—Six Germen airplanes were brought down yesterday by Sub-Lieutenant René Fonck, the War Office announces. The statement follows:

"eYsterdey Lieutenent Fonck brought down six Germen biplanes in the course of two patrols. He downed the first two in ten seconds, the third five minutes latsr, and the other three in the course of the second petrol."

Lieutenant Fonck's achievement of yesterday has never been equelled. He is the greatest French air battler since the death of Captain Guynemer.

"I em going to revenge Lieutenant Chaput," declared Lieutenant Fonck befors taking the air yestsrday morning. Chaput, who hed accounted for sixtesn Germian machines, was killed last Tuesday.

Lieutenant Fonck had only just left the region of the airdroms when he encountered an enemy squadrilla. He drovs straight at them, opening fire with his machine gun, end shot down two of the Germans in less than ten seconds. He then went after a third machine which was within reach, and sent it crashing to earth five minutes later.

Lisutenant Fonck returned to the airdrome to take on more gasoline and to rest before going out for the second pntrol. On this petrol he met another squadrilla. One two-seater he shot to pieces in the air and two others he saw strike the ground, all within five minutes.

Two Generals Are Wounded.

LONDON, May 10.—Major Gen. Colin J. MacKenzie and Brig. Gen. the Hon. Lesley J. P. Butler are reported wounded. Major Gen. Mackenzie was formerly Chief of the General Staff of the Canadian Militia Council.

resolute, indomitable spirit of the British people."

Earl Curzon concluded with a wish that Ireland had joined in the military effort, and he hoped that it was not yet too late.

"There is only one thing we cannot afford to lose, and thet is the war," were his closing words.

BRITISH WANT PARTY TRUCE

Fear of a Radical Government if Domestic Strife Is Pressed.

LONDON, May 10.—The quick and successful manner in which the Ministry in the House of Commons yesterday dealt with the Maurice incident, which had caused more political bitterness than any preceding chapter of this troubled administration, showed Premier Lloyd George a keen, political strategist and a strong picader for his own cause.

Judging from the newspapers the country is tired of parliamentary strife, and while the present Government is much criticised no alternative that has been suggested finds strong support.

There was considerable cross voting in the House on the division, although, according to lobbyists, from mixed motives. A great majority of the Conservatives supported ths Government, which also hed ths votes of more than half the Liberals and ths bulk of the Laborites. In ths minority were the Asquith members of tbe late Govarnment and some other Liberals, including the pacifist section of seven pacifists.

The lobby correspondent of The Daily News says that some of the Liberals who have regularly supported the Government voted against it on the ground that the issue ought not to be made a question of confidence. Most of the Conservatives voted for the Government because they did not wish to change the Ministry, fearing to involve the accession to office of tha Marquis of Lansdowne and Arthur Henderson, thus giving a pacifist complexion to an Asquith Government.

LIEUT. KISSEL, LOST, IS SON OF BANKER

Harvard Graduate of 1917, Who Enlisted a Week After War Was Declared.

FLEW WITH BRITISH CORPS

Lieut. H. S. Morgan Was a Member of Bellevue Staff—Others on the List of Casualties.

Lieutenant Gustav H. Kissel, reported missing in yesterday's list from General Pershing, is a son of Rudolph H. Kissel, senior member of the banking firm of Kissel, Kinnicutt & Co. of 14 Wall Street. Lieutenant Kissel is 23 years old and a 1917 graduate of Harvard.

Within a week after Congress declared war on Germany he enlisted as a private in the Signal Corps, and he was one of the first aviation candidates sent by the Government to the Ground School for Aviation at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He finished the course at the Massachusetts school and was ordered to France for further training in July of last year. After two months in the French flying schools he was ordered to England, where he completed his course, got a license as a military pilot, and was commissioned an officer of the Aviation Section of the regular army.

When the Germans began their drive in Picardy, Lieuteoant Kissel was one of the American aviators ordered to service with the British Flying Service, and in a letter to his father received recently he referred to the squadron with which he was serving as one of the crack units of the Royal Flying Corps. In that letter he told of taking his "regular turn" in the flights, and of being on duty at flying headquarters transmitting orders to and from the front.

Although Lieutenant Kissel was first listed as missing in yesterday's report, he has been missing since April 12. The British Major commanding the squadron in which he was serving has written a letter to Mr. Kissel, father of the officer, in which he says that Lieutenant Kissel was last seen by his brother-fliers on April 12.

Lieutenant Harold Sidney Morgan, reported killed in Thursday's list from General Pershing, was in the Medical Corps and was a member of the Bellevue Hospital Staff when commissioned in August of last year. He was graduated from the Johns Hopkins Medical College in 1915, and became a member of the Bellevue staff in January, 1916. He was from the State of Washington, and was about 25 years old.

Corporal Alexander Dreilcb, reported killed in yesterday's list from General Pershing, was an Austro-American and lived, before he entered the army, with a sister in Passaic, N. J. He was 22 years old and enlisted in the regular army before Congress declared war. He was in the first contingent sent overseas.

Private Adolph Hiller, reported severely wounded, is a Brooklyn boy, whose home is at 870 Myrtle Avenue, where his parents, two brothers, and two sisters live. He was once before in the army and was discharged because of disability incurred in the line of duty. Two months before Congress declared war he made up his mind to get back into the service and went to a hospital and had an operation performed which made it possible for him to pass the physical examination. He sailed for France last September as a member of an infantry unit of the New England Division.

Adrian E. Regnier, reported slightly wounded in General Pershing's list of Thursday, was Captain of the Brown University football team in 1910. Regnier is also a crack baseball and basket ball player. He was an honor man of the Brown class of 1910 and a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He is serving in a machine-gun battalion of the New England Division and is 30 years old.

Private Chandler Waterman, who was mentioned in the casualty list several days ago as having died of wounds received in action, had been identified as a member of the Columbia University unit of the American Ambulance Corps in France. Waterman was a member of the class of 1918 at Columbia and left New York last Christmas day. Mrs. A. F. Swaeson of Montclair was his sister.

Member of the Engineers.

Edward A. Joyce, reported wounded two days ago, is with the regular engineers believed to be in action in Picardy. He lived at 60 Wyckoff Street, Brooklyn, when he enlisted in the 5th Field Artillery shortly after war was declared. He was transferred to the engineers last Fall. His mother has died since he entered the service.

Lieutenant John P. Rosenwald, reported dead of wounds in last night's casualty list, was a member of the medical staff of the 151st Regiment of Field Artillery of the Rainbow Division. His home was at 902 Franklin Avenue, Minneapolis. He was a medical officer in the old First Minnesota Infantry before this country entered the war.

First Lieutenant Abraham Strauss, Medical Corps, reported a prisoner, is a brother of Dr. Israel Strauss of the Mount Sinai Hospital staff. Lieutenant Strauss was serving with the Connaught Rangers of the Canadian Army when he was wounded and subsequently captured. He is a son of the late Major Alexander Strauss of Providence, and went to France in July of last year. At the home of Dr. Israel Strauss it was said last night that the family had received a letter from Lieutenant Strauss written from the prison camp near Rastadt, Germany. In that letter he said he had been wounded, but was recovering, and hoped to be exchanged in the next six months.

Lieutenant A. J. Gordon, Medical Officers' Reserve Corps, is in a German prison camp. According to word received by his father, Isaac Gordon, of 224 Mulberry Street, Newark, from the War Department, he was captured in action. Lieutenant Gordon was commissioned last August.

Mrs. Alonzo Seymour of 1,282 Maple Avenue, Peekskill, N. Y., has received word that her son, Lieuteeant Aloozo Morton Seymeur, who is with the Aviation Section in France, got the French war cross. Lieutenant Seymour was a student at Cornell when he entered the service last year.

The casualty list shows that the Rainbow Division is once more in the thick of the fighting. Among the wounded officers are Captain Otto J. Kindler and Lieutenant William J. Belhorn of Company L of the 166th Infantry of the Second Brigade of the Rainbow. Corporal Carl Gerken and Private Daniel B. Stout, reported wounded, are also of Company L of the 166th Infantry.

GIRL BRAVES RIFLES OF EMBATTLED FINNS

With American Refugees, Miss Ranta Faces White Guards on Ramparts of Reds.

FLAGS WAVED UNDER FIRE

Daring Act Leads to Eventual Safety of Party Escaping from Petrograd Menaced by Germans.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—An official account of the escape of Americans from Petrograd through the battlelines in Finland, received here today, tells a story of privations, insults, and terrors suffered by the refugees before they reached safety in Stockholm.

A 22-year-old girl, Miss Ranta, a bookkeeper for tha American Tobacco Company, was the heroine of the flight, even mounting tha ramparts of the Finnish Red Guards to help Captain Crosley, Naval Attaché at Petrograd, and J. J. Tyer, Manager of the American Tobacco Company in Finland, wave the Stars and Stripes and a flag of truca to persuada the White Guards to stop firing.

The refugees left Petrograd at a time of greatest terror in the city, when the Germans were approaching closer and closer and hostile airplanes wera raining death from the skies. Disastrous panics followed every bombing raid. Arriving at Tammerfors, the Americans werc put off the train because the food situation in Bjorneburg forbeda their proceeding there. All beggage wae lost en route to Tammerfors, and, to make matters worse, they wera informed that the Red Guards desired no foreign population in Southern Finland, and that they should move on.

Thereupon the refugees concentrated at Helsingfors, where an effort was made to obtain safe conduct through the lines. Tha Red Guards declined to grant permission, alleging that the White Guards had used this truca given to permit the British Embassy train to pasa and advance on Tammerfors. In thet predicament it was decided to station Americans at all places where there were avenues of escape, and daily reports were to be made so that all might take adventags of any favorable opportunity.

The Americans who proceeded to Tammerfors eventually received a special train from the Helsingfors authorities. But as the train was about to pull out, soldiers took possession. All baggage was dumped out and the Americans were arrested, because Tammerfors did not take orders from Helsingfors. They later were allowed to proceed under guard of Red troops and eventually joined forces with other Americans at Bjorneburg, from where they went to Mentyloto, close to the battle line.

From Mentyloto, Captain Crosley, Mr. Tyer, and Miss Ranta started in a sleigh for ths front. Captain Crosley mounted the breastworks with the Stars and Stripes, Mr. Tyer took a flag of truce, and Miss Renta acted as interpreter. When the firing ceased they walked between the lines and were met by a volley, the White Guards believing their advance a ruse. None was hit, but Miss Ranta was taken prisoner, being first. A truce of six hours was arranged, during which sleighs from the Red Gards took the Americans and their goods and dumped them midway between tha lines, where the White Guards picked them up.

Miss Ranta, meanwhile, had discovered in the Commander in Chief of the Whites an old schoolmate, whom she demanded should allow the burial of many dead whom the refugees had observed between ths lines. The Reds claimed that the Whites had fired on Red Cross workers who attempted to rescue the wounded, who had died. Her request was granted, and she herself was ordered released.

The refugees proceeded overland in sleighs thrcugh bitter cold to Christinestadt, where they met with many insults from Germen officers and Finnish soldiere under their influence. One American Lieutenant was ordered to leave a restaurant at Vasa, the Capital of Finland, or be thrown out. From Vasa the party proceeded to Stockholm, where the diplomatic members remained to compile their reports.

CASUALTIES IN THE NAVY.

Plumber Drowned at the Deep-Sea Diving School, Newport.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Tha Navy Department today announced that August Henry Benson, a machinist's mate, was injured in a seaplane accident at Cape May, N. J., on May 8. The extent of his injuries is not known, but they do not appear to be of a serious nature. Benson's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Benson, lives at Dixon, Cal.

The department was also informed that Frederick Edwin Reif, a plumber, was drowned when receiving instructions in the Deep Sea Diving School, Torpedo Station, Newport, R. I. His next of kin was a brother, Charles W. Reif, Company I, 6th Infantry, U. S. A..

Assistant Surgeon Edward P. Bugbee of ths navy, and the following enlisted men were slightly injured by the bursting of an oxygen apparatus used in an effort to resuscitate Reif: Walter James Breakell of Otisville, N. Y.; Thomas Franklin Flash of San Francisco; Albert Carl Robert Trispel of Milwaukee.

Two Casualties in Marines.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Maj. Gen. Barnett today announced two additional casualties in the Marine Corps contingent in tha American Expeditionary Force in France. Two privates were wounded slightly in action, as follows: Orie Garver, next of kin, Samuel Garver, 639 West McMicken Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio; Frederic Oliver de Sollar, next of kin, Sedarah de Sollar, 3,759 West Chicago Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

RUSSIAN ROYALTIES REPORTED AT KIEV

of the Town Council of Kiev which passed a resolution declering that the proclamation of Skoropadski, the Hetman, did not represent the will of the people and was an infraction of the basic principles of democracy. The only pretense of an election of Skoropadski was a resolution of the Assembly of Agriculturists summoned by the reactionary peasant Vovalenko, and representing only the richer agricultural population.

The Cadet Vasilenko, who formed the final Cabinet, tries to suggest that Skoropadski favors reform and a Government of Left tendencies. This, however, is laughable, since he adds that the reforms to be carried out are in accordance with the Hetman's manifeato which, as cabled, restores the land to the landownera. At the samc tima a declaration is being prepared to show that the Hetman's autocratic bark is worse than his democratic bita, and that he is content to be merely a kind of President until the meeting of the Diet.

RUSSIA BEGINS PEACE PARLEY.

Hostilities with Ukraine Have Ceased, Moscow Government Says.

LONDON, May 10.—A Russian Government wireless dispatch announces that peace negotiations with the Ukraine have commenced. It says that hostilities have ceased on the Veronezh, Karsk, and Briansk fronts, and that a line of demarcation has been established.

It is expected, says the dispatch, that the Russian delegation will shortly meet the Germano-Ukraina delegation and sign a peace. Meantime, the Russians have established on all fronts defensive guards, who will not permit armed detachments to enter Russian territory.

The statement, which is signed by Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevik Minister of War and Marine, asserts that many enemy detachments have violated the orders of the central authorities and crossed the frontiers of the Ukraine and invaded the region of the Don Cossacks. These detachments, it says, must be disarmed by the relentless use of force.

With a view to combatting such bands, the Don and Kuban regions are declared to be in a state of siege. Guards will be placed at exposed points on the frontier, and the military commanders made responsible for a vigilant defense.

The statement says severe discipline must be maintained, and that reports shall be sent to the High Military Council regarding obedience to these instructions, as well as information concerning the movement of all bands.

ROSTOV RECAPTURED.

Russians Reported Again in Town Taken by the Germans.

LONDON, May 10.—The Russians have recaptured Rostov from the Germans and Ukrains, according to information received in Moscow, says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

The capture of Rostov, the largest town in the Don Cossacks territory, was reported in the official statement from Berlin on Thuraday.

ASSAIL UKRAINE POLICY.

German Socialists Again Protest Against Interference There.

LONDON, May 10.—Germany's Eastern policy, particularly respecting Ukraine, has again been criticised sharply in the Reichstag Main Committee, a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam reports. Gustav Noske, Socialist, asked for further information regarding the status of affairs in Ukraine and protested against continued interferenec by Germany in the domestic interests of that country. He said it was impossible to conceal the existence of discord between Germeny and Austria on account of this situation.

Mathias Erzberger, Centrist leader, protested against what he called the German military dictatorship in Ukraine. He said the Centre did not accept responsibility for Germany's present policy there.

"Today we have a military dictatorship in Ukraine, under the Hetman Skoropadski, who is unable to gain the support of the Ukraine Ministers," Herr Erzberger said. He proceeded to tell how the Rada had been suppressed by a German officer entering and calling for "Hands up!" in the name of the German Government.

Hugo Haase, the Independent Socialist leader, asked why the Russians were still being treated as enemy aliens.

EICHHORN AS PROPAGANDIST.

Circulates In His Army a Circular Ridiculing Democracy.

AMSTERDAM, May 10.—The army command of General von Eichhorn, which formerly operated in the Vilna sector of the Germae Eastern Army, and now is in Ukraine, has achieved unenviable notoriety hy feeding the rank and file with political doctrines of the most reactionary kind. The Berlin Tageblatt calls attention to this propaganda in evident disapproval by reproducing a pamphlet of twenty-four pages entitled, "Army of General von Eichhorn: for Service Use; No. 7; The World Democracy."

This pamphlet, which is in the form of questions and answers, hails the present war as a war of liberation. In August, 1914, it says, all international democratic aspirations vanished, but soon afterward these "baneful influences" reappeared and have since grown alarmingly. It further ridicules "the apostles preaching the reconstruction of international law and the principles of humanity," and qualifies the Reichstag majority resolution of last July as "an ineffable futility."

This writer utterly rejects the idea of the extension of political rights, which he says would benefit nobody but "a gang of lawyers, professional politicians, journalists, and financiers."

Concerning the submarine war, he says it had been restricted until February, 1917, "out of regard for America, and possibly also so as not to irritate England overmuch." One question and its answer follows:

"Q.—Is it true that a small coterie of international financiers use the word democrecy as a mask for their policy of greed?

"A.—Yes, for money rules Parliamentary and even Presidential elections, as witness America and France."

Dr. Ludwig Haase, Progressive member of the Reichstag for Karlsruhe, who is the writer of the Tagebiatt article in which attention is called to this pamphlet, is unsparing in his condemnation of this form of political enlightenment, which he describes as "muddle-headed twaddle," and as "an insult to the intelligence of the German soldiers, many of whom knnw more about politics than iltelr superiors."

"MAJOR GENERAL EDWARDS" PREFERS

The Doughboy Army Shoe

"I am in receipt of a pair of Doughboy Shoes. I have tried them on and they fit me well. I have only worn them a short while, but considering the excellent material that is in them, I believe them to be the best shoes for officers, of which I have knowledge."

(Signed)
C R. EDWARDS,
Major General, N A

$9.50 and $11.50

Needless to say, such high praise from such a high authority will be highly esteemed by the officers who read it.

Straw Hats Meeting 1918 Requirements

NEW YORKERS look to these stores for a live expression of straw hat styles.

This year we have most carefully observed the conservative 1918 taste.

The "Yezzo" has already proved its correctness by tremendous popularity.

A Japanese braid, natural color, exclusive to these stores—trim and modestly smart, at $3.

English boater styles, $2 to $10.

Panamas, Bankoks, Leghorns, Mackinaws, Milans — every braid used in the graceful soft models, with finest trimmings, $5 to $25.

Silk and duck sport hats and correct caps for golf, tennis and motoring.

OUR ARMY EAST OF MONTDIDIER

which the division to which I am attached has ever before experienced.

In my honest opinion, this is as modestly as the fact can be stated, and any description less truthful would seem to me an official injustice to those brave fellows who live, perhaps, a few miles nearer the firing than the censor.

Nightly, back areas of the front are shattered with shells. The German is much interested in preventing us from bringing up supplies and munitions. We do the same for him. The American batteries, firing at long ranges, harass the roads entering the sections behind the enemy's lines and wooded places, where relief troops might be assembled under cover of darkness. The expenditure of shells is enormous, but it continues practically twenty-four hours a day. German prisoners, shaking from the nervous effects of the pounding, have certified to the untiring efforts of our gunners.

Particularly, has one of the villages within our lines come in for enemy artillery attention, and we have reciprocated by almost leveling with our shells two villages which he has occupied opposite us.

Every hour, under a rain of death, the work of digging in continues, and the men doing it need no urging from their officers. There is something sinister and emphatic about the whins of a 210 German H. E. that inspires one with a desire to start for the Antipodes by the shortest route.

The number of arrivals, by way of the air, in one shattered village immediately on our front runs high into the thousands. Under such conditions no life-loving human could fail to produce the last degree of utility out of a spade. The continuous dropping of shells in ruins and tha unending fountains of chalk dust and dirt leave little for the imagination, but one officer told me that it reminded him of living in a room where some one was continually beating a carpet.

This taste of war of semi-movement has been appreciated by the American soldier. It has in it a dash of novelty lacking in positioe warfare to which he had been accustomed in the mud and marsh of the Moselle and Meuse. For one thing, there have been better billets and cleaner billets than ever encountered before by our men. Fresh unthrashed oats and fragrant hay have been found in hurriedly abandoned lofts back of the line and even in caves and cellars nearer the front.

In many places tbs men are sleeping on feather mattresses, in old-fashioned wooden bedsteads, removed from hazardry above ground to comparative safety below. Whole caves have been furnished, and not badly furnished, by tbis salvage of furniture, much of which would bring fancy prices in any collection of antiquities.

Forced to a recognition solely of intrinsic values, our men have been making prompt utilization of much of the material abandoned by the civilian population. Home is the field wherein the soldier sleeps and, after all, why not have it as comfortable as his surroundings will afford? These caves and vegetable cellars, many with walls and vaulted ceilings of clean red brick or white blocks of chalk, constitute excellent shelters from shell splinters, and even protect from direct hits by missiles of small calibre.

Beyond the villages our riflemen find protection in quickly scraped holes in the ground. There are soms trenches, but they are not contiguous. No Man'a Land is an area of uncertain boundary. Our gunners have quarters burrowed into chalk not far from the gun pits. It is no secret that almost all communication and the bringing up of food and shells are conductsd under cover of darkness, but the times at which this exposed work is done are unknown to the enemy.

In our concentration area on the day before our departure for the front—a data which for some reason must still remain unmentioned—every officer of ths organizations represented, and they numbered almost (deleted,) was summoned to a temporary headquarters, where Gsneral Pershing conferred with them. We had passed out from his command, and from now on our orders were to come from tha Chief of the French army to which we are attached.

AMERICANS IN RAID NEAR TOUL

Assist French In Successful Dash In Apremont Forest.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 10, (Associated Press.)—The American artillery participated and the American infantry lent some assistance in a successful French raid in the Apremont Forest, northwest of Toul, at dawn today.

The American batteries, acting with the French artillerists, in a heavy two-hour bombardment were showered with gas shells by the Germans.

Slightly to ths east of the section raided American patrols created a diversion. One patrol entered Apremont Village, which waa found to be deserted. This provoked a German barrage while the men were returning. Another patrol cut the enemy's first system of barbed wire and was engaged on the second entanglement, ten yards from the trenches, when it was attacked by fifteen Germans, using rifles, bombs, and pistols. The Americans fought for fifteen minutes and retired, without suffering casualties, on ths approach of enemy reinforcements.

On the Luneville sector quiet prevailed.

Previous to the American raid into the village of Apremont, a private carried out single-handed Thursday afternoon an incursion into the village and brought back the report that it was deserted. This was confirmed by the larger patrol this morning. Tha private, who is a "striker" for the Lieutenant who conducted this morning's patrol, learned what the Lieutenant planned to do and decided to beat him into the village.

Immediately after dinner Thursday the privata slippad out from behind the American barbed wire and crawled across No Man'e Land without being observed. He reached Apremont, crawled about the outskirts, and returned with the information that only a few Germans were there. Tha patrol this morning encountered two Germans in the village. They retreated hastily when the Americans attempted to capture them, and signalled for a barrage, which was laid across tbe path of tha patrol as it returned to the American lines.

German prisoners, takan by tbe French in Apremont Forest this morning, confirm reports of American aerial observers thet American shells recently demolished Flamenwerfers, brougbt up for an attack on the Americans near Apremont. The artillery concentrated its fire on this spot after a German prisoner had reported that an attack was coming from that direction.

Mix's Story of Borglum's Alleged Scheming While Investigator

BORGLUM ACCUSED IN AIRCRAFT SCANDAL

told him that he did not know how to build planes that would surpass those now being constructed, "but that through his friendship with the White House and acquaintance with Mr. Gibson, the engineer in the employ of the British Ministry of Munitions, he would have access to the best foreign designs practices."

Mix Informs Officials.

Mr. Mix, according to his statement, became suspicious, and conferred with Mr. Hardesty, a consulting engineer of Washington and a friend of Mr. Mix's father. Mr. Hardesty knew Howard Coffin, the Chairman of the Aircraft Board, and the matter was laid before him General Squier, Chief Signal Officer of the Army Colonel Deeds, and Colonel Montgomery of the Military Aircraft Administration. Subsequently it was decided to lay the matter before Vice President Marshall, a friend of Mr. Mix. This was done on Jan. 20, and on the following day the Vice President informed Mr. Mix that he had brought the case to the attention of Secretary Baker.

In his statement Mr. Mix says that after discussion of the matter at the Metropolitan Club in Washington with Mr. Borglum and others he informed Henry Harrison Suplee, consulting engineer of the Dodge Manufacturing Company, that he thought it best to drop all discussion of the proposed company as Mr. Borglum did not have any designs for a new airplane to submit, "but was probably relying upon his official powers to requisition and get certain information from the Government which could be turned over to the new company for construction." Mr. Borglum stipulated, according to Mr. Mix, that he—Mr. Borglum—was not to appear in the new company but that be would be represented in it by Benjamin Harris, President of the Standard Smelting and Refining Company of New York.

Senator Thomas made only the briefest comment in presenting the documents to the Senate. "This shows Mr. Borglum's criticism of the aircraft program to be entirely without merit," he said.

Though the documents produced a flurry in some quarters in Washington, they caused scarcely a ripple in Congress.

"Mr. Borglum is not the issue," said Senator Hitchcock, a leader in the Senate investigation. "The committee will not even consider his criticisms. The real issue, and what we are trying to get at is why we have practically no airplanes in return for more than $640,000,000 appropriated by Congress. Nothing should be allowed to obscure that."

According to Mr. Mix, Vice President Marshall laid Mr. Mix's statement before Secretary Baker on Jan. 21. Mr. Baker declined today to answer any question about any of the charges implied by Mr. Mix's statement and a memorandum that had been given to the Military Intelligence Section, on Jan. 30, by Mr. Suplee, consulting engineer of the Dodge company, which agreed with Mr. Mix's story of Mr. Borglum's alleged position.

In his memorandum Mr. Suplee said that "There was never any other understanding but that Mr. Borglum was to be represented in the corporation by Mr. Harris, and that his sole asset in the transaction was to be first, his personal friendship and association with President Wilson, with whom he stated he could do anything he wanted."

Among the other documents submitted by Senator Thomas were letters from Mr. Borglum to General Squier, President Wilson, and Secretary Baker, telling of his airplane inventions. These showed that as early as September Borglum was urging an airplane brake device and some new forms of planes which he said he had perfected as to their "major problems." According to some reports these projects were referred to the Signal Corps and were rejected by Major Deeds.

Statement of Mr. Mix.

This is the statement of Mr. Mix in regard to his conversation with Borglum, Gibson, and others and his subsequent disclosure of Borglum's scheme to Government officials:

"Jan. 17, 1918.

"On December 8, 1917, I left Dayton en route for Washington. In the Pullman smoking compartment I noticed two gentlemen talking aviation, who had apparently been to the Wright-Dayton field and who were discussing the inability of the Dayton-Wright Aircraft Company to raise the new De Havilland No. 4 machine from the ground with the present propellers in hand.

"These two men continued their discussion covering aircraft practice in general, and I decided to know them. Later on, entering into a conversation with them, I brought the discussion around to the subject of laminated wood bodies, wing ribs, and wings for airplanes, and stated to them that, inasmuch as there seemed to be some hesitancy on the part of the American aircraft builders to construct single or double-seated high-speed scouts, we, the Dodge Manufacturing Company, being in possession of the latest Albatross designs, intended to build one for trial, providing we could get some one to furnish us with the power plant.

"The train being eighteen hours late I had considerable conversation with the two men, who turned out to be Gutzon Borglum, whose address is 166 East Thirty-eighth Street, New York City, and H. C. Gibson, an engineer in the employ of the British Ministry of Munitions, whose address is that office on the sixteenth floor of 120 Broadway.

"These two men intimated to me that they could produce designs for a plane which would be faster and steadier in the air than the Albatross and which would weigh less.

"Having at that time the interest of the Dodge Manufacturing Company in mind and being particularly anxious to become a part of any organization which would go into the manufacture of airplanes having monocoque fuselages, I led these gentlemen to believe that we would welcome any suggestion from outsiders which would furnish the design and power plant for high-speed scouts.

"Mr. Borglum and Mr. Gibson were very insistent that I call upon them in New York on my way up from Washington, which I did on Dec. 18, 1917. I did not see Mr. Borglum, but talked to him over the long-distance telephone at Stamford. He insisted that I see Mr. Gibson at once. I did so, and learned from Mr. Gibson that Mr. Borglum had certain confidential connections with the Government which would be to our advantage as well as to his own.

"I approached Mr. Gibson on the subject of building airplanes, and he suggested that I prepare in detail a report of the Dodge Manufacturing Company and its subsidiary organizations for their consideration. Returning to Mishawaka, I did so, and wrote Mr. Gibson a letter, with the intention of drawing him further into a commitment. In this letter I stated that it has been intimated to us that high-speed scouts would be looked upon with favor by governmental authorities, and again brought up the fact that design and power plant were the factors which the Dodge company lacked to begin immediate manufacture.

Borglum Very Positive.

"On Dec. 31, 1917, a telegram (marked Exhibit A) was received by me from Mr. Borglum. Mr. Gibson had apparently shown Mr. Borglum my letter, as I had asked him to do; and as is evident from Mr. Borglum's telegraphic response, which follows, I was led to believe that between them Messrs. Borglum and Gibson could provide a staff of experts with the best foreign experience on plane design:

Stamford, Conn., Dec. 31, 1917.

Like your suggestion to Gibson. Write me fully part you and your company can play. I have a staff of experts with the best foreign experience, who can come close to delivery 100 per cent. article. Necessary can arrange finances also with the best New York banks. Washington is watchful but waiting overtime. Your idea and mine should be rushed to the limit. [illegible] 500 of swiftest machines in the world by May 1, but not a minute can be lost not a minute during the next ninety days. A happy New Year to you.

(Signed.) BORGLUM.

"Their confidence of being able to build scouts that would be acceptable to the Government was such as led me to believe that here was an opportunity to hook up with certain people, who had the points of airplane building that was lacked, and to their ability add our manufacturing facilities with a view of producing high-speed scout planes, which would be beyond the experimental stage and which could be submitted in the concrete to the Signal Corps rather than as designs on paper, which would be subject to criticism and change before the practical test could be made.

"On Jan. 2, 1918, I received a letter from H. C. Gibson, a copy of which (marked 'Exhibit B') is attached hereto, which further led me to believe that our combined efforts could be used to produce aircraft, first in the experimental stage, and then, if approved by the American Government, in great quantities, with the smallest possible delay of time.

"I replied to Mr. Borglum's telegram on Jan. 4, 1918, a copy of which letter (marked 'Exhibit C') is attached hereto. I did not send this letter, but it explained fully our part in the manufacture of airplanes, either with our present facilities and under the name of the Dodge Manufacturing Company or under a new company to be formed, which would consist of those manufacturers of the component parts of an airplane who might bring to the new organization a certain experience in the building of the units, which they already understood, and thus form a combination of experience and interest which would allow the new organization to pass quickly over the primary stages of experiment.

"In suggesting the formation of a new company at that time, it was my thought that the Dodge people would not care to share their ownership in the patents and processes surrounding the veneer industry any more than would Mr. Borglum and Mr. Gibson and their interests care to share permanently such interests as they might have in the design and power plant of such a machine with the Dodge organization, because of necessity they would become small factors in an organization the size of Dodge, which is composed of many branches foreign to aircraft production and in which they could have no possible interest.

"On Jan. 4, 1918, and before mailing this letter, I received a telegram from Mr. Borglum as follows, marked 'Exhibit D.':

Did you get my wire? Have you replied? When are you in New York or Washington? Reply Stamford, Conn.

"I then decided not to send the letter, but wired him instead as follows:

Your wire and letter from Mr. Gibson received on my return from Dayton. Your second wire received last night. Was preparing a letter to you, fully covering situation. Have just bought plant of Gillett Motors Company, which adjoins property of veneer plant and which presents additional opportunity in way of machine tools and assembling space. Believe we have now provided for all body and wing construction, landing and assembly, also metal fittings and accessories. If you can supply design, as mentioned in your wire, and propeller, there seems to be no reason why immediate operations could not be started. I can leave here Tuesday night if you think it advisable.

(Signed) KENYON W. MIX.

Borglum Goes to Washington.

"On Jan. 6, 1918, I received the following telegram from Mr. Borglum, (marked 'Exhibit E':)

I leave for Washington on serious business. Can you see me there at earliest possible date? Address me Metropolitan Club.

"To which I replied, stating that I intended to come to Washington by way of New York, and asked him if that would be satisfactory.

"On Jan. 7, 1918, I received the following telegram from Mr. Borglum (marked 'Exhibit F'):

Am here indefinitely. Bring drawing photos or other portable data of swift foreign planes. See Gibson in New York.

and left for New York the night of Jan. 8, 1918.

"On Jan. 9, 1918, I called Mr. Gibson at the British Ministry by telephone and was instructed to meet him in the afternoon at the office of Mr. Compton, an engineer, on the eighteenth floor of the Hudson Terminal Building. H. H. Suplee accompanied me on this visit. Arriving at that office, we were introduced to Mr. Compton, a designer of aircraft propellers and parts, who, we understood, was in the employ of Mr. Borglum and Mr. Gibson and was engaged in the work of preparing drawings for experimental propeller business. We also met Lieutenant Roberts of the British Army, who stated that he had been invalided out of service, and was available to private enterprises.

"Mr. Suplee and Mr. Roberts then discussed the comparative values of American and foreign planes. Mr. Gibson and myself retired to Mr. Compton's private office and discussed the matter of the new company.

"Mr. Gibson stated to me in this conference that Mr. Borglum's connection was with the highest authorities in the American Government, and showed me a telegram from a man by the name of Nichols stating that Mr. Borglum could put through anything that had merit. Mr. Gibson also stated that Mr. Borglum could not in any way be identified with the new company openly and that his interest would be represented by a Mr. Harris, whom he wished me to meet on the following day. He told me that Mr. Borglum was doing big things in Washington, but that it was up to Mr. Borglum to explain for himself what they were, after which he left the conference, leaving Lieutenant Roberts, Mr. Suplee, Mr. Compton, and myself together. We discussed the relative value of various planes for an hour or two, and adjourned, to meet on Saturday.

"On Saturday morning, Jan. 12, 1918, I called at Mr. Gibson's office in the British Ministry, having instructed Mr. Suplee to meet me at 2:30 in Mr. Compton's office.

Harris Appears for Borglum.

"Mr. Gibson introduced me to Lieutenant Sykes of the British Navy, with whom I had about a half hour's conversation on the subject of furnishing laminated wood veneer for the British Government.

"Mr. Gibson endeavored to get Mr. Borglum on the telephone, but was unable to do so. About noon Benjamin Harris, President of the Standard Smelting and Refining Company, in company with Mr. Grant, an attorney, called at Mr. Gibson's office, and the four of us went to luncheon together.

"Immediately following luncheon, we proceeded to Mr. Compton's office, and, although Lieutenant Roberts was missing, he being compelled to go to Chicago on urgent business, we proceeded to discuss either the use of the present Dodge equipment for the building of speed scouts, or the formation of a new company to do this work, along the lines indicated in the letter written to Mr. Borglum and which was not sent, known as 'Exhibit C' herein.

"Present at this meeting were Mr. Benjamin Harris, representing Mr. Borglum, Mr. H. C. Gibson, Mr. Compton, Mr. Grant, above referred to, Mr. H. H. Suplee (present as consulting engineer of the Dodge Manufacturing Company), and myself.

"After giving an entire outline of the Dodge Manufacturing Company and displaying blue prints of the ground plans, locations, photographs of plants, processes, machines, &c., I thoroughly explained the reasons why laminated wood, made on the indestructo process, (similar to the German veneer process,) was particularly adaptable to the building of monocoque fusilages and wings, such as were now being used in the best German practice. It was then suggested that a new company be discussed, and the plan suggested above was gone over thoroughly, Mr. Gibson and Mr. Compton making a diagram as we went along, which is herewith submitted as 'Exhibit G.'

"The relative proportions of stock in the company was not discussed, it being the opinion of Mr. Gibson and Mr. Harris that Mr. Borglum should be consulted before this apportionment was made.

"It was suggested that contracts should be entered into with the Dodge interests for the furnishing of such parts of the aircraft as they were able to manufacture, which contracts, along with those made with the propeller and motor interests, should constitute a portion of the assets of the construction company. An amount was decided upon, necessary to start the company under way.

"At this time I did not as yet know Mr. Borglum's connections in Washington, nor what his ability to furnish designs would be, and consequently I hesitated at making a final commitment of our position beyond saying that should such a company be created, the Dodge Manufacturing Company stood ready to furnish to the construction company all experimental work on the first plane and all laminated wood materials, in addition to a plant necessary for the assembling of the plane.

"This meeting adjourned, pending my visit to Washington to see Mr. Borglum.

"On Monday, Jan. 14, 1918, an additional meeting with Mr. Harris developed the fact that as Mr. Borglum's agent he was not sure of the part Mr. Gibson or Mr. Compton was to play in the organization, although he seemed certain of the ability of the Dodge Manufacturing Company to deliver as represented.

Mix and Borglum Meet in Capital.

"I arrived in Washington Jan. 15, 1918, and called upon Mr. Borglum in his rooms at the Albany apartment house, second floor, in the afternoon.

"Mr. Borglum's first question to me was, 'Mr. Mix, do you know what I am doing in Washington?' My reply was, 'Not exactly, but I have a good idea.' Whereupon Mr. Borglum produced a letter, addressed to him and signed by Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, which extended to Mr. Borglum official permission and authority to proceed upon some investigation, which had been mentioned in Mr. Borglum's letter to the President and which was dated Dec. 25, 1917, which letter was only mentioned in the President's communication shown to me.

"The letter to Mr. Borglum, and signed by the President, went on to state that he (Mr. Borglum) would have the co-operation of the Secretary of War and that Stanley King, one of Mr. Baker's assistants, would be assigned to his use until investigation was completed and the facts ready for presentation to the White House.

"Mr. Borglum then went on to state that he had been given room 225 of the War Department and a corps of assistants, among whom were Mr. Nichols, whose identity I have not yet discovered other than that he was formerly connected with the Aeromarine Plane and Motor Company of New York and a Second Lieutenant of the United States Army, acting as stenographer.

"Mr. Borglum then informed me that they had uncovered enough rottenness in the Signal Corps and in the Aircraft Production Board to make impossible the success of the American air program under the present régime. He informed me that he had but to requisition correspondence, orders, foundation plans, &c., from any department of the Signal Corps and they would be forthwith placed in his hands. He stated, however, that he was having considerable difficulty in getting this material, owing to the reluctance of army officers to let him see it. He seemed to particularly condemn Colonel E. D. Deeds, making various extreme charges against him, and also Colonel Montgomery.

"He referred to conference had with Maj. Gen. Squier and went on to say further in connection with this gentleman that he had found nothing against him in his investigation.

"Mr. Borglum stated that the Navy Department was the only department of the aviation section in which he had found efficiency and spoke in very high terms of Rear Admiral Taylor. He states that he had enough information on Colonel Montgomery's activities to have him displaced on the Aircraft Board.

Mr. Mix Becomes Suspicious.

"On the evening of Tuesday, Jan. 15, 1918, Mr. Borglum, Mr. Nichols, Mr. Suplee, and myself dined at the Metropolitan Club and afterwards remained in the library of the club for conference. I asked Mr. Borglum just what was to be gained by an exposition of these men and just wherein he thought he might serve the country by tearing down that for which he had no substitute to offer. Mr. Borglum protested he did not want to tear down the present organization of the Aircraft Board, but that he would build up a structure around it, composed of men of unquestionable business methods and who would rush the American air program to a rapid completion.

"Mr. Borglum stated that he did not know at that time how to build scout planes or any other aircraft, which could be depended upon to surpass those now being constructed, but that through his friendship with the White House and acquaintance with Mr. Gibson, the engineer in the employ of the British Ministry of Munitions, he would have access to the best foreign and American designs and practices. He then asked me to make suggestions as to a new personnel for the Aircraft Board, and to suggest such men as I thought would be able to carry through the program rapidly and efficiently.

"At this point I became suspicious, not of Mr. Borglum's methods, but of his ability to aid the country by working along the lines he had suggested during the afternoon and evening conferences.

"It is a mystery to me why a man, vested with this high authority, should make a confidant of me in matters of such extreme importance and secrecy, and why he should desire my opinion, which must of necessity be a very weak one, upon the personnel of a new Aircraft Board.

"I decided something was radically wrong. The thought occurred to me that possibly this man, through his friendship with the President, had obtained authority which makes him decidedly dangerous to the interests of the country in that he might remove from activity those people now responsible for the industrial development of aircraft without a hope of substituting in their stead a new working force.

"It occurred to me that much valuable time might be lost; it further struck me that if he would take me into his confidence in this matter he might take others less cautious of their country's interest, and he might give wide publicity to the matters discussed with me, and that he might show to others his credentials from the President as evidence of his authority.

"Such a method, to my mind, would be fatal, particularly if it became public property and through the medium of gossip our aircraft program became known to the enemy.

"I discussed this matter with Mr. Suplee, and stated to him on the conclusion of that meeting that so far as the new company was concerned I thought it best to drop all discussion of it, inasmuch as Mr. Borglum did not have the designs to submit for construction, but was probably relying upon his official powers to requisition and get certain information from the Government which could be turned over to the new company for construction.

Decides to Lead Borglum On.

"Upon leaving Mr. Borglum and while escorting Mr. Suplee home, I stated that I was going to take the position of being very anxious to start the company, was going to call for designs and was going to suggest to Mr. Borglum that it might be entirely possible for him to get these designs along the lines indicated, with the purpose in mind of seeing whether or not Mr. Borglum was willing to use his official authority as a means to further a private interest.

"After leaving Mr. Suplee I went back to Mr. Borglum's room and discussed the new company with him further, hinting at the matters above referred to, and upon being questioned by Mr. Nichols as to just what I meant, Mr. Borglum spoke up, stating to Mr. Nichols, 'Don't you see what he is suggesting? He means, cannot we get the designs from which planes may be constructed at once?' He assured me that this might be entirely possible and again impressed upon my mind that he, of course, could not be identified with the new organization; that Mr. Harris of New York would have to represent him in all negotiations.

"The following day, Wednesday, Jan. 16, 1918, I decided that here was a matter which should be looked into at once, and went to F. S. Hardesty, who is my father's confidant and a friend of Mr. Coffin, and put the case squarely before him, asking him what I should do. Mr. Hardesty hesitated for some time, because he did not, I believe, appreciate the seriousness of the situation should Mr. Borglum misuse his authority.

"Mr. Hardesty finally consented to place a portion of the facts before Mr. Coffin, without disclosing his source of information, and did so in the afternoon. Mr. Hardesty then reported to me that Mr. Coffin seemed interested, and, after consulting C. A. Kenyon, an attorney and my uncle, as a result of further consultation with Hardesty, it was decided that it were best to lay the facts before Mr. Coffin without reserve.

Facts Told to Coffin and Squier.

"Consequently, I went to Mr. Coffin's office with Mr. Hardesty on the morning of Jan. 17, 1918, where I met Colonel Deeds, General Squier, Colonel Montgomery, and other members of the Aircraft Board. I did not, however, talk to any one other than Mr. Coffin and General Squier, and then only in the briefest possible manner acquainted them with the situation, as I have written it herein, stating also to General Squier that on the night of Jan. 15, 1918, at 6 o'clock, I had been in Mr. Borglum's rooms at the New Albany, and had seen a United States Army officer, with the grade of Second Lieutenant, taking dictation from Mr. Nichols on the typewriter.

"While writing this a letter arrived from H. C. Gibson on the stationery of the British Ministry of Munition and marked Exhibit 'H,' which speaks for itself.

["Written in Mr. Hardesty's office at his suggestion.]

"United States Post Office.

"Since writing the above manuscript the following has transpired: On Sunday, Jan. 20, in company with my uncle, C. A. Kenyon, I called upon Vice President Marshall at his apartments at the Willard Hotel and laid before him the full details of the entire matter. The papers and exhibits were left with him, he giving instructions that they were to be called for at his office in the Senate Building the following day at 2:30 P. M.

"On Monday, the 21st, Mr. Kenyon and myself called, as requested, and the exhibits were returned to us with Mr. Marshall's assurance that he had taken the matter up with Secretary Baker, and that it would be attended to in detail."

The Exhibit H mentioned by Mr. Mix near the end of his letter was a letter written by Hugh C. Gibson from the British Ministry of Munitions of War, under date of New York, Jan. 16, and addressed to Mr. Mix. It reads:

"Dusenburg states that it is Italian about 550 (a peculiar mark here probably means horse power, referring to an airplane engine) being built to special order of Government U. S., and won't say any more.

"This looks interesting. No doubt you and Mr. B. can get the rest of the information.

"Hope to hear as to how you are progressing."

Could "Do Anything" with Wilson.

Senator Thomas also presented a statement made by Mr. Suplee, the Chief Engineer of the Dodge Manufacturing Company. It follows:

"Memorandum for the Confidential Information of Military Intelligence Section, U. S. A.

"1. That in all of the relations concerning the matter of promotion of stock company for the manufacture of airplanes, during which I was present at several conferences with the projectors of this enterprise as a consulting engineer, I desire to state that there was never any other understanding of this project but that Mr. Borglum was to be represented in the corporation by Mr. Harris, and that his sole asset in the transaction was to be, first, his personal friendship and association with President Wilson, whom he stated he could do anything he wanted with.

"2. As a further asset in this commercial venture, Mr. Borglum stated, and gave every one concerned in this matter to understand, that his position with the Aircraft Production Board and the Aerial Section of the Signal Corps, U. S. A., was such that he could obtain for their use plane and technical details which this company could use, and thus save considerably, both in time and money, in beginning operations.

"3. That one of the partners of this concern was to have been Hugo C. Gibson, who is connected with the British Ministry of War in the United States offices at 120 Broadway, New York City, who proposed that certain patents, which he controlled, would be used by the company, and who also stated that he would be able to influence orders for airplanes in such a way that this company might receive the benefit therefrom.

"4. That I was given to understand by Mr. Borglum that the present personnel of the Aircraft Board was highly distasteful to him, and he was constantly criticising their work. That he definitely proposed to change this personnel by virtue of his friendship with President Wilson, and that he asked me to suggest members for the new board which would be more friendly to him in his projects. That I avoided giving him any definite answers along this line. That in the event of a newly constituted Aircraft Board being formed, there would then be no difficulty in securing advantage to the proposed organization.

"Jan. 30, 1918."

"The above is a true copy, made by my own hand, of the original statement which I dictated and signed on Jan. 30, 1918, of which statement only two copies were made and signed; one of these being delivered to the Military Intelligence Section, U. S. A., and the other to F. S. Hardesty, consulting engineer, of Washington, D. C.

"HENRY HARRISON SUPLEE."

Borglum Urged His Own Inventions.

The correspondence produced by Senator Thomas also included the following letter, showing that Borglum in September was urging his airplane inventions upon the War Department:

"Borgland, Stamford, Conn.,
"Sept. 14, 1917.

"To Brig. General Squier, Chief Signal Corps, Washington, D. C.

"My Dear General Squier—In connection with the airplanes that I am making, I have developed an airbrake which I intended for their exclusive use. Extraordinary as it may seem, I have created an excellent working model of a brake that can be used, built, or applied on any airplane. It is flexible and reliable, breaks the speed of the machine to any extent you wish without interfering with its power. It acts as a stabilizer, increases enormously the safety of the machine, and forms a powerful right and left control and protects any car; even the British narrow-bladed war machine or the swift, heavy Italian triplanes, absolutely from any danger in alighting or making a landing. The brake responds instantly to the control and controls instantly the plane, and enables the aviator to bring his car to any speed and sustain it without interfering with the engine, or, in other words, his power.

"It is probably not claiming too much to say this invention is the only one in the field making any claim as a speed regulator, and after innumerable experiments I venture to say it is the only principle applicable to a swift gliding plane, without changing or interfering in the least with its definite function as a glider, accomplishing for the present airplane, in effect, the long coveted feat of hovering. The brake has no connection with the power of the life of the machine; it is applied definitely to the control of the load.

"If this interests you I shall be glad to hear from you. Yours very truly,

"GUTZON BORGLUM.

"P. S.—I have developed many models of my tube plane, shown to you and Colonel Williams at the Shoreham. I have three standard forms—forms which as I understand the needs of war should be standardized—a small, swift, high powered, quick turning, safe scouting car for two men. A long 48-foot fighting car, carrying machinists, gunman, and aviator, can carry from 300 to 500 gallons of gas, has 800 feet of lifting surface, and has less head resistance than the standard plane of today, and wastes none of its propeller power; it will weigh, as near as I can figure, about 1,750, and carries two engines.

"The third is a double tube or battle plane for bombardment carrying 2,200 lifting feet, less than double the head resistance of the single fighting car; has cabin and engine room between the tubes, twenty-two feet long. Of course, I need not tell you it can carry four engines, a great quantity of gas and high explosives, and it should have two aviators, two gunners, two machinists for relay service. It should cross great distances and carry supplies for its fleet of smaller cars, which can readily land on its back and get away.

"I have perfected the major problems of each of these cars, and believe no time should be lost in converting our aeronautics into aerodynamics. I think three to four hundred million flung to principles which are at best but awkward and fly-catchers and are instruments which kill mainly those who use them is about enough, and the exploitation of the gliding kite (the plane) which avoids the element it assumes to invade and live in, has had its day and been given its opportunity. Three years and three or more billions have been spent to exploit an instrument that has grown old before its principles are old enough to have been known. The world grabbed the plane and stopped thinking.

"I will not burden you with the valuable by-products of my experiment, which include, with the air brake, a propeller which uses completely and gives the same efficiency to the dead core of air about the axle of all propellers without the screw or turbine principle. I have also a definite invention which gives the same lifting power to planes entering the air end-wise, which alone will revolutionize aeronautics and add 75 per cent. to safety. Now I have but one idea in mind in all this work, and that is to turn aeronautics of peace into aerodynamics in war—convert sniping peeping into organized invasion with positive measurable results obtainable in at least 50 per cent. of our ventures. It is time we entered the air as men, as warriors, as a fighting nation, and did something else beside kite flying and sacrificing our best men eavesdropping.

"I believe and am prepared to make good that belief that twenty of my battle planes, forty of my fighting planes, and twenty of the smaller swift scouting machines could be built and delivered to the Government within six months. Such a fleet could deliver one hundred thousand pounds of high explosives on either Zeebrugge or Heligoland or Kiel Canal nightly for a week without especial danger to itself.

"I will go further. I will, if the Government will order such a fleet, agree to deliver such a fleet one thousand miles by continuous flight from the base of manufacture ready for duty and provide bonds for the faithful performance of all agreements.

"I'm writing to the President today. I enclosed a copy of this letter.

"Sincerely yours,
"GUTZON BORGLUM."

Mr. Borglum on Sept. 16, 1917, wrote to the President as follows:

"I am sending to you herewith a copy of a letter just sent to Brig. Gen. Squier, not to secure your urge upon this good officer, who is greatly interested in my labor and in sympathy with any sound development, but to inform you and also to arrest your attention at this time, when the clumsy, unmanageable triplane is being vigorously exploited, and state we have designed many models, the basic principles they proclaim proven and developed, ready for building.

"We can build cars, safe, stable in storm, incapable by their own caprice of plunging to earth, capable of carrying tons, serving each other in flight, giving rest and comfort to aviators in flight, remaining in the air twenty-four hours, which gives them the radius of Europe, Zeebrugge, the Kiel, and the Krupps. The navies have not accomplished the destruction of a single base, nor have three years of French, German, and British aeronautic activities with billions behind them, and the bravest souls on earth to go where ordered, accomplished potentially more than sniping and eavesdropping on each other.

"Mr. President, the plane in its present form is a glider; it is no more. With all it has done, it is incapable as at present constructed of being more than a kite run wild. It is like a playing car spun from the hand into space. It is no more. Any multiple of it has proven no more. A hundred million packs spun in the same way will be at the same mercy of the elements as one, and, strangely, any angle blade to the plane adds to its certain destruction if it slips.

"Our scouting radius should cover the shores of Europe. America's aircraft should push the boundaries of France and England to Petrograd and the Black Sea, including the Mediterranean. That is an American-sized job, and I believe one easily accomplishable.

"I would put a fleet of scouts in Europe, with bases in South Russia, North France, East England and Scotland, that would literally remap Europe."

On the same date Mr. Borglum wrote to Secretary Baker:

"I am inclosing a copy of a letter just sent to General Squier, not to seek your aid in developing my plans proposed, but as I have suggested to the President, to whom I have also sent a copy, to urge a better plan, and do what I can at this time to stop the United States from buying or ordering the lumber for the uncontrollable triplanes of the Italians.

"We can do better, infants though we are. Asleep as we have been since Wright gave us the glider, we have slept at the wheel; and rather retrogressed than otherwise. I mean the perfection of the turnbuckle, addition of wind-pressure gauges, petty tricks relating to petty parts, have nothing to do with the success of aerodynamics.

"I want to protest against any great outlay of money for the Italian planes if we can create a better, more efficient, safer instrument to do the same thing they propose."

On Aug. 30, 1917, Mr. Borglum wrote to Professor W. F. Durand, Chairman of the National Aeronautic Committee, that he, (Mr. Borglum,) after receiving a letter from Professor Alexander Klemin of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology regarding model tests, had sent smaller models to Boston than Professor Durand had first advised. He also told Professor Durand that unofficial tests had been "most gratifying and exceeding my anticipations."

In another letter to Professor Durand, dated Nov. 4, 1917, Mr. Borglum said: "The principles I hold are rather in opposition to the virtues of the present airplane period. I mean that I am making use of a definite grip upon the air, and while I may require an increase in power, I get stability in such degree I believe I can afford to pay that small price for that great gain."

Dr. Durand replied to this letter that he could not give Mr. Borglum a plane because many other inventors were making the same request.

INSISTS BORGLUM WITHDREW.

Gibson Says He Dropped Company to Make Investigation.

Hugo C. Gibson, who is an expert attached to the British Ministry of Munitions in this country, said yesterday that he discussed the formation of a new aircraft concern with Gutzon Borglum, Kenyon W. Mix, and others in January of this year, but he denied that Borglum's friendship with President Wilson was discussed as a possible asset to the company, and insisted that Borglum disassociated himself from the plan as soon as he received authority from the President to make an inquiry about aircraft production.

Mr. Gibson asserted that the proposition to form the new company came from Mix and he produced a letter from Mix outlining a scheme for a new concern, which was to manufacture battleplanes resembling the German Albatross. Mr. Gibson said:

"I met Mr. Borglum last Fall. He was interested in a propeller of a new shape and we made a trip in December to Dayton in order to experiment with it. On the trip back from Dayton we first became acquainted with Mr. Mix. We were discussing what we had been doing in the smoking room of the car, when Mix, who was a total stranger to both of us, introduced himself. We talked airplanes all the way to New York. There was absolutely no suggestion that Mr. Borglum had any influence with the President. A few days later I received a letter from Mr. Mix, which, I believe, shows beyond doubt that the suggestion of forming a new company came from him."

The letter was as follows:

Dodge Manufacturing Company,
Mishawaka, Ind., Dec. 28, 1917.
Office of the President.

Mr. H. C. Gibson, British Ministry of War, 16th floor, Equitable Building, 120 Broadway, New York City:

My Dear Mr. Gibson—From supposedly reliable sources comes the intimation that a plant, building scout planes of the German Albatross type, would be looked upon with favor by those in position to authorize the purchase of such machines.

I am not sure it would be advisable to attempt this work as a matter of production in our present organization in view of the existing tentative contracts for glued-up flat stock for finished side panels, wing ribs, box seams, engine bearers, &c.

The experimental work on the plane proper could be accomplished in one part of our establishment, but the thought strikes me that a new organization for the construction of completed planes, ready for the air, might be advisable.

The interests in such an organization should comprise the individual interests of those who might each bring to the company a specialized knowledge covering the design and manufacture of the component parts of the plane.

For instance, there is an argument in favor of our extending preferred rights to the new company in the matter of waterproof laminated wood construction, as applied to monocoque fusilage, wing ribs and coverings, engine bearers, spars, struts, &c., just as there is an equal argument for the successful builder of motors and propellers to do the same.

Such an outfit should be in a position at the time of organization to start immediate operation on some type fit to cope with the Albatross. Improvements should, of course, be added as rapidly as possible under a competent supervision that is able to distinguish between essentials and nonessentials to effective flying. A high-speed flying machine that is obtainable in quantities to the American Government by Summer will be of greater value even though it may fall 20 per cent. short of the ideal 100 per cent. which cannot be gotten at any price.

I would appreciate any suggestions which your knowledge of the situation may prompt, bearing in mind the fact that the physical plant for assembly is already available and that the complete plans for the Albatross even now in our possession.

It may be that you, in your position, could assist in bringing together those who are already equipped to build completed wings and fusilage and a certain manufacturer of motors whose product is above criticism, for the purpose, making it appear as though the meeting were either a product of your or his instigation.

Beyond acquainting Mr. Borglum with this information I will appreciate your confidence in the matter.

Permit me also at this time to express my sincere wishes that your measure of good health and prosperity may exceed your highest expectations in 1918. Cordially,

KENYON W. MIX,
Dodge Manufacturing Company.

P. S.—Unless Mr. Borglum or yourself advise to the contrary, I will probably not arrive in the East until the second of January.

"This letter," Mr. Gibson continued, "was suppressed from the correspondence made public in Washington, though my reply to it was printed. I believe it completely disposes of the statement of Mix that this company did not originate with him, but was one in which Mr. Borglum sought to have him engage.

"Mr. Borglum has been interested in aircraft for years, and it was through his contact with this business, he told me, that he learned of irregularities which diverted his attention from his original plans and caused him to drop the business, in order to make the investigation for President Wilson.

"I attended three or four conferences with Mr. Mix and others in this project, but it came to nothing. I never heard an intimation from any one at any of these conferences that Mr. Borglum had influence with the President which might be valuable, or anything to that effect."

Earlier in the day at the offices of the British Ministry of Munitions, at 120 Broadway, Mr. Gibson gave out the following typewritten statement:

"Mr. Borglum in December intended to engage in a commercial enterprise in which I should have been interested. After he had received authority from President Wilson to investigate the aircraft situation, he withdrew entirely from any of the tentative arrangements being made for that commercial enterprise, giving as his reason to me, that he considered dual activity as entirely incompatible with the position he then found himself in. Since he made that statement to me he has not even discussed the proposed commercial undertaking, and in fact has consistently avoided any discussions on such occasions when I have touched upon the subject in conversation.

"I do not understand the object of the statement purporting to come from Mr. Henry Harrison Suplee. I met him on not more than two occasions, and had neither authority or opportunity, nor did I say I could, or might influence orders for airplanes.

"In reply to a question—'I have some patents which would have been one of the bases of that commercial enterprise.' In reply to a question as to Mix affidavit, 'Mr. Borglum had no confidential connections with the Government that I know of at the time.' In reply to a question as to why Mr. Borglum was valuable in connection with the commercial enterprise, 'Mr. Borglum was interested in a propeller design of his own, or a suggestion, and discussed it with me because I knew something about propellers.' In reply to a question did Mr. Borglum come to you? 'He did not come to me—I did not go to him; a mutual acquaintance introduced us. Our commercial relations ceased when he told me that he had the letter from President Wilson.'"

When Mr. Gibson was asked last night about the letter to Mr. Mix mentioning an Italian aircraft engine he said:

"At that time Mr. Mix was supposed to be working with Mr. Borglum in the aircraft investigation, and he asked me, I believe, if I could find out something about the type of engine or output which Dusenberg was manufacturing. Dusenberg has an office in the same building with me, and I dropped in and asked about the motor. They told me something about it, but were reticent, and I sent what information I received to Mr. Mix."

WILL BACK BORGLUM.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Lester P. Barlow of New Haven, inventor of a bomb and other aircraft appurtenances, some of which have been adopted by the Government, said tonight:

"Regardless of what they do to Borglum or how black they paint him, I am going to take up his accusations for the most part and prove them by letters in my possession from United States officials before investigating committees of either House, if they leave the doors open. And I now challenge Government officials, in or out of the army, to prove that I am profiteering or dishonest, or in any way trying to further my own personal interest by these assertions. I welcome an answer to this challenge."

Mr. Barlow appeared recently before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs to tell what he knew of alleged inefficiency in aircraft production, but declined to testify because the committee would not consent to hold a session with open doors. He said tonight that he had been informed that he was to be called again.

TOLL OF U-BOATS IS CUT 40 PER CENT.

WASHINGTON, May 9. — Official French statistics on the submarine warfare received here in a dispatch from France today showed that the total losses of allied and neutral ships, including those from accidents at sea, were approximately 60 per cent. as great during April this year as in April, 1917.

In April last year 634,685 gross tons were lost, while this April's figures are 381,631. Submarine attacks now are more costly for the enemy, the dispatch points out, owing to the fact that the attacks are chiefly made with torpedoes instead of gunfire, as was the case before merchant ships were efficiently armed.

Attention is also called to the fact that each time the Germans have made an offensive on land they have made a corresponding effort with their submarines. Thus, during the second half of March, the number of activities of submarines increased. The first half of April marked a very distinct lessening, attributed to the counterefforts of the Allies.

Efficiency is having the work done by somebody who knows how. Let us do your mixing. It will be to your taste.

PREDICT FAILURE OF IRISH MISSION

Unionists Taunt Dublin Mayor Over Failure to Press for Appeal to Wilson.

REBUFF TO PARNELL CITED

Tranafer of Gen. Mahon from Ireland Taken to Mean Firm Policy on Draft.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, May 10.—Unionists here who are not necessarily in favor of the extension of conscription to Ireland in the present conditions, are very hopeful that the projected mission of the Lord Mayor of Dublin to Washington will end in a rebuff from the United States, both to the Lord Mayor himself and those whom he represents. They are, therefore, taunting the anti-conscriptionists with having become cold in endeavors to set the mission in operation, and are speaking as if they knew with certainty that the necessary passports would not be withheld by the Foreign Office.

If there is any slackening on the part of the Mansion House conference in pursuing the enterprise, which was entered on rashly and impetuously, it is not surprising that such a mission could not be executed in the present temper of the conference and of Ireland without wantonly offending and alienating thousands of Home Rulers in Britain and in Ulster. That consideration itself might have no weight with those Irishmen who have suddenly come to the conclusion they can do very well without any friends in the world but themselves, and if it stood alone it would not deter the Lord Mayor, but they have probably been looking into their own history and recalling the course of a similar project which was launched within the lifetime of many of them.

In 1876 Parnell was sent to America by the then advanced wing of the Nationalists to present an address to President Grant congratulating him on the centenary of American independence and containing, of course, allusions to British perfidy. President Grant was very polite, but intimated through the Secretary of State that he could only accept the address at the hands of the British Ambassador. As it was of the very essence of the mission that it should achieve recognition for Ireland alone by the President, the address was not presented, and Parnell came home disappointed.

If in 1876 the head of the American Government acted, what intelligent Irishman can expect any more flattering reception in 1918, when Anglo-American relations are most cordial. The Mansion House conference would do well to recede without delay from its false position which, if followed up, would only give the enemies of Ireland a triumph in the face of the whole world.

MAHON DISPLACED IN IRELAND.

Shaw May Succeed Him in Command of Troops There.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, May 10.—It is stated here, though not officially, that General Mahon's successor in the Irish command will be Major Gen. David G. Levinge Shaw, whose army career for the most part has been associated with India.

LONDON, May 10.—Lieutenant General Sir Bryan Mahon, Commander in Chief of the forces in Ireland, announced publicly last night that he was to leave Ireland. He said that he did not know who his successor would be.

This confirms rumors current for several days that important changes in the military command in Ireland are pending. The departure of General Mahon, it is believed, will be regarded in Ireland as an indication that the Government has decided to proceed boldly with Irish conscription.

Buys Site for Shipyard.

The Federal Shipbuilding Company yesterday bought at public auction at the City Hall, Jersey City, twenty-one acres of land on the west bank and under the Hackensack River, at the foot of Yale Avenue. Sixteen acres is under water. The price was $80,000. There was only one bid. It was said that the company was also trying to obtain eighty-eight acres adjoining the property bought today. The company will enlarge its plant. It now has a plant on the west side of the river, and will build one on the east side.

SEES KAISER'S DOOM ON EASTERN FRONT

Finnish Representative Says Germany Has Raised Barrier of Hatred There.

NO PEACE WITH JUNKERS

Santeri Nuorteva Addresses Meeting at Carnegie Hall in Sympathy with Red Government.

Santeri Nuorteva, representative in the United States of the "Provisional Government of the People's Republic of Finland," which is popularly known as the "Red Government," in the course of a speech he made last night to an audience that packed Carnegie Hall, declared that Germany "has raised in the east a barrier of bitter hatred that will eventually spell the doom of Kaiserdom." The occasion of the speech was a Socialist mass meeting called to express sympathy with the overthrown "Red" Government.

Mr. Nuorteva began his speech with the declaration that between the real Finnish people and the Prussian Junker there is no peace.

"There will be," he added, "no peace between them. There is peace and affectionate love between the Finnish aristocracy and the German Junkers, for they know that if they don't hang together they will hang separately."

Mr. Nuorteva pointed out that the Swedish landed aristocracy in Finland was almost to a man back of the German invaders in the present crisis in the history of the Finns. He said that the Germans were shooting down not only innocent men, but women as well in Finland, after having received a list of the leaders of the Finnish revolutionary movement from traitors.

"The German people, enchanted by their Junkers," he added, "are still leading themselves to do the dirty work of their bloodthirsty masters who seek to stamp out the democratic movement in Finland, these unworthy heirs of Marx and of Liebknecht. But the nemesis of history already stands at the door of junkerdom.

"The people of Finland are subdued, but not conquered. At the first opportunity they will rise in revolt, and the day of reckoning for the Finnish junkers will coincide with 'The Day' of the German lords—not 'The Day' they have been expecting, but 'The Day' of social judgment. In Finland the Germans and the 'White Guard' junkers have been killing the leaders of the labor movement. They believe they thereby will crush the movement forever. The fools! They do not understand that in our times every working man and woman is a leader, ready to step in where his comrades have fallen.

"Some allied leaders have been saying that the war will be ended when the allied flags float in Berlin. Von Hindenburg has boasted that the German flag will soon fly in Paris. But today the Socialist Republic flag of Russia floats over a Socialist embassy in Berlin, a terrible symbol of the greatest menace to the German rulers, for this flag represents the power of a great popular idea that involves the complete destruction of kaiserism and junkerdom and all their works.

"I am going to deal with just one phase of the Russian situation, the situation in the border provinces of Russia-Finland and the Baltic provinces. In all these districts the German invasion has been facilitated by the junker classes, the capitalists, the feudal landowners. In all these districts feudal conditions have prevailed to the present day. The junker classes have been able to control virtually all administrative offices and the courts by hereditary right.

"Now, when the Finnish junkers have invited the Germans to Finland and the Germans are acting as their agents, at a time when they are slaughtering the laboring men and women of Finland by the thousands and trying to exterminate the whole labor movement with German machine guns, they have the nerve to tell the American people and the rest of the world that they had to invite the Germans to preserve the civilization of Finland against the 'anarchistic' and murderous Socialists. They say that the alliance with Germany is merely a recent incident, but as far back as 1914 the present 'White Guard' leaders were sending thousands of Finnish young men to be trained in the German Army.

"Any reactionary demonstration in Russia and the border, no matter how it starts, is bound to turn to Germany. Only with German help can it maintain its power. A heavy penalty will be paid by the Allies if this is not understood. A heavy penalty has been paid already. It was paid in the Ukraine when France sent the bourgeoisie Rada $35,000,000 and the Rada immediately betrayed France."

There were several other speakers, among them Morris Hillquit and John Reed. Reed, who is under indictment for violating the Espionage act, described conditions in Russia, and Hillquit made a mild exposition of Socialist doctrines.

NEW CABINET IN HUNGARY.

Wekerle to Press Program for Suffrage Reform Compromise.

BUDAPEST, May 10, (via London.)—A new Hungarian Cabinet has been formed, with Dr. Alexander Wekerle as Premier and Minister of the Interior. The other Ministers are: Commerce, Joseph Szterenyi; Agriculture, Count Adalbert Serenyi; Education, Count Johann Zichy; Finance, Count Popowitch; Food, Prince Windischgraetz; Defense, Baron Szurmay; Court Affairs, Count Aladar Zichy; Justice, Dr. Gustave Toery; Minister for Croatia, Dr. Karl Unkelhausser, and Social Affairs, Count Paul Teleki.

Premier Wekerle has stated that the Government intends to introduce various small amendments to the suffrage proposals, based on compromises that will make the acceptance of the proposals possible. The amendments provide that every citizen who would not otherwise have the right to vote shall obtain that right if he gives proof of sufficient education to have passed through four classes of the national school and is also master of the Hungarian language, or if he has passed through six classes of the national school.

The Premier added that workmen would have the right to vote. The movement for extension of the suffrage will be carried out forthwith, and the Government will maintain its social and economic program and its plan of army reform.

WAR CALLS 'DAN' COSTIGAN.

Inspector to Head Police Arrangements at All Shipyards.

Inspector Daniel Costigan made application yesterday for a year's leave of absence to enable him to accept an appointment from the Shipping Board to take charge of the policing of all the shipyards in the United States.

Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board sent a telegram direct to Mayor Hylan, asking for the services of Inspector Costigan for the period of the war. Mayor Hylan referred the letter to Police Commissioner Enright, who said yesterday that he had not acted on the matter yet, but would doubtless grant the leave.

Inspector Costigan has been in charge of the Vice Squad, raiding gambling and disorderly houses in this city almost continuously since 1905, and is one of the most highly regarded members of the Police Department. He was born in 1867, and joined the Police Department in 1889.

POLICE RAID STARTLES BROADWAY CROWDS

Drug Peddlers Among the Score of Prisoners Taken in a Roundup of Undesirables.

Thousands of homeward bound theatre patrons last night saw Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith and Inspector Dominick Henry, assisted by a large number of policemen in plain clothes, conduct a roundup of undesirable characters along Broadway, between Times Square and Columbus Circle.

A patrol wagon was drawn up at Forty-seventh Street and Broadway at 11 o'clock, and the police started in at once to make arrests.

The detectives entered cigar stores, cafés, and other places, and arrested men and women. More than a score had been taken into custody before midnight. Nearly all were well dressed.

The police said that the men arrested were known to them as drug peddlers and loungers of bad reputation. Most of the prisoners were women.

The raid caused much excitement in the streets and the crowds which gathered were restrained with difficulty.

WORK FOR JEWISH SOLDIERS

Welfare Board Explains What Is Being Done Here and Abroad.

A booklet has been published by the Jewish Welfare Board of the United States Army and Navy explaining the purpose of the work which it has undertaken among the Jews in the training camps in this country and behind the lines in France. As the need to care for the physical and spiritual welfare of the Protestant and Roman Catholic troops was recognized by the Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus, so many prominent Jews recognized that the same need existed in regard to the 60,000 Jews at present in the United States military service with the result that the Jewish Welfare Board was organized. The Jewish Welfare Board is planned to co-operate with the other welfare organizations, and seeks to take nothing from the scope of their usefulness. The statement says:

"The board first of all recognizes that there is no idea in the work undertaken of segregating the Jew from his Gentile brother in arms. The idea is to assist the Jewish youth in such a manner as shall enable him to most easily harmonize with the conditions surrounding him, to fraternize with his non-Jewish comrades, to have better understanding of the point of view of those of other beliefs, and to in turn enable the non-Jew to have better understanding of him."

In explaining the way in which the work of the Jewish Welfare Board is carried out in the military training camps, it is stated that the country has been divided into sections, each of which is in charge of a traveling field secretary, whose duty it is to circulate among the communities and camps, to organize work, and to supervise it when established. In addition to the field secretaries are various workers who are employed directly at the camps themselves. Great care is taken to employ persons adapted to the work, and for this purpose a special training school has been opened in this city to teach future secretaries their duties. It is expected that more than 200 secretaries will soon be in the field.

In addition to the work in this country the Jewish Welfare Board is cooperating with British and French organizations in Paris and back of the western front to care for the Jews in service abroad. Among other activities the board is supplying books on all sorts of topics to the soldiers. Colonel Harry Cutler is Chairman of the Executive Committee of the board; Cyrus Adler, Vice Chairman; Chester J. Teller, Secretary, and Walter E. Sachs, Treasurer.

30 TEAMS IN ARMY LEAGUE.

Americans in France Will Open Baseball Season Tomorrow.

PARIS, May 10.—The league of baseball teams made up from the various branches of the American services in France has become so large that it has been divided into five sections of six clubs each.

All but two of the thirty teams are composed of men of the American expeditionary forces. An official schedule has been prepared, and the season will begin on Sunday. The winners of each section will play a series for the pennant.

MAKE FIRST ARREST ON SABOTAGE CHARGE

Poughkeepsie Boy Is Accused of Mutilating Cloth Intended for Gas Masks.

MAY BE IRRESPONSIBLE

Carpenter Goes to the Workhouse for Assailing the Liberty Loan.

John Ulrich, a seventeen-year-old boy of Poughkeepsie, who was employed by a factory in that city which is making waterproofed cloth to be converted into bags for gas masks, was arrested yesterday charged with mutilating two bolts of the finished material. He was detected, and said he cut the cloth in order to show what he hoped "would happen to the Kaiser." He has made a confession, and in it says he did not intend to injure the United States. He is held under the new sabotage law, which makes acts of this sort a felony, punishable by a term of thirty years in the Federal Penitentiary.

Ulrich's parents and relatives, it was said at the office of the Department of Justice yesterday, were loyal citizens of the United States, and the Government authorities said they were not certain but that the boy was mentally unbalanced. He will be examined today by Assistant United States Attorney Matthews. If he is responsible he will be the first person to be held under the new law in this State.

George C. Cuffe, 34 years old, of 506 West 146th Street, was found guilty of making disloyal remarks by Magistrate Cobb in Washington Heights Court yesterday and was sent to the workhouse for six months.

Cuffe, who is a carpenter, was arrested by Ralph Kennedy, who lives at 219 Audubon Avenue. He charged Cuffe with making disparaging remarks about the Government and the Liberty Loan on the night of May 6 at the corner of St. Nicholas Avenue and 181st Street. He accused Cuffe of saying "The Liberty Loan is nothing but a money-making machine."

A man giving the name of Henry Hawes Meday was before Commissioner Hitchcock yesterday on the charge of falsely representing himself to be a Government officer. Meday was held in $2,500 bail until his case can be investigated.

Luther S. Bedford, under indictment with Jeremiah A. O'Leary for violating the espionage law in publishing certain articles in the Bull, was committed by Magistrate Simpson yesterday to the psychopathic ward at Bellevue Hospital for observation for ten days as to his mental condition.

Bedford appeared before Federal Judge A. N. Hand yesterday and presented a long printed statement in which he said that well-known New York citizens were in a plot against him.

Robert Oswald, a photographer of 1,133 Lexington Avenue, who was held in $1,000 bail when arraigned on a charge of having improper pictures in his possession on Thursday night, was held in $1,000 bail for Special Sessions by Magistrate Groehl in the Men's Night Court last night. The Magistrate told the defendant's counsel that if he were to release the prisoner Government officials representing the Army Intelligence Bureau would take him into custody to question him in relation to pictures of the locks and gates of the Panama Canal which were found in his home. Some chemicals which Oswald said he used in developing pictures will be examined by Government officials.

TELL OF I. W. W. SABOTAGE.

Documents in Chicago Trial Show Plot Against Air Program.

CHICAGO, May 10.—By defeat of the aircraft program and the Selective Service act, together with the practice of sabotage in the trenches in France and the factories at home it was hoped by the Industrial Workers of the World to cripple America's war plans, according to evidence presented by the Government today in the seditious conspiracy trial of 1. W. W. leaders.

The 112 defendants listened intently during the presentation of a great mass of documentary evidence which characterized conscription as a challenge to the workingman, advocated the spiking of guns and the spoiling of powder, and termed the uniform of the soldier "the livery of the scab herder."

"Why not ask the lumberjack?" was the heading of an article in an official organ of Aug. 8, 1917, in which authorities were quoted as saying that the nation's aircraft program would be delayed a year unless a strike in the Northwest lumber districts were settled in two weeks.

"This is an open admission that we have tied up the program," said the article.

"And to miners, Woodrow Wilson says, if you slacken or fail armies and statesmen are helpless," read a previous notice to members presented by the Government. "Right you are, Woody. When the cat (sabotage) sits on the pick handle brass buttons must go."

Various means of breaking down the military machine by a campaign of destruction and the teaching of discontent were referred to in some of the matter placed on record.

"The patriotic I. W. W. member does not salute the flag," said one paragraph. "He slows down production by practicing sabotage. He proves his loyalty by intelligent rebellion."

BOLSHEVIST CONSUL JAILED.

Official at Glasgow Must Serve Five Years for Obstructing Recruiting.

EDINBURGH, May 10.—For making speeches prejudicial to recruiting, John MacLean, Consul in Glasgow of the Russian Bolshevist Government, was sentenced to five years' penal servitude under the Defense of the Realm act in the High Court yesterday.

The evidence showed that MacLean had publicly urged workingmen to break all laws and to replace Parliament by an organization patterned after the Russian Soviets.

DESERTER FACES DEATH.

President to Decide if Sentence Shall Be Carried Out.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The case of a soldier in the American expeditionary forces condemned to death for deserting in the face of the enemy was sent to President Wilson today for final action.

The records of the trial were carefully reviewed by the Judge Advocate General's office to make certain that every step taken had been in legal order. The President recently commuted the death sentences of two soldiers for sleeping at their posts and of two others who disobeyed orders.

Chaplain Franz J. Feinler, who was sent back from France by General Pershing and afterward was stationed in Hawaii, has been sentenced to a long term of imprisonment on charges of disloyalty. His case was received at the War Department today for review.

BAR SINGER FROM CAMPS.

Officials Find Miss Esther Dale Has Brother in Service.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 10.—Miss Esther Dale of this city, instructor in voice culture at Smith College, has been definitely prohibited by the War Department from singing in the army camps in France, which she had planned to do under Y. M. C. A. auspices, because she has a brother in the service, it was announced today.

The regulation forbids relatives of any man in the army from visiting the camps abroad, and the Y. M. C. A. was unable to bring about an exception.

GERMANY TO CUT VACATIONS

Visits to Resort Towns to be Limited to Four Weeks.

AMSTERDAM, April 20, (Correspondence of Associated Press.)—Vacations are to be rationed in Germany. An Imperial law is now before the Federal Council providing for the limitation to four weeks of the period during which visitors may stay in towns of less than 6,000 population.

The measure is advocated owing to the difficulties with the food supply in certain mountain resorts.

MUST NOT DISCHARGE UNION TELEGRAPHERS

War Labor Board Asks Wire Companies to Abide by President's Proclamation.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The National War Labor Board, headed by ex-President Taft and Frank P. Walsh, ruled today that under the national labor agreement entered into on March 29 and approved by President Wilson on April 8, the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies must not, if they are to abide by the decision made, discharge employes because they have organized.

This pronouncement was contained in an official statement and came as the first test case involving the principles laid down by the national board with the object of preventing strikes and lockouts during the war. The conferees, five of whom represented capital and five the labor interests, declared for the principle of the open shop, but held that employes should not be discriminated against for expanding their organizations if they did not resort to force. The official statement of the National War Labor Board read:

"Mr. Taft and Mr. Walsh have been directed by the board to take up the mediation of the differences between the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies and the telegraph operators with a wiew to an amicable adjustment of their differences. The board takes this occasion earnestly to request all persons faithfully to abide by its declaration of principles to govern the relations between workers and employers, of date March 29, 1918, and proclaimed by the President in his proclamation of the 8th of April, 1918, to the end that all employes shall be retained and continue in their respective employments and the maximum of production thus maintained."

SEVENTH GETS NEW COLORS

Gift of Veterans Presented to Regiment by Governor.

While thousands cheered from the boxes and galleries of their armory, the new 7th Regiment, New York Guard, last night honored the colors of the old 7th Regiment, now known as the 107th Infantry, U. S. A., and was reviewed by Governor Whitman. The new colors, the gift of Company K of the Veteran Association, were received to replace those that were deposited with elaborate ceremonies among the historic mementoes of New York's oldest military organization.

Governor Whitman presented the new colors to Colonel De Witt Clinton Falls, after reviewing the regiment. The Governor, accompanied by Mrs. Whitman, Adjt. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill, Lieut. Commander L. M. Josephthal, Lieut. Col. Arthur Schermerhorn, Chief of Staff, and Majors Hoppin, Moore, Smith, and Kingsbury, were escorted from the St. Regis Hotel by the Woman's Motor Corps of America. At the conclusion of the review the regiment stood at attention while the old colors, under a special escort of the Color Company, were carried to the Colonel's quarters, where they were placed among the colors that have been carried by the regiment for 114 years.

In referring to the war, Governor Whitman in a brief speech said that it was a question of triumph or tribute. The assemblage cried out, "It's going to be a triumph." "Yes," said the Governor, "a great and glorious triumph for America and her allies." After Governor Whitman's speech, 100 of the French "Blue Devils" arrived. The "Marseillaise" was played and the visitors received a tremendous ovation. Later, in the officers' mess, supper for more than 100 was served. Colonel Falls was toastmaster, and brief speeches were made by Governor Whitman, Adjt. Gen. Sherrill, Major Gen. Daniel Appleton, and General George R. Dyer, commanding the First Brigade. Among the guests were Admiral and Mrs. Gleaves, Colonel and Mrs. Hollis Wells, Colonel and Mrs. Rogers Winthrop, Colonel and Mrs. John Delafield, Colonel and Mrs. Treadwell, Colonel and Mrs. Peets, and many other officers of the army and the new State Guard.

SWANN TO INQUIRE INTO CAR CRASH

District Attorney Says Officials Knew Equipment Was in Need of Repair.

IN TWO OTHER ACCIDENTS

Service Board to Act if Operating Company Is Held at Fault.

Defective equipment of the crosstown car of the Union Railways Company was the primary cause of the double collision on Thursday that resulted in the death of a passenger and the injury of a score of others at 145th Street, between Amsterdam and Eighth Avenues, District Attorney Swann announced last night, at the conclusion of a partial investigation.

"At least two of the employes," he said, "had known of the bad condition of the car a few houre preceding the collision, and we believe it was also known to one or more officials of the road that the car was unfit for operation, especially on a steep grade like that extending from Amsterdam to Eighth Avenue. We have subpoenaed all of the responsible officials of the railway company and the inquiry will be continued today in an effort to fix the responsibility for the disaster."

According to the traffic sheets and written records of the company the same car had twice before been the cause of collision. In these records, which were taken by the District Attorney, it was also shown that railway inspectors had twice reported the car windows broken, indicating other collisions or trouble in operation.

Here is the official record of the car as reported in the company's books by inspectors: Nov. 9, 1917, "disabled;" Dec. 20, "disabled;" Dec. 21, "collision;" Feb. 18, 1918, "collision;" March 13, "taken from repair shop;" March 26, "returned to repair shop;" March 29, "door circuit-wires out of order;" April 14, "broken glass," and April 17, "broken glass."

"The defective condition of the car caused it to be known among the employes as a 'hoodoo,'" said Assistant District Attorney Niner, who was assisted in the investigation by Assistant District Attorney Jacob Goldstein. "Employes shunned this car because of the difficulty they found in operating it. Back in October, 1917, when employes complained so much about going on this car, the old number of it—400—was changed to 109. Some of the employes, it seems, had figured the old number to be 'hoodoo 13.'

"The evidence thus far obtained tends to show criminal negligence in the operation of this car. It was out of repair, and this fact seems to have been known to the officials of the road, according to reports of inspectors in our possession. Despite this known condition the car was operated on the steepest and most dangerous grade of the railway system."

Pasquale Rocco, the motorman operating it at the time of the accident, said the car "lunged ahead" when he turned off the power to reduce speed. He shouted to the woman conductor, Miss Gertrude McCall, who applied emergency brakes and opened doors, which should have stopped the car automatically, but it sped down the grade and beyond control.

Subpoenas were issued for the appearance today of Edward A. Maher, Jr., Vice President and General Manager of the railway company; General Superintendant D. W. Reynolds, and J. S. McWhirter and William Keller, in charge of equipment and repairs.

Following an investigation of the accident by engineers and inspectors of the Public Service Commission yesterday, the commission issued a statement to the effect that many recent accidents on surface lines were due to the severe strain put upon equipment during the Winter, and due partly to the difficulty in getting sufficient material to make necessary repairs. The accident at 145th Street, announced the commission, was due to the dropping of a pin in the brake rigging.

Concerning two other accidents, one a collision between two Union Railway cars at Taylor Avenue in the Bronx and the other a runaway car at 125th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, the statement says that the first was due to defective airbrake pipes, and the other was because the motorman left his car without first setting the brakes. Public Service Commissioner Hervey made this comment:

"It appears that accidents in two cases were due to defective equipment and the other to lack of attention on the part of the operator. If, after further investigation, the commission concludes that any of the accidents was due to neglect on the part of the operating company, the matter will be made the subject of a formal hearing, but there is no present evidence that such is the case."

MURDERED MAN IDENTIFIED.

Police Believe Queens Case Sequel of Akron, Ohio, Homicides.

The Italian who was murdered in the vicinity of North Beach, at the outskirts of Long Island City, last Tuesday night, and whose body was found Wednesday afternoon near the Astoria road and Forty-seventh Street, East Elmhurst, has been identified as Baldassore Siola, 24 years old, of 150 Meserole Street, Brooklyn, who for several weeks had been employed in Shulte's bakery at 77 Harrison Street, Brooklyn.

Detectives of the Queens Detective Bureau working on the case yesterday adopted the theory that the murder was a sequel to the murder of Patrolman Edward Costigan and Court Attendant John Hunt in Akron, Ohio, a month ago. They say that they have learned that Siola came to Brooklyn a week after the Akron murder in company with Anthony Masredi and James Palmeri, both of whom were arrested in Brooklyn two weeks ago and who were later extradited and taken back to Akron on a charge of connection with the murder of the police officers there.

Girolomo Casarola, 26 years old, a laborer, of 75 Montrose Street, Brooklyn, was arraigned by the detectives before Magistrate Doyle in the Long Island City Police Court yesterday, and held on a short affidavit without bail until Monday. He was identified as a man who called Siola from his home on last Tuesday night several hours before the murder. He said he was acquainted with the murdered man but knew nothing about the killing.

CITY TO HAVE BOARD FOR LABOR TROUBLES.

Peter J. Brady Tells Labor League Mayor Soon Will Announce Makeup of Body.

SEEK RULES FOR PICKETING

Courts, City and County Authorities Asked to Agree Upon Status of Strikers.

New York is to have a Board of Conciliation, Mediation and Arbitration to handle labor troubles, according to announcement made yesterday by Peter J. Brady, Supervisor of the City Record, who is Secretary of the Labor League. Making a report for the league's Executive Committee at a meeting of the league in the Aldermanic Chambers of the City Hall, Mr. Brady declared that Mayor Hylan had promised to consider the matter.

"I am satisfied that the makeup of the board will soon be announced," said Mr. Brady. "It will be composed of an equal number of city officials, employers and labor men. The board will in all probability consist of fifteen members."

The Committee on Courts and Police for the league reported that two conferences had been held with Police Commissioner Enright relative to the status of pickets and strikers in times of strikes or lockouts. Mr. Brady, who read the report, said that it was desired to formulate rules whereby laboring men might co-operate with the police in preventing violence. According to him an effort is to be made to confer with the five Sheriffs of New York City and with the Magistrates, Judges of Special Sessions, and District Attorneys to get a collective ruling on the legal status of pickets in such cases. "This," said Mr. Brady, "will tend to eliminate private detective agencies and strikebreakers."

The league's Committee on National Defense reported that it had conferred with the Mayor's Committee on National Defense relative to the establishment of training centres for nurses and nurses' assistants. The committee announced that it had been encouraged in the matter and would now take up the question with the National Government.

A drive in support of the sale of War Savings Stamps and Certificates was also announced by the Committee on National Defense. Mr. Brady said in this connection that many unions had already adopted the plan for increasing dues from 25 to 50 cents a week, the extra sum to be invested in War Stamps for the members. By this scheme, said Mr. Brady, the Government will be insured of steady subscriptions from all parts of the country.

The question of health and sanitation was taken up by the committee on those subjects. It was reported that Dr. Copeland, the Health Commissioner, had been visited in an effort to persuade him to appoint ten doctors and forty inspectors to care for the poorer districts. Dr. Copeland promised, it was reported, to take the matter up with the Board of Estimate. All the reports were adopted without debate after the question had been put by John Clark, President of the league, who presided.

In the general discussion later, Samuel Squibb, business agent for the Granite Cutters' Union, urged that the league go on record as favoring the retention in office of Dr. Lewis Harris, Director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases. After Mr. Squibb had offered his suggestion as a motion it was defeated on the ground that it savored too much of an attempt to dictate to the Mayor.

Before adjourning the league voted to go on record as favoring Senator Hoke Smith's bill, which provides to construct, maintain, and continue as long as needed reconstruction and educational centres for crippled soldiers and sailors.

WHITMAN OVERRULES HYLAN

Signs Court Measures Which Were Disapproved by the Mayor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 10.—Governor Whitman today, over Mayor Hylan's disapproval, signed the Walker bills providing that the Judges of the Court of Special Sessions may appoint a crier and provide for his salary. The bills were submitted to the New York City Board of Estimate and Apportionment. Mayor Hylan returned them to the Governor with his disapproval, but gave no reason, which led the Governor to sign the measures.

The Governor disposed of another of the many war bills that were before him in signing the Thompson bills authorizing the merger of three Niagara Falls power companies and permitting them to use diverted waters of the Niagara River to generate additional power needed for war purposes. These bills were introduced at the request of the War Department and were signed over the vigorous protests from city officials of Buffalo.

The measures were opposed because it was believed that when the consolidation was effected it would result in increased rates and because it was claimed that some of the powers of the Public Service Commission were abrogated by the terms of the bills. This opposition was so strong that before the Governor signed the bills he insisted that the representatives of the companies affected sign a statement that the bills are approved as war measures for the purpose of saving time in the development of power needed by the Federal Government. The statement also declared that the consolidated company will never claim before any rate making body that the capitalization authorized by the bills is to control rates. The companies further agreed that they are absolutely under the control of the Public Service Commission.

The Governor vetoed the bill which would have provided a road between West Point and the New England States "because West Point is not a fort from which armed forces of the United States would advance in large numbers to the defense of the Eastern seaboard."

TO BUY COMMERCIAL TRUCKS

Army Abandons Plan of Producing Small-Size Liberty Vans.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The purchase of commercial types of trucks for army use instead of the development of two smaller types of the Liberty trucks has been ordered by the War Department. It is understood that the manufacture of the large three-ton Liberty truck will continue.

Orders will be placed immediately for 1,500 three-quarter-ton trucks probably with the General Motors Company and for 2,500 chassis of one and a half tons with different makers. About 2,400 large type Liberty trucks have been produced. The output probably will reach 10,000 by Aug. 1. Plans contemplate 8,000 more and 8,000 large commercial trucks of three to five tons capacity with four-wheel drive.

Officials have not given any reason for abandoning smaller size Liberty trucks.

DUTCH EAGER TO SHIP IN AMERICAN CRAFT

Sailors Who Refused Service Here Now Make Application to the United States Consul.

HAD FEARED LOSS OF PAY

Rumors, Probably Part of German Propaganda, Had Influenced Them Against American Engagements.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, May 9.—In view of the publicity given to the "patriotism" of the Dutch seamen in refusing to sail the Dutch ships requisitioned by America, it is somewhat strange that many of these same Dutch seamen who returned on the Nieuw Amsterdam are now applying to the American and British Consulates for permission to serve in the American merchant marine. As THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent has already cabled, both the Dutch and the German press played up the "patriotic" attitude of the Dutch seamen toward the American Government in refusing to accept the almighty dollar for sailing under the American flag. The German press, seeing an opportunity for propaganda in this story, quoted vast sums offered to the seamen and Chevalier van Rappard, former Dutch Minister to Washington, addressed the seamen aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam, thanking them for their patriotism.

On being asked their reason for not remaining in America, the seamen said that they had been told that they would not receive their pay unless they returned to Holland. This rumor was very likely spread by the pro-German element in America, as it cannot be confirmed here.

The Captain of one of the requisitioned Dutch ships, speaking to THE TIMES correspondent, denied that the Dutch seamen received offers of large sums to serve under the American flag. Only the usual wages for seamen in American ships were offered. This Captain said he was glad to leave the sea while the war lasted.

When asked if the action of the allied Governments made him feel bitter, he said:

"The Americans and the British have never torpedoed my ships, but the Germans have torpedoed two ships under me."

The shortage of food in Holland is one of the reasons why seamen are now anxious to sail under the Stars and Stripes.

BRAZIL'S NEW CHIEF STANCH FOR ALLIES

President-Elect Alves's Policy Will Be Close War Co-operation with United States.

WELCOMES WILSON'S LEAD

Trusts the "Self-Abnegation" of This Country and Stands for Pan Americanism.

An interview with President-elect Rodriguez Alves, who will become President of Brazil for the second time on Nov. 15 next, was cabled yesterday from Sao Paulo, Brazil, by Roy W. Howard, President of the United Press Association. In it President-elect Alves said:

"Brazil will follow the course of the United States to the end of the war. The change of administration will not alter our policy of backing up the leadership of the United States in the most friendly and genuine way.

"The self-abnegation of the United States in offering itself as a sacrifice in the war, and in abandoning the pursuits of peace without selfish individual ambitions and without a single objective which is not guaranteed to all peoples, has given President Wilson unprecedented moral authority and has raised the United States in universal estimation to a position from which it can accomplish the absolute solidarity of the democracies of the western hemisphere without inciting the slightest envy or suspicion.

"The unanimity of support the United States is giving to President Wilson, coupled with his own faithfulness to democratic fundamentals, has unprecedentedly strengthened the possibilities of his benign activities. It has eliminated in Brazil, as in the rest of the world, the latent prejudice that the United States is open to suspicion of selfishness.

"The course of the United States during the war crisis stirs my personal pride that during my previous administration from 1903 to 1906, with Senhor Rio Branca as Foreign Secretary, we gave much attention to promoting the closest relationship with the United States.

"By raising our Washington legation to the rank of an embassy and promoting the second Pan-American Congress we so manifested our regard that Brazil was honored with a visit from that other great statesman, Elihu Root, who, like President Wilson, greatly advanced South American understanding and appreciation of the high purposes of the United States.

"For even stronger reasons the same policy will be followed during my second administration. Our main foreign policy will be to eliminate prejudices and suspicions between all American countries, just as on the occasion of Mr. Root's memorable visit to Brazil I personally and heartily indorsed extension of the trip to the other great Southern Republics."

Later on the President-elect said:

"Unquestionably, Brazil stands for Pan Americanism, having been for years in closest sympathy with the United States and seemingly having understood the Washington policy better than some others have. Brazil has everything she desires territorially and she covets nothing of her neighbors. Naturally she recognizes that the United States is equally endowed and equally uncovetous. Speaking for Brazil only, Pan Americanism is the most sensible policy. The resourcefulness and financial strength of the United States offer much that we need after the war. On the other hand, the development of Brazil's natural wealth offers much to the United States. Any state policy which retards the meeting of these interests is too shortsighted long to survive."

LABOR DELEGATION GREETED BY FRENCH

Americans Received Officially at City Hall and Lunch as Government Guests.

DEAF TO GERMAN WORKERS

Leader Reaffirms Decision Not to Deal with Them — Pleased with Conditions at Front.

PARIS, May 10.—The members of the American labor delegation were officially received this afternoon in the City Hall by M. Reisz, Vice President of the City Council, who acted for M. Mathouard, the President, who was ill. Standing under the coat of arms of Paris, around which the French and American flags were entwined, M. Reisz thanked William Graves Sharp, the American Ambassador, for the presence of the American delegates and eulogized President Wilson.

"American collaboration in the war," said M. Reisz, "will make certain its successful termination."

M. Aurand, the new Prefect of the Seine, who assumed his post today, said:

"My assumption of the functions of Prefect of Paris could not begin more auspiciously for me than to have as my first official act the reception of this splendid delegation. United under the same fundamental principles of democracy, the French and Americans henceforth will form one family."

James Wilson, head of the delegation, assured the French people of the unsliterable decision of the United States to push the war with all possible speed.

"We leave France," said Mr. Wilson, "with more admiration for the French people than ever before."

As the Americans departed from City Hall Square there was an outburst of cheering and cries of "Long live America."

"We were tremendously impressed and intensely satisfied with what we saw," said Mr. Wilson. "The chiefs and the soldiers both told us everything was going well and that they were waiting confidently the event. They know what they are talking about, and we can believe them. We saw the American boys. They fully realize the terrible nature of the struggle we are engaged in, and they displayed indomitable energy and courage. They mean to show themselves worthy of their admirable brothers-in-arms, with whom they are defending civilization and liberty. We are sure they will make good."

Mr. Wilson reaffirmed at a luncheon given at the Foreign Office today that American labor would not discuss the war with representatives of German labor until victory was won, because German labor, which was permitting the war, must do something itself in its own country toward ending the conflict justly before it could debate with the labor representatives of the allied countries on what ought to be.

The luncheon was given by Stephen Pichon, Foreign Minister, on behalf of the French Government. With the exception of Premier Clemenceau, all the members of the Cabinet were present as well as other men notable in French public life. Ambassador Sharp was also in attendance.

Afterward Mr. Wilson said to The Associated Press correspondent that the labor people at home might be sure that their representatives in the delegation had not changed their views since arriving in Europe. They had come, he said, to consider how labor could advance its effectiveness in war.

M. Collard, Minister of Labor, spoke warmly in admiration of what Americans were doing, and the part that workingmen were playing in America's effort.

EIGHT SOLDIERS KILLED IN A TRAIN WRECK

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 10.—Eight soldiers were killed and 26 injured today when a wooden railroad coach filled with members of the 321st Infantry went over a trestle at Camp Jackson. All of the men were from Southern States.

The men had just entrained for the army cantonment at Camp Sevier, at Greenville, S. C. Nearly all of the men in two wooden coaches were killed or seriously injured, according to reports reaching here.

Two wooden coaches jumped the track first and a steel coach followed and crushed them. It was reported no one in the steel coach was seriously hurt.

ACQUITS ITALIAN MARQUIS.

Roman Court Quashes Charges of Disloyalty Against Monteforte.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 10.—Marquis Giovanni Monteforte, a Neapolitan nobleman, accused of having given utterance to anti-war and anti-ally phrases in the Hunt Club here, of which the King is Honorary President, and Prince Colonna, Mayor of Rome, Acting President, has just been acquitted.

According to the accusation, Monteforte, while dining in the club rooms at the end of March with Count Marcelli, a Deputy; Marquis Cappelli, President of the International Institute of Agriculture, and Marquis Soragna, who is in the Italian diplomatic service, said:

"I trust that the Germans will break through and thus we shall have peace, and I shall be able to settle in Germany, which is a more civilized country than ours."

Marcelli testified that he protested, urging Monteforte to go to Germany immediately, but that the dispute was hushed by other members. The affair was communicated to the police, who arrested Monteforte.

At the trial Marcelli confirmed the accusation in all its details; but other members of the club, from which Monteforte had resigned, said that evidently the Marquis had been misunderstood. They testified to his patriotism, saying that he had lived in France for many years and had lost several members of his family in the war.

The Crown prosecutor demanded six months' imprisonment and a fine of 500 lire for Monteforte, but the court cleared him of the accusation.

ocratic leaders will propose that Congress adjourn early, about July 1, and return in an extra session after the November elections to consider revenue matters.

Representative Kitchin, expressing the views of his colleagues on the Ways and Means Committee, said after a conference with Senator Simmons today:

"If Mr. McAdoo shows the Ways and Means Committee that there is an absolute necessity for a revenue bill this session the committee will take pleasure in framing and passing a bill.

"In the opinion of several members of the committee who have given considerable thought to the matter, it will be most difficult to show this necessity. From figures heretofore given, including bonds sold and authorized and certificates of indebtedness authorized to be issued, there will be over $12,000,000,000 available for expenditures from July 1 to January or February next.

Expects Extra Session.

"The committee is, and has been, under the impression that if another revenue measure is necessary the President would call another extra session of Congress in November."

Senator Simmons, taking the same position and viewing the situation from a political as well as a financial angle, said:

"No one doubts for a moment that we must pass a War Revenue bill soon. But Mr. Kitchin and the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance are agreed that this is not the time to do it, if it can be avoided. The general sentiment of both houses agrees with that.

"Mr. Kitchin and I believe we can convince Secretary McAdoo when we see him that by additional legislation we can avoid a tax bill. At any rate, we are not convinced of the imperative necessity of it, and hence we are going to ask Mr. McAdoo to 'show us.'

"The revenue law passed last session is now expected to yield nearly a billion dollars more than was at first expected of it. The last Liberty Loan also will produce about a billion more than was expected. This will give the Treasury $2,000,000,000. At the rate we are spending money now—about $500,000,000 a month—that two billions would last four months, and that could run over into next year. But if it is not enough, additional bonds could be issued, after those already authorized but not yet sold have been disposed of. We shall propose that course to Mr. McAdoo.

"We are perfectly willing to have Congress go home soon and return in November, right after election, to expedite a tax bill. But members should be allowed to return home to their constituents not only because there is an election, but to conciliate dissatisfaction which exists over the way we have been running things down here."

Politics a Strong Factor.

Members of Congress, especially members of the House facing re-election, have looked forward to an adjournment by the middle of July, so that they may return to their districts and begin campaigning. The injection of Secretary McAdoo's demand for another revenue bill into the situation has caused more dismay than anything that has happened since the Government came into the hands of the Democratic Party. Many of the Democratic leaders say that conditions are none too favorable for the re-election of a Democratic House, and the enactment of another revenue bill before the November election would be certain to give the House to the Republicans and might reduce the Democratic lead in the Senate to a nominal majority. Politics is a strong factor now influencing the leaders against the passage of a revenue bill in this session. One leader said that if Mr. McAdoo insisted on immediate action an appeal would be made to the President to halt revenue legislation until an extra session in November.

Representative Joseph W. Fordney, ranking Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee, said the Republicans were opposed to raising any more money by direct taxes and would fight another revenue bill in this session. Speaking for the minority, he said:

"The Republicans are opposed to another revenue bill this session for two reasons: First, because we are now paying more than any other nation in the world in direct taxes, and, secondly, because there is no necessity to have more money this year. There is now about $6,000,000,000 of money in the United States Treasury, and we are taking about $5,000,000,000 of this in taxes. To raise more money by direct taxation is going too far and is running in the face of the best principles of taxation. We cannot tax the people of this generation for the entire cost of the war. In my opinion, the further cost of this war and other Government expenses must be raised by loans.

"There are some Democrats who urge that half of the expenses of the Government and the war should be raised by taxation. We are now getting 35 per cent. of the money for this war from direct taxation. This represents the highest form of such taxation of any nation. For instance, Great Britain obtains 25.7 per cent. of its revenues from direct taxes; Canada, 15.5; France, 11 per cent., and Italy, 9.1.

Cites Civil War Taxation.

"In the civil war for every dollar raised by direct taxation we borrowed $5.09, and we must follow that principle now. I believe that the Democratic party will soon see the wisdom of getting the money necessary for the further expenses of this war from loans.

"I cannot see any reason for passing a revenue bill this year. What good will it do? We cannot get the money until next June, and Congress could pass a revenue bill next January to cover the calendar year. Why not wait and see whether we need more money?"

Representative Medill McCormack of Illinois said:

"If it be true that Congress is to be asked for additional revenue legislation, the request will be characteristic of the want of foresight and preparedness which has marked our policy toward the war—before we entered it and since.

"It is argued by those who are glad that we were helpless to fight that military preparation would have belied our pacific intentions. No such nonsense can be uttered in defense of our failure to make plans for the financial support of our armies if we did enter the war. They could have been made in private. We had no estimates of cost and no sound plan for raising revenue. The Treasury was responsible for the inequitable scheme of taxation introduced in the House of Representatives at the last session, and now, if it be true that the Treasury is asking for more revenue, it is again demonstrating its utter want of foresight.

"It takes more than 'pep' and agility to lay down the financial policy of a Government. The Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in the past has smilingly borne the criticisms which others deserved. Now he says that in January he warned the Administration that it ought to make ready to impose new taxes. This is no time to do it. It would be far more sensible for the Ways and Means Committee at once to begin the consideration of a bill to be introduced at a special session summoned to meet immediately after election. I say this, although patently it would be to the political advantage of Republicans if the Administration go ahead with the plan to try to write and pass a revenue bill now."

Why the Great German Push Has Failed

Victory is the bag of oats continually dangled in front of the German people, remarks the Chicago Daily News; "they never get it but they believe it is never far away." Thus while the Kaiser declares flamboyantly that "the people who wish to destroy us are digging their own graves," the desperate German thrust in the battle of the Western front fails disastrously; General Ludendorff announces that "the idea of forcing success by the employment of masses must be abolished absolutely" because "it only leads to unnecessary losses;" and, as the New York World notes, even the Berlin battle-bulletins begin to read as tho it was an Allied offensive which is being victoriously resisted by the Germans.

Meanwhile, American battalions are fighting valiantly on a sector of the Picardy front which blocks the way to Amiens, and the process of fusing the Allies into one invincible army—the greatest ever commanded by a single General—is being accelerated and completed in the furnace of the German offensive.

There is a searching analysis and review in THE LITERARY DIGEST for May 11th, of the great drive on the Western front showing all its many angles, and drawn from all sources of available information.

"The Digest" the Most Trustworthy Historian of the War

Now that the armies of the Allies are locked in a death grapple with the invading Hun, armies of which our own "boys in brown" are an integral and active part, it becomes a matter of vital importance for each one of us to know as nearly as may be just what is transpiring at the front, how the battle is going along those three hundred odd miles which mark for us the Frontier of Freedom. The daily papers give some idea of the situation, but their statements to-day are not infrequently colored by an optimism that has to be modified to-morrow. The only real way to get the facts accurately is from a careful summary of all reports made after the event, when time has been given to obtain perspective. Such a summary you have weekly in THE LITERARY DIGEST, the columns of which form a unique condensed history of the struggle. Read it and know the truth.

MR. COBB AND HIS MATES ARRIVE FROM DETROIT AND YANKEES BOW BEFORE THEM

YANKEES PROVIDE MEAL FOR TIGERS

Mild Bill Donovan Relishes Victory at the Expense of His Former Charges.

DAUSS TWIRLS WITH VIM

One Baker, However, Reminds Detroit's Pitcher That Frank Also Answers to "Home Run."

The smiling frontispiece of mild Bill Donovan, which used to be as familiar at the Polo Grounds as the signs of the fence, once more beamed upon the fans under Coogan's Bluff yesterday. Bill smiled so long and so often on the Yankees, whom he used to manage, that he smiled them out of a game, Detroit winning by a score of 5 to 3.

As leader of the Yanks mild Bill flashed that same grin in many a game and good Manhattan inhabitants yesterday thought it kind of funny that he couldn't smile his team to victory when he was working in this town.

Donovan now holds the position of first assistant to Hughey Jennings, generalissimo of the club on which Ty Cobb plays. Every time Hughey is in doubt about what Cobb should do when he comes to the bat he calls Bill into consultation and between them they usually advise the Georgia peach to make a hit.

Before the game yesterday, Bill, the former Yank pilot, and Miller Huggins, his successor, talked about this, that and the other thing, and in the course of the confab Donovan told Hug that he didn't begrudge him his job.

It seems that one of mild Bill's leading duties with Detroit is to give fatherly advice to the pitchers. He evidently sat up all last night telling George Dauss just how to pitch to the Yank batsman, for most of the time Dauss had the Yank batsmen pretty well under control. Donovan kept a few secrets back from Dauss, however, and didn't tip him off about the weaknesses of Frank Baker and Wallie Pipp.

Baker Bangs a Home Run.

Baker enlivened the Yankee interest in the matinee by pasting a home run into the upper tier of the stand in the fourth inning. A little later Pipp cracked a three-bagger to left centre, and Dauss was so shocked that he immediately peeled off a wild pitch and let Pipp score.

There were a few pleasant moments in the game for George Mogridge, who pitched for the Yanks. In the seventh inning Ty Cobb came up to the bat with the bases full and two out. This layout would ordinarily be enough to cause any pitcher a lot of concern, but Mogridge viewed the situation with coolness and skill.

He flipped the ball at Ty so elusively that the best the Jewel could do was to smack a grounder at the pitcher, who tossed him out at first. In the previous inning, Mogridge struck Cobb out. He expended all his cunning on Cobb, however, for Bobby Veach, the next Tiger up, crashed a home run into the lower grandstand in right.

In the first inning, after Gilhooley had singled and had gone down on Peck's sacrifice, Pratt had every intention in the world of pushing Gil home with a single, but Bush scrambled over to second in a jiffy, making a remarkable stop of a teasing bouncer, and threw Pratt out at first.

Tigers Get Busy Early.

The Tigers started activities in the second inning. Veach singled through first and scored when Harry Heilman poled a three-bagger to left. Young's sacrifice fly scored Heilman. In the third, with one gone, Bush doubled to right centre and romped home on a timely tap by Cobb.

It was in the fourth that Baker parked his home run into the grandstand, after Peck had fanned. Pratt was subdued on an out at first, and Pipp peppered the ball into left centre for three stations. Dauss's wild pitch sent him home.

It was easy to see that Cobb has not yet hit his regular batting gait. He is struggling along at a mere .300 clip when at this time of the year he ought to be hitting about .400 to be natural. In the sixth, when Cobb fanned, there was as much applause as when Baker hit his home run.

Detroit got another in the eighth. Veach singled and went down on Heilman's out at first. Vitt's single to left scored Veach. The Yankees annexed another to their string in the same inning. With two out, Gilhooley hit a two-bagger to the left field fence and counted on Peck's single to left.

After today's game the Yanks and Tigers will jump to Detroit and play a game there tomorrow, returning to the Polo Grounds in time for Monday's game.

CHICAGO WINS IN ELEVENTH.

Gregg Falters Near End of Game and Athletics Lose.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—Chicago began its Eastern trip today with an eleven-inning victory over Philadelphia, 5 to 3. The White Sox found Gregg for two runs in the eighth, and two more in the eleventh after he had held them safe in the early stages.

With two out in the first inning, Walker and Burns both hit home runs. Burns's drive cleared the left field wall, the first time this has been accomplished in the history of Shibe Park. With Chicago leading 2 to 1 in the ninth, Burns got his second home run, a drive into the left field bleachers.

RED SOX BRACE AND WIN.

Break Losing Streak by Beating St. Louis Browns, 4 to 1.

BOSTON, May 10.—Boston broke its losing streak today by defeating St. Louis 4 to 1. Mays held the visitors to five hits. Davenport pitched the first five innings for St. Louis and was hit soundly. Shocker pitched the last three innings and gave one hit. Ruth played left field for Boston, but went hitless.

PIRATES LOSE HAMILTON.

After Beating Giants Pitcher Leaves to Enlist in Navy.

PITTSBURGH, May 10.—After administering a worthy defeat to the National League leaders, the New York Giants, in the game here today, Earl Hamilton turned in his uniform to the Pirates' management and left for the Pacific Coast, where he will enlist in the navy. Pittsburgh will feel the loss of Hamilton, who already has won six straight games for the Pirates this season. He was started on his greatest year in the big leagues, although he made several pitching records while a member of the Browns.

PIRATES USE DIRKS TO WELCOME GIANTS

Hamilton and His Mates Put Sudden Stop to New York's Winning Streak.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, May 10.—Earl Hamilton, the Pirates' unbeaten southpaw, who formerly played with the Browns, humbled the Giants today, and McGraw's men dropped their first game of the year in the West, 4 to 2. Only for an error on the part of King, the local leftfielder, it is probable that the league leaders would have been subjected to a shutout.

Rube Benton, who pitched for the Giants, allowed six hits, but the Pirates bunched four of the six in the first inning, and these, combined with an error by Joe Rodriguez, gave Bezdek's crew three runs and a lead which they never lost.

Caton, the diminutive shortstop, who leads the local batting order, started his team ahead by banging the first ball Benton pitched to right field for a clean blow. Mollwitz tapped to Benton and was thrown out at first, Caton advancing to second. Carey drove a single to centre, scoring Caton. Casey Stengel followed with a single to left and, with Carey, worked the double steal to perfection.

Cutshaw hit to Rodriguez, and when Joe let loose a bad throw to the plate, Carey scored. King bounded the ball off Benton's glove, but Fletcher retrieved the pellet and threw to Rodriguez in time to force Cutshaw, but Stengel scored on the play. McKechnie singled to left, and it began to look as if the Pirates would never cease their attack on the burly lefthander, but Schmidt put a sudden damper on the jubilee by fouling to Rariden.

The Giants threatened momentarily to score in the second inning when, with two out, Holke pasted a single to left and Rariden crashed a single through Caton, but Benton hit sharply to McKechnie, who stepped on third, forcing Holke.

In the seventh an error by King started the Giants on the way to a brace of runs. After Young had been retired Kauff lifted a short fly to left, King ran in under the ball, got it in his hands, and then muffed it. Burns cracked the ball between King and Carey to the cinder path that skirts the outfield for three bases, scoring Kauff. Zimmerman bit a high bounder at Hamilton, who pulled the ball down and threw to the plate to catch Burns. His throw was late, and George counted. Rodriguez hoisted a pop fly to Stengel, whose throw to Mollwitz doubled Zimmerman off first.

Bezdek's men got their fourth tally in the seventh. King hit to the fence in right field for three bases and McKechnie brought him in with a single.

SETON HALL BEATS BROWN.

New Jersey Team Swamps Providence Nine, 14 to 1.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., May 10.—Seton Hall played a great game of baseball yesterday at South Orange, N. J., defeating Brown by the score of 14 to 1. Haley, star pitcher of Seton Hall, was unusually effective. The five hits he gave were scattered. Brisk, who started for Brown, was batted freely in the first inning. Mathews, who relieved him, was just as bad. The third pitcher, Dennison, did much better, holding Seton Hall down.

BARNEY OLDFIELD TO RACE.

Veteran Auto Driver Will Compete in Harkness Handicap.

Barney Goldfield last night telegraphed Promoter William M. Wellman that he would compete in the Harkness Handicap, which will be the steller event of the big auto and aero meet to be held at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway on Decoration Day. Genial Barney, who is at present in California, will make the trans-continental trip for the sole purpose of showing eastern speed fans that he is not a back number as a racing driver.

As this is to be his last season in the game, after twenty years of competition, Oldfield is anxious to annex the $30,000 classic and once more establish his right as the premier driver in the world.

Dario Resta is expected to hand in his entry for the race today. The promoter and the speed king of 1915 and 1916 will meet this afternoon. Resta has promised to give a definite answer.

Haverford Cricketers Here Today.

Haverford College will send its cricket eleven to play against the team of the Staten Island Cricket and Tennis Club at Livingston, S. I., this afternoon, for the first cricket match of the season in the metropolitan district.

AGED JUMPER IN TRIUMPH.

Garter, Full of Running, Takes Steeplechase at Pimlico.

PIMLICO, Md., May 10.—There was a surprise for the followers of cross-country sport at the Maryland Jockey Club meeting today, when old Garter galloped home in front of a big field that went to the post for the Linstead Steeplechase. There were a fair lot of selling platers to contend against, but Garter had changed hands since his poor performances last season, and carried the colors of the Triple Springs Farm.

Trainer Boden had the old Golden Garter back in his old form, and following his usual method of running he went swinging out in front, stayed there all the way and won by four lengths from W. Smith's New Haven. Garter was so generally overlooked by the talent that an investment of $2 yielded a return of $86.40.

Jockey Lyke brought home another outsider when he came from behind with P. J. Sullivan's Waukeag to beat the Potomac Stable's Flittergold in the fourth race at a mile.

The summaries:

FIRST RACE.—For 2-year-old maidens, selling, purse $700, four and a half furlongs.—In The Sun, 107 pounds, (O'Brien,) $16.30, $7.10, and $3.90, won; Milda, 107, (Robinson,) $3.20 and $2.60, second; Marie Connell, 102, (Ensor,) $4.80, third. COLUMBIA VICTOR AT GOLF.

Williams Team Defeated, 12 to 5, at Garden City.

The Columbia University golf team continued on its victorious way yesterday by defeating the team from Williams College by 12 to 5 in a match played at the Garden City Golf Club. Of the two four-ball and four individual matches played Columbia won 4 and lost 2. Had it not been that George A. Bijur, one of the leading players of the Columbia team, was far off his game, Williams probably would have been more decisively beaten. Bijur was bothered by the high wind and continually drove into the rough. Once in trouble he had even greater difficulty getting out. As a result of his play Williams was able to win both matches in which he took part.

A. L. Walker, Jr., manager of the Columbia team, played his usually consistent game. He defeated C. Scott, leader of the Williams team, at 8 and 7 in the individual match, thanks to a splendid 79, and in the four-ball affair with J. R. Ward as partner, Walker's 80 brought the Columbia team victory over Scott and W. Black at 5 and 4. Ward and E. L. Rohdenburg both played better than usual.

The summaries:

Four-ball Matches—A. L. Walker, Jr. and J. R. Ward, Columbia, defeated C. Scott and W. Black, Williams, by 3 points; England and Hegardt, Williams, defeated George A. Bijur and E. L. Rohdenburg, Columbia, by 2 points.

Individual Matches—Walker defeated Scott by 3 points; England defeated Bijur by 3 points; Ward defeated Hegardt by 3 points; Rohdenburg defeated Black by 3 points.

NEW WOMEN'S GOLF LEADER

Miss Herzog Has Low Gross at First One-Day Tournament.

A new feminine golf leader appeared at the first one-day tournament of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association held at the Arcola Country Club yesterday, when Miss Francee Herzog of Fairview, with a 95, turned in the low gross score and defeated a field of twenty-two contestants. It is customary to see Mrs. S. A. Herzog of Fairview among the leaders, but until yesterday Miss Herzog has not been one of the top contestants.

Miss Herzog did not come into the contest unheralded since she received only a two-stroke handicap. This gave her a net score of 93, one stroke better than that made by Mrs. G. K. Morrow of Great Neck, who had 97, 592, which gave her the low net laurels.

Among the other leading scorers of the day were Mrs. L. C. Stockton of Raritan Valley with 97, 1—96; Mrs. T. H. Thomas of Hackensack with 104, 7—97; Miss Martha Smith of Hackensack with 122, 22—100; Miss Eleanor Agnew of Arcola with 115, 15—100, and Mrs. S. Well of Fairview with 112, 9—103.

TENNIS BEGINS TODAY.

Tournament Season Will Open at West Side Courts.

Tournament tennis will make its season's début this afternoon, when play will begin in the annual open tournament of the Harlem Lawn Tennis Club. During several past seasons this event has brought forth some notable talent of the courts, but it is hardly to be expected that it will be so well supplied with players of prominence this year because of the adverse conditions which all events in the field of sport are encountering.

The tournament season will also be ushered in at the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills this afternoon, when the annual Spring tournament will begin in Classes A, B and C. Good entry lists are assured in each of the three events, and some spirited play is anticipated.

FORDHAM VICTOR AT TENNIS

Holy Cross Team Defeated at Net by 5 to 1.

WORCESTER, Mass., May 10.—Fordham tennis team defeated Holy Cross this afternoon at the South Worcester team's court 5 to 1. Fordham won all the four singles and took one of the doubles. Holy Cross took one of the double matches.

Tufts and Bowdoin Tie at Net.

MEDFORD, Mass., May 10.—The tennis teams of Tufts and Bowdoin played a 3 to 3 tie here today. Each team won two singles matches and one in the doubles.

ONLY ONE EASTERN ENTRANT IN DERBY

Sun Briar Not Fit to Start in Kentucky Classic Race Today.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 10.—When the bugle sounds tomorrow for the forty-fourth running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, only one representative of Eastern turfmen will go to the post against nine three-year-olds named by Westerners. In spite of the dwindling of the originally strong material from the East, it is believed that the East will be in the fight to the closing strides, and that A. K. Macomber's War Cloud will be found fighting it out with Kenneth D. Alexander's Escoba. It is almost a certainty that favoritism will be divided between this pair, with John W. Schorr's James T. Clark also strongly supported.

The most severe blow to the East came today with the positive announcement by Willis Sharp Kilmer, owner of Sun Briar, that the imported Sundridge-Sweet Briar colt would not go to the post. Sun Briar, which was credited with the two-year-old championship last year, was beaten in his only race this season by two colts, both of which are entered for the Derby. One of these, R. J. Austin's Jim Heffering, will start tomorrow, but his chances are not considered bright. Since his failure to make good in a race every effort has been made to get Sun Briar to train on, but his final trial was not satisfactory, so owner Kilmer decided to keep him in reserve for inter stake events.

One reason for the paucity of Eastern candidates is that the Preakness Stakes, which will be run at Pimlico next Wednesday, will carry $15,000, the same amount given for the Derby. This has kept Papp, Jack Hare, Jr., the Whitney candidates and others in the East, and accounts for the small field of ten in the classic.

Though lacking in quantity, there will be quality in the field as Escoba gained a meritorious victory over Papp in the Breeders' Futurity at the end of last season. This son of Broomstick was under a cloud last week because he was beaten in his first race. He redeemed himself on Monday, however, by winning the Derby Preliminary, and beating many of those he will have to meet tomorrow.

War Cloud, considered the chief competitor of Escoba, has not been seen in public this season. He has been carefully prepared for the race by Trainer Jennings, and on Monday last ran a sensational trial over the full Derby distance of a mile and a quarter, which he covered in 2:05 2-5. This is said to be the fastest trial ever run by a Derby candidate, and far better than has been credited to any of the other competitors. James T. Clark also had a good workout when he covered the distance in 2:06 2-5 and finished well within himself.

There is the usual interest in the running of the classic, and a tremendous crowd is expected at Churchill Downs when the gates are thrown open for the opening of the New Louisville Jockey Club, which will last for fifteen days. The entries for the Derby, with owners, breeding, and weights, follow:

War Cloud, A. K. Macomber's b. c. by Polymelus-Dreamy, 117 pounds; Escoba, K. D. Alexander's b. c. by Broomstick-Christmas Star, 117; Sewell Combs, Gallagher Brothers' ch. c. by Jack Atkin-Royal Captive, 117; Lucky B., G. A. Bianchi's b. c. by Jim Gaffney-Viola B., 117; Aurum, Jefferson Livingston's b. c. by Mushroom-Royal Anne, 117; Jim Heffering, R. J. Austin's b. c. by Trap Rock-Fairy, 117; American Eagle, T. C. McDowell's ch. c. by The Manager-Star Cat, 117; James T. Clark, John W. Scherr's h. c. by Dick Fennell-Paradise Won, 117; Exterminator, J. C. Milam's ch. c. by McGee-Fair Empress, 114; Viva America, C. T. Worthington's ch. f. by McGee-Pink Rose, 112.

SUSPEND DOG SHOW JUDGES

Hopton, Breese, and Thomas Are Dropped by A. K. C.

Dog show circles were stirred yesterday with the unexpected announcement that Charles G. Hopton, Vinton Breese, and George Thomas, three of the best known and most popular canine judges in this country, had been suspended indefinitely by the American Kennel Club. The action was taken at a meeting of the A. K. C. Committee on Thursday. Under the conditions of the suspension the judges will be allowed to fulfill engagements for which they have already contracted.

National Title Event to be Held in Brooklyn Pool.

Announcement was made yesterday at local A. A. U. headquarters that the national A. A. U. championship plunge for distance event for women had been awarded to the Women's Swimming Association of New York. The competition will be held in the pool of the Central Y. M. C. A., Brooklyn, as part of a program scheduled for May 25. Other events will include handicap tests for both men and women swimmers.

YALE AND PENN ARE FIT.

Rival Crews Have Final Trial Spin Before Race.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—Yale and Pennsylvania crews had their final hard workouts today in preparation for the 'Varsity and freshman races on the Schuylkill River here late tomorrow afternoon. The Yale 'Varsity work, while not so smooth as that of the freshmen, was powerful and they shot over the Henley course in what was called "fast" time.

"That is a fine crew," said Joe Wright, coach of the Pennsylvania oarsmen, who followed the New Haven men up the river to show them the course.

NOFA MOOMEE GETS SHOW'S CHIEF PRIZE

Mrs. Alder's Importation Judged Best at Brussels Griffon Club Exhibit.

Mrs. E. C. Alder's imported Nofa Moomee was adjudged best of the show last night at the specialty exhibit of the Brussels Griffon Club of America at the Park Avenue Hotel. Nofa furnished more or less of a surprise in gaining the chief honor, as it arrived here from England only a few days ago.

An indication of what was to be expected when the test for best of show came was avoided in the afternoon when Nofa Moomee was declared the winner of her sex over the leading animals exhibited. Included in those which were defeated by the English importation was Mrs. Vernon Castle's Sweets of St. Margaret and Mrs. Cara Sussman's Poll Poll of Sunnymede. The latter entry was held in reserve in the female class.

The best of opposite sex was handed to Pierre of Causoway, exhibited by Miss Gertrude Lester, Secretary of the Brussels Griffon Club. This dog had previously accounted for winners' dog prize and in addition had carried off five firsts in the special classes.

The show was a success beyond what had been expected. A total of fifty-three animals was entered and the majority of them came up for judgment.

Curious, but the old fashioned "Sunday best" idea is coming back strong—"something in reserve"—something dependable. That's it—dependable! What excuse has any man for buying two cheap suits when one good one, well made, will long outwear those two!

Besides, both material and labor must be conserved and that's exactly what good clothes do. Among them, suits of *"Forefathers' Cloth"—wools from the same County in England that supplied the early settlers—hence their name.

A Book of Inspiration and Loyalty

Joan of Arc

And the Meaning of Her Life for Americans

By C. M. STEVENS

One of the most fascinating and enthralling of all the tragedies of history is brought particularly to mind now by the encampment of American troops near Domremy, the birthplace of the wonderful Maid of France. The author has in this new book interpreted her life as a human document showing her to be, in truth, "the Goddess of Liberty for the Democracy of the World."

DEMOCRATS DISCUSS FIGHT FOR CONGRESS

Committee Will Contain a Senator from Each State That Is to Elect One.

FERRIS PREDICTS VICTORY

Chairman Says "Entire Country Is Behind President and the Boys in the Trenches."

Plans for the Congressional campaigns this Fall were discussed at a conference held yesterday at the Democratic Club between Representative Scott Ferris of Oklahoma, Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee; Democratic National Committeeman Norman E. Mack, Chairman Edwin S. Harris of the Democratic State Committee, and Assistant Treasurer W. D. Jamieson of the Democratic National Committee. Some Democratic leaders from up State also attended the conference.

The Democratic Congressional Committee this year will be a larger body than in previous Congressional campaigns. In addition to one Congressman from each of the forty-eight States, there will be added a United States Senator from States where United States Senators are to be elected which have one or two Democrats in the upper house of Congress. Speaker Champ Clark and Representative Claude Kitchin of North Carolina, Democratic leader in the House of Representatives, have been added as honorary members of the committee. Congressman Ferris said he felt the prospects of continued Democratic control of both the United States Senate and the House of Representatives were bright.

"The trend is all our way, because the entire country is behind the President and the boys in the trenches," he said. "If the Republicans expect to dump us in the ditch because there have been some wheatless days, some meatless days, and some fuelless days, they have reckoned without the great mass of the American people. Those restrictions have imposed trifling inconveniences which we at home should bear gladly for the benefit of our boys who are making so much greater sacrifices on our fighting fronts in Europe. Sordid criticism along such lines will not be tolerated, much less listened to, during the campaign.

"We can point to the record of the present Democratic Congress with some degree of pride. There may have been some mistakes, but there has been no graft, and the record is replete with honest and substantial achievement. We will stand on that record, and, as far as we are concerned, there will be no bitterness or any mud-slinging in the Congressional campaigns this Fall."

Chairman Ferris said the Democratic appeals in the Congressional campaign would be along these lines:

That the Democratic Party, through its representatives in Congress, has shown itself through the legislation enacted the true friend of the six and one-half million farmers in the country.

That, due largely to the achievements of a Democratic Congress, the twenty millions of workingmen in this country are enjoying a greater prosperity than workingmen have enjoyed anywhere in the world at any time in history.

That the Democratic Congress has been true to the 750,000 soldiers of other wars.

That the Democratic Congress has stood steadfastly behind the President, the country, the flag, the cause, and the soldiers who in the present war are fighting to make the world safe for the democracy that has been firmly established in this country.

The principal headquarters of the Democratic Congressional Committee will be in Washington. Under the plan of the Congressional Committee the country is to be divided into eight zones. The proposal to establish separate headquarters in this city for Zone 1, which will comprise this and adjacent States, was discussed at yesterday's conference, but no conclusion was reached. Assistant Treasurer Jamieson of the Democratic National Committee left last night for Chicago, where he is to discuss plans for the Congressional fight in Illinois and some of the Middle Western States with leaders from that territory.

Joseph E. Murphy of Troy, W. W. Farley of Binghamton, and Harry C. Walker, the Democratic Mayor of Binghamton, who is being talked of by up-State Democrats as a possible candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination, were among up-State Democrats at the conference. Chairman Ferris left for Washington last night. Before he departed he was asked what the leaders had told him regarding the outlook in this State.

"In the special elections held in the city this Spring we carried all the Democratic districts, and one district which the Republican Legislature had carved out to make it safely Republican," he replied. "That indicates a trend which I believe will be found to prevail in the regular elections this Fall. The reports I received have given me no reason to believe that there has been a change in the sentiment."

The conferees were entertained at luncheon by Charles B. Alexander, Vice President of the Democratic Club.

LEWIS TO STATE HIS PLANS.

Attorney General Promises to Make His Purpose Known Next Week.

Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, who on Monday announced his withdrawal as a candidate for re-election—according to his friends, to make a contest for the Gubernatorial nomination in the Republican primaries this Fall—was in this city yesterday on official business and for conferences with some Republican leaders actively interested in having him run for Governor. Before leaving for Rochester, his home city, last night, he said that an announcement definitely stating whether he would enter the Gubernatorial fight would be forthcoming some time next week.

Mr. Lewis will confer in Rochester today with George W. Aldridge, Republican leader of Monroe County. He has been an active and influential member of the Monroe County Republican organization, as well as a close friend of Mr. Aldridge, for thirty years. The latter, according to a statement attributed to him since Mr. Lewis announced his withdrawal from Governor Whitman's third term primary ticket, is committed to the Governor in his fight for re-election.

Mr. Lewis said he had received no answer to the letter he sent from Albany to Chairman Glynn of the Republican State Committee, in which he charged the latter with attempting to line up Republican County Committees for Governor Whitman in his third-term fight in violation of party ethics. The attention of Mr. Lewis was called to a statement made by Mr. Glynn after the letter had been made public, in which Mr. Glynn declared that inasmuch as no specific instance had been cited he did not feel that any answer from him was required. Mr. Lewis said:

"Mr. Glynn asks for a bill of particulars. These are the tactics of a lawyer who has not a good defense. You can say that if he wants a bill of particulars I can furnish him one."

From Albany came the announcement yesterday that First Deputy Attorney General Harold J. Hinman would be a candidate for Attorney General to succeed Mr. Lewis. This was regarded among Republican politicians here as an indication that the fight on Governor Whitman's third-term aspirations had broadened. Mr. Hinman, who, for two years, from 1913 to 1915, was Republican leader of the Assembly, received his start in political life from William Barnes, former State Chairman, leader of the Republican forces in Albany County, and a pronounced political foe of Governor Whitman. Mr. Lewis, who was Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee when Barnes was Republican leader of the State, appointed Mr. Hinman his First Deputy some months ago.

A second break in the "office holders' entente" occurred yesterday when friends of State Treasurer James L. Wells, whose political habitat is Bronx, let it be known that he would not seek a renomination for a third term with Governor Whitman. Senator N. Monroe Marshall of Franklin County is being talked of as a substitute candidate for State Treasurer by Whitman adherents, who believe that his designation would tend to strengthen the Governor in Northern New York, where there is considerable disaffection.

The leaders who are preparing to fight Governor Whitman's aspirations for a third term are daily encountering evidences of the strong personal organization he has contrived to build up with the aid of the patronage at his disposal. Not less than forty members of the Republican State Committee, it was said last night, are drawing pay from the State.

WOMEN TO MARCH IN POLICE PARADE TODAY

Mayor, Commissioner Enright and Estimate Board Will Lead New York's "Finest."

Several novel features will mark this year's police parade, which takes place today. For the first time in its history the Mayor and the Police Commissioner and his deputies will march with the members of the force. For the first time also no Chief Inspector will parade, and for the first time women police reserves will be in line. Among those scheduled to be in the reviewing stand at the Worth monument, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street, are Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and Francis V. Greene, ex-Police Commissioners, and the Mayors and police chiefs of cities within a radius of 100 miles of New York. At the reviewing stand Mayor Hylan will pin badges on the members of the force who have distinguished themselves by heroic deeds during the last year.

The parade will start from the Battery at 11 A. M., headed by the police band of 150 pieces, in charge of Lieutenant Floyd Pitts. Mayor Hylan, his Secretary, Grover A. Whalen, and Lieutenant William Kennel will come next. Following them will be members of the Board of Estimate, Commissioner Enright, accompanied by his Secretary, Colonel Augustus Drum Porter, and Lieutenant William T. Davis with the staff of police deputies and special deputies. Deputy Commissioner Mrs. Ellen H. O'Grady will not march, but will be in the reviewing stand.

About 5,000 patrolmen will be in line, and these will be followed by 4,000 members of the civilian police, known as the Police Reserve, formerly the Home Defense League, and the Police Training Corps. One thousand of these marchers will be in blue uniforms. A large body of women police will follow. Police Inspector Dwyer will be in charge of the marching cohorts. There will also be in line a battalion of 300 patrolmen now in the army and navy service.

The line of march will be up Broadway from the Battery to Thirteenth Street, to Fifth Avenue, to Twenty-third Street, to Madison Avenue, to Forty-first Street, to Fifth Avenue, and down Fifth Avenue to the grandstand at Twenty-fourth Street. The marchers are expected to reach the reviewing stand at 1 o'clock. At the reviewing stand 150 members of the Police Glee Club will sing patriotic songs.

POPE ENJOINS PRAYER FOR PEACE ON JUNE 29

He Urges the Whole World to Placate the Divine Anger for Its Persistence in Sins.

ROME, May 9.—A special prayer for the cessation of the evils tormenting humanity, to be used at mass on St. Peter's Day, June 29, is urged by Pope Benedict in a special message addressed to the whole world.

"The end of the fourth year approaches since Europe has been in conflagration," says the message. "During this time the violence has never diminished, but increased, so that we never have had moments of relief from ever-increasing ills and afflictions."

Continuing, the Pope says that in the discharge of the ministry intrusted to him by Providence and animated by the charity of Jesus Christ, he has left nothing unattempted to remedy these afflictions.

The Pontiff recalls the words, in substance, of King Jehoshaphat, praying:

"O Lord God of our fathers, art Thou not God in heaven? and rulest not thou over all the kingdom? * * * In Thine hand is there not power and might, so that none is able to withstand Thee? * * * We will cry unto Thee in our affliction; then Thou wilt hear and help. * * * O our God, we know not what to do, but our eyes are upon Thee."

His Holiness urges the world to trust in God, who is the arbiter of the will of men and human events, and to trust His mercy to put a speedy end to so many storms, hastening peace and restoring among men a reign of justice and charity. Above everything God, who is wrathful at such persistent sins, must be placated.

Humble entreaties and persevering prayers are the best means to do this. He urges the clergy throughout the world to divide the sacrifice for this purpose on June 29, a day sacred to the Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, supplicating that the supreme desire of all be granted, and "that justice be restored."

'ONE MONTH' FRENCH BONDS

Short Term Interest Payments Provided Under New Plan.

PARIS, May 10.—"One month bonds" for the national defense have just been created by the Ministry of Finance. A person investing in these bonds may collect interest on the first of each month at the rate of 3.60 per cent. a year. The bonds may be carried two or three months, in which event the investor would receive interest at the rate of 4.20 per cent. for the second and third months, bringing the rate for the period of three months to 4 per cent.

Bonds calling for 100, 500, and 1,000 francs will be placed at the disposition of the public on May 31. The purchase price will be 99.70, 498.50, and 997 francs, respectively.

The innovation affords an opportunity for manufacturers, traders, and other persons unable to invest their capital for long periods to find remunerative and sure investments, the State becoming their banker. The bonds will be placed on sale in every Post Office.

CITY BREVITIES.

The Girls' Patriotic Service League will hold a mass meeting at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Lafayette Theatre, Seventh Avenue and 131st Street, to recruit women and girls in the kind of war work for which they are the best fitted.

More than $50,000 has been obtained by the undergraduates of New York University in a campaign to raise $150,000 among the students to be devoted to the needs of the university. As soon as the drive among the undergraduates is completed, a campaign for $450,000 will be undertaken by the alumni.

The National Institute of Inventors will hold its regular monthly meeting at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in Room 506, Pulitzer Building, New York City.

CALL SOLDIERS' KIN TO AID IN THE WAR

National Unity League to Organize a Division to Attack Disloyalty.

PLAN AN APPEAL TO VOTERS

Committee to Urge Support of Loyal Candidates for Congress—Vail Assails Captious Criticism.

The Executive Committee of the League for National Unity adopted a program yesterday for the organization of a division of the league to be composed of fathers, mothers, and other relatives of boys in the army and navy. The purpose of the "Next of Kin" division is to serve as a connecting link between the forces abroad and the nation at home. When organized it is proposed that the "Next of Kin" division of the league shall keep the forces abroad in touch with the spirit of the nation and shall exert its power at home toward the suppression of disloyalty by calling the attention of Government authorities to the existence of disloyalty wherever it happens to appear.

According to the plans formulated yesterday the "Next of Kin" will also be the "most potent material" to develop into a fighting army for a "win-the-war Congress," irrespective of political affiliations, by preventing the election to Congress of men "who will obstruct and paralyze the arm of our Government in its crucial trial as the fathers and mothers of the boys who are offering their lives to their country."

Ralph M. Easley, Chairman of the Executive Council of the league, read a speech written for the occasion by Theodore N. Vail, who was unable to be present. Mr. Vail's message appealing for support of the Government read in part as follows:

"A united nation will prevent some, and make up for many, mistakes. It takes more time and is more wearing to answer captious criticisms and make every act self-explanatory than all the rest of the responsibility combined, and takes the precious time and wears the mind that should be free to meet duty and responsibility.

"Discuss freely if you will, but only on the basis of full knowledge of every action, not on hearsay or prejudice. Criticise constructively, but do not criticise without knowledge or destructively. Always remember where responsibility lies and action must originate—that many things which control cannot be known by all. In this way we can make our help and the help of all more efficacious; in this way only can we win this war without increasing the sacrifice.

"Dispassionate discussion and constructive criticism with a full knowledge of facts and a full understanding of the objective, whether about things done or about to be done, or methods of doing, cannot but be helpful. Impassioned prejudiced criticism, even if more or less justified, is not corrective—it immediately arouses defense and intensified self-justification. Without knowledge and understanding, discussion and criticism can but be absurd, fallacious, and entirely misleading."

The Executive Committee of the league made arrangements yesterday for a special committee to confer in Washington next Monday with Scott Ferris, Chairman of the Democratic National Congressional Committee, and Frank P. Woods, Chairman of the Republican National Congressional Committee in the interest of an appeal to voters to support only loyal candidates in the coming election.

The committee will also confer with the proper authorities in Washington on some means by which it may aid the Government in making the channels of communication between the soldiers and sailors and their relatives as open as possible.

"OUT THERE" AUCTION SEAT SALE, $17,000

$2,000 Paid for a Box for Performance for Red Cross—Five Stars Give $1,000 Each.

The auction sale of seats for the first of the Red Cross performances of "Out There" in New York took place yesterday afternoon at the Liberty Theatre, and resulted in premiums of about $17,000. The sale was only for the opening performance, which will take place at the Century Theatre on Friday night of next week. At $5 a seat the capacity of the Century will be about $9,500 for the single performance, which will bring the night's receipts, exclusive of the sale of programs, to approximately $26,500. Two more performances will be given on the Saturday following.

The highest price paid at the sale yesterday was $2,000 for a box, bid by Mrs. Edward Everett Moherle. Most of the other boxes were bought by theatrical people. Several were purchased by members of the all-star cast which will be seen in the play. The second highest price was $1,500, paid by John H. Lynch, and boxes were purchased at $1,000 each by Laurette Taylor, George M. Cohan, Chauncey Olcott, David Warfield, and John McCormack. Single seats brought premiums of as high as $400 each.

Among the auctioneers of the afternoon were Miss Taylor, Mr. Warfield, Will Rogers, and Clifton Crawford. A detachment of "Blue Devils" sat on the stage.

SCIENCE BODIES COME TO BROWN'S DEFENSE

Praise Head of Health Board Bureau and Commend Plan for an Open Trial.

The New York Academy of Sciences and the New York Section of the American Chemical Society have come out as defenders of Lucius P. Brown, Director of the Bureau of Food and Drugs of the Department of Health, who was suspended recently on charges made by Dr. Royal S. Copeland, the new Commissioner of Health. The chemists adopted resolutions at a meeting last evening in the Chemists' Club, at 52 East Forty-first Street. At the same time a resolution adopted by the Council of the New York Academy of Sciences at its monthly meeting was made public.

The resolution adopted by the chemical society was introduced by Dr. Charles H. Herty. The resolution expresses fear of serious impairment of the efficiency of the Bureau of Food and Drugs of the Health Department through the lessening of its activities or a change in "its present efficient direction." The resolution continues:

We are convinced that, in the present incumbent of the office of Director of the Bureau of Food and Drugs, Lucius P. Brown, the city has a most valuable administrative, technical, and scientific official, selected on the basis of these qualifications by the impartial methods of civil service examination, experienced in his work through long service as Food and Drug Commissioner of Tennessee, * * * a man whose integrity is beyond question, and whose marked faithfulness in administering the work of his present position assures to the people of this city thorough protection against adulteration of its food and drug supplies.

The Commissioner of Health is commended for determining to give a public hearing, for, continues the resolution, "we are confident that through such a medium the usefulness and high standard of the bureau will be continued without impairment."

The Academy of Sciences also commends the Commissioner of Health for giving Mr. Brown a public hearing, and adds: "We urge that this hearing now begun be made full and complete, and that the Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture or his proper assistant be asked to make public whether the Government has had full, complete, and sympathetic co-operation from the Public Health Department of New York City."

MARRIED IN TOMBS COURT.

J. A. Brennan, Soldier on Brief Leave, Rushes from License Bureau.

John A. Brennan, a soldier in the United States Infantry at Camp Wadsworth, and Miss Edna Bivens of 944 St. Nicholas Avenue were married yesterday forenoon by Magistrate Simpson in his private chambers at the Tombs Court.

Mr. Brennan, whose home is in New Bedford, Mass., arrived in town earlier in the morning and hurried to the marriage license bureau with his fiancée. Owing to pressure of time, he was unable to await his turn to be married, so the couple went to the Tombs Court. Acting as their witnesses were Harry Usher, keeper of the detention pen of the Tombs Prison; Chief Clerk Thomas A. Geary, Assistant District Attorney Anthony Burke, and John Lee, captain of the court attendants.

The bridal pair left after the ceremony for Spartanburg, S. C. Mr. Brennan stated before leaving that after he arrived in France he would notify his folks by letter of his marriage.

SALVATION ARMY TO LENGTHEN DRIVE

With Only $86,000 of $250,000 Fund Collected, Committee Will Continue Work.

BAKER INDORSES CAMPAIGN

Secretary of War Says Pershing Regards Labors of Great Value and Importance.

As only $86,000 had been collected yesterday in the week's drive of the Salvation Army for $250,000 for the National War Fund, it was determined by the General Committee in charge of the campaign to continue it through next week in order to raise the full amount. Many more subscriptions are expected when the team captains of the Bronx and Richmond who have not yet reported announce the amount of their collections.

A telegram was received yesterday by the Salvation Army War Work Committee from Secretary Baker expressing his sympathy with the drive. The telegram follows:

Washington, May 10.

I did not come into close personal touch with the Salvation Army war work in France, but I spoke with General Pershing about it, and he regards it of great value and importance.

NEWTON D. BAKER, Secretary of War.

Explaining the purpose of the drive, George Gordon Battle, Chairman of the General Committee for the campaign, said last night:

"The campaign is not for the Salvation Army as such, or for any committee of workers, but just as the fifty veterans who have returned from General Pershing's army said when they arrived, it is for the great mass of troops in the trenches. The public is perfectly willing to give in response to an appeal like this and to meet so great a need, but we lack team workers, and our people, who are those who worked on the Liberty Loan, are exhausted. The result is that we are only now getting into swing.

"We started several days late, and because of this we must continue another week. We will get this money if we have to pull every door bell in New York City. The voice of the American Army in France asked for it, and it cannot be possible that this small request of all others is going to be left unheeded just because the public is not thinking in big figures of the Salvation Army."

Commander Booth of the Salvation Army was the guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Rodman Wanamaker at Wanamaker's to the "Blue Devils." Miss Booth gave each of the French heroes a medal as a souvenir.

All contributions should be sent to William L. Kingsley, Vice President of the United States Trust Company, 4 Wall Street.

Act Play for Columbia Base Hospital

The sophomore show in Teachers College was given last evening in the Thompson gymnasium and $175 was raised for the Columbia Base Hospital. The students presented "A Chinese Lantern," a play by Lawrence Housman. The principal parts were taken by the Misses Mary Noble, Josephine Rolfe, and Vera Rogers. The players were coached by Miss Helen Murphy, and the costumes were designed by Miss Hazel Brauer. Miss Joan Rock was stage manager. Dancing followed the presentation of the play.

"A Chinese Lantern" will be given by the seniors of Barnard College on May 31 and June 1.

REPORTS NORWAY BUILDING SHIPS FOR US

Six Concrete Vessels Ordered and More to Follow, It Is Said.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, May 10.—The Ekstrabladet learns from Christiania that the Fraugners shipyards have contracted with the United States Government for the building of six 3,500 ton concrete boats for war transport across the Atlantic. The first ship will be ready in six months.

If it is satisfactory the United States intends to order more.

BLUE DEVILS TO AID BLIND.

To Act as Guard of Honor at Reception in Behalf of Fund.

Lieutenant Le Moal of the French Chasseurs Alpins, has assigned a guard of honor of his "Blue Devils" to receive the high American, British, and French officers, who will attend the reception to be given at 3 o'clock this afternoon by the Executive Council of Artists, at the exhibition of more than 800 works of art donated by American artists in this country, England, and France, to be sold for the benefit of the American-British-French-Belgian Permanent War Relief Blind Fund.

Colonel J. S. Dennis of the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission, who has had much experience with blinded soldiers, will be among the speakers. An Anzac trooper, who was wounded in the eyes, will tell of his experiences. In the evening Eleanor Gates, the authoress, and Sergeant Kearns of the Canadians, will speak.

So large is the number of blinded soldiers taken out of the present great battle in France and Flanders that the A. B. F. B. Blind Relief War Fund, which already maintains five institutions in France for the rehabilitation of officers and soldiers who have lost their sight, has been asked by the French Government to increase its facilities. It has, therefore, taken over the Chateau de Madrid in the Bois de Boulogne, well known to every American who has visited Paris, and the Chateau de Rochecorbon, near Tours. The battle being only in its opening stages further demands upon the fund's resources are expected by its officers, and they have issued an urgent appeal for support to meet the present emergency. All the institutions of the fund, whose headquarters are at 590 Fifth Avenue, were established and are maintained with money contributed by the American public.

Summer Concerts in City Stadium.

Summer-night concerts are planned for the City College Stadium by a symphony orchestra of ninety musicians, led by Arnold Volpe. Popular prices will be charged, free admission will be given to soldiers and sailors in uniform, and there will be addresses by patriotic speakers. It is hoped to arrange for the appearance of the Metropolitan Opera House chorus, the Paulist Choristers of Chicago, and the Bethlehem Bach Choir. A guarantee fund of $10,000 is needed for initial expenditure and the concerts are expected to be self-supporting.

BARGE CANAL OPEN FROM END TO END

Last Barrier of Earth Is Removed and Genesee River Now Flows Into the Waterway.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 10.—The last barrier of earth in the prism of the Barge Canal was eradicated today when a steam dredge removed the earth wall that separated the canal prism from the Genesee River in Genesee Valley Park.

The event took place at 11 o'clock this morning. State Engineer Frank M. Williams, his deputy, the division engineer for the western division and assistants were present and the first water from the river was admitted to the canal by State Engineer Williams, who shoveled away the dirt with a spade.

Much remains to be done before the canal is completed, but the work today makes the canal navigable from end to end.

It was noted with interest by State officials here today that the first work on the canal was done just west of Rochester in May, 1905.

GIFTS BY FRENCH CHILDREN.

260,000 Pupils Help Fund to Provide for American Orphan.

PARIS, May 10.—Two hundred and sixty thousand French school children contributed their sous to a subscription started by the pupils of a school in the Percy part of Paris to provide for the first American orphan of the war.

The original purpose was to raise 365 francs, sou by sou, not because the money was needed, but simply as a symbol of French gratitude for American aid to French orphans.

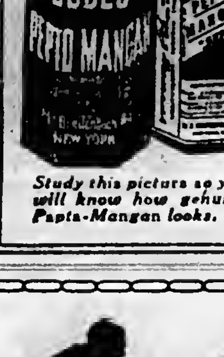
The movement promptly went beyond the original plan. Other schools joined in and more than 13,000 francs was raised before the subscription closed.

The Power of Red Blood

A war age places the premium on strong, virile men and vital, vigorous women—on the men who fight or make shells, on the women who nurse the wounded and knit for the soldiers. Vigor and virility are founded on rich, red blood. If your blood is thin and weak, take

Gude's Pepto-Mangan
"The Red Blood Builder"

Gude's Pepto-Mangan will help to make your blood rich and red again. It is a creator of new and sturdy red blood cells. These red cells carry oxygen—the breath of life—to every cell and tissue of the body. Gude's Pepto-Mangan is a splendid tonic, easy to digest, promptly assimilated, exceedingly pleasant to taste, safe and good for the weak and thin-blooded of all ages. Universally prescribed by the medical profession.



Study this picture so you will know how genuine Pepto-Mangan looks.

Friendly Warning: There are many imitations of Pepto-Mangan on the market, but you can be sure of getting the genuine if it bears the name "Gude" and is put up in the bottle and sealed package as pictured here. Ask for it by its full name—"Gude's Pepto-Mangan." For sale at all drug stores.

OSTEND ALSO CLOSED.

Although photographs show that the mine-laying light cruisers Iphigenia and Intrepid were sunk in the Zeebrugge channel just where they would block it, bottling up submarines in the harbor and preventing access by returning raiders, the Kaiser decorated all those concerned in not foiling the presumptuous intruders on St. George's Day. Admiral SCHROEDER received the order of the Swords of the Red Eagle of the First Class; Captain SCHUETTE, commander of the batteries on the mole, twenty yards of which the British landing party blew up, got the Knight's Cross of the Royal Order of Hohenzollern with Swords; and to Chief BERLET of the Marines fell the Red Eagle of the Second Class. Everybody received a medal or a ribbon to wear on his coat, and the Kaiser visited Zeebrugge and saw the worst. He does not seem to have decorated the editor of the Frankfurtur Zeitung, who acknowledged that the British fleet had scored "a great success through a "fantastically audacious stroke in "penetrating into one of the most important strongholds over which the "German flag floats." He added to his indiscretion by speculating that there was no reason why the British "should not achieve a similar feat at other times."

This courageous German writer was unwittingly a true prophet. The Vindictive, daringly conspicuous in the Zeebrugge raid, has visited Ostend, and her hulk now lies sunk across the entrance channel. Such is the announcement of the British Admiralty. A visit to Ostend by the Kaiser seems to be in order, and in justice to its defenders he cannot omit to carry with him a pocketful of baubles. The blocking of the channel by the Vindictive should be no more a deterrent to the distribution of honors than was the awkward incident of the light mine-laying cruisers sinking down into the shoaling sands at Zeebrugge. The German Navy and Marines must be Red-Eagled, no matter what happens.

According to the details at hand, the Vindictive, which was shot full of holes and battered almost beyond recognition by the Germans at Zeebrugge, stole into Ostend in a very businesslike and undramatic way, and before the enemy was wide awake her hull, packed with concrete, settled down in the chosen spot, and the British Navy retired without doing anything traditional. "Our casualties were light," says the Admiralty bulletin. One motor boat was lost, sunk "to prevent it from falling into the hands of the enemy." There is no theme in the affair for the Poet Laureate, but there is gnashing of teeth for the enemy.

Public opinion had demanded that the Vindictive, which at Zeebrugge proved she did not rightly belong to the "obsolete" class, should be put on exhibition in the Thames, like NELSON's Victory at Portsmouth; but an unsentimental Admiralty had other work for her to do. She is doing her "bit" better stuck in the channel at Ostend. That a concrete ship can be a hundred per cent. success the last service of the Vindictive demonstrates.

As the British Government has decided to publish ship losses from mines and torpedoes once a month in future, the effect upon the submarine campaign of the closing of Zeebrugge and Ostend Harbors can only be conjectured. Germany has other bases on the North Sea, but she has now lost the use of her favorite hornets' nests. It may be assumed that British and American destroyers are lying in wait off these other bases for returning U-boats, which cannot keep the sea for many days. The tally of merchant ships sunk since the Zeebrugge raid must be on the decline. There is now no refuge for enemy submarines at Ostend. The British, French, and American patrol has become very formidable. The score of submarines disposed of will rise, and if the report is true that a year of mine-laying on North Sea coasts has greatly contracted their sphere of operations and made every movement dangerous, Admiral JELLICOE's prediction that August would see the allied navies victorious over the enemy becomes intelligible.

GENERAL MAURICE.

The Times of London says it still believes in the patriotism of General MAURICE's motives, "but it seems "charitable now to assume that he "has been made the instrument of "abler and less honorable men." General MAURICE began by insulting France and General FOCH, and his subsequent course leads to the belief that he did this for the purpose of injuring the Lloyd George Ministry. He blamed that Ministry for putting British troops under the command of a Frenchman, and he sought to prove that he was right by calling attention in a spectacular way to what he supposed was the sacrifice of British troops by that Frenchman. "Where is BLUECHER?" he sneered. What he meant was that BLUECHER—that is, FOCH—was letting the British bleed to death rather than risk his own men by sending reinforcements; but the sneer was meant not for FOCH but for LLOYD GEORGE, who had put FOCH where he was.

The arrival of the French reinforcements on the very heels of the sneer would have discomfited another man and reduced him to blushing, stammering pleas for forgiveness. Instead, MAURICE went a step further. He charged the Lloyd George Government with lying to the nation, and did so for the open purpose of pulling it down in the face of the foe. Nor was his way of doing it honest. When he said that he was "at Versailles" when the War Council reached a decision which BONAR LAW had said it did not reach, he must have intended everybody to believe that he was present at the session of the Council and spoke as a witness. He was thus trying to prove BONAR LAW untruthful by a state of facts which did not exist; for he was not at the Council and was not a witness.

General MAURICE may be patriotic, but a patriotic man who lets his spite and spleen seduce him into acts that endanger not only his own country but its allies, and the unity of all, may be a worse enemy than one who is deliberately unpatriotic; and he has deprived himself in advance of sympathy for what may, what almost surely will, happen to him when he is put on trial for "indiscipline."

GUNS, SHIPS, AND MEN.

The announcement that the Steel Corporation will build a gun factory is news which should hearten our allies and give thoughts to our enemies. The operation is on a scale which gives it trade as well as military importance. Even before this announcement the American Iron and Steel Institute was told officially that for buildings alone the Government would require materials "20 per cent. in excess of the "total building construction of the "United States for the three-year "period, 1915-16-17," the plans running into 1919 and 1920. The country is supplying one million tons to replace what our allies furnished to General PERSHING, and among domestic requirements is ninety-two months' capacity of rails. Now comes the ordnance plant, which alone may run into billions of dollars. In ordinary times it would be a backbreaking task, and discouraging to look forward to. But under present conditions the burden is taken up with speed and spirit and patriotism.

The methods of the industry are as different as in the railway business. The Government sits as friends around the same table with the co-operating entirety of the world's greatest industry, and methods which have been banned are producing the same results as in the case of the railways. As a sample of the temper of the trade, the Director of Steel Supply said that on his first day of duty he asked a prominent manufacturer what his idea of price was, and the answer was, "Any price the Government puts on." A price was named, $40 a ton below business done the previous day, but yet above the price at which the Government was supplied later, and the acceptance was in the form, "You never need to ask us; it is yours." The general declaration of policy on behalf of all by Judge GARY was, "Our "whole business must be managed in "such a way as to secure the best re-"sults for the Government, even "though at times at the expense of "production of lines less essential and "the making of money for the owners' "property." The conference between the trade and the Government was so satisfactory that the idea of commandeering goods or plants in the manner of the railways was abandoned.

The temper of the shipbuilding trade is similar. Mr. SCHWAB has done wonders in the way of arousing enthusiasm and rivalry, and the labor situation has so improved that the Government is no longer under the necessity of making "cost plus" contracts because contractors would take neither risk nor responsibility. The fighting men to be carried by these ships and to be armed by the steel trade are worthy of the country's pride. Nowhere is there any monopoly of patriotism. It is greatly to the credit of our allies that they all are "doing their bit" and are not "downhearted." They knew what war was before they entered it, and yet they did not hesitate. They have found their reward in a social solidarity unknown before the war, and which will survive after the war, for us as well as for them. Many bloody hatchets have been buried, and smaller thoughts have been suppressed. War is dreadful, but it is a moral tonic when of the character of this war. Among us commercialism has been subordinated to patriotism, and a morale has been created which is priceless. No good American is satisfied with doing his bit. We all want to do our all. We do not expect to win with minimums.

PURE DRINKING WATER ASSURED FOREVER.

Governor WHITMAN has signed the bill creating the Mebansic Lake Reservation from the territory upon which the State had planned to establish institutions for the sick and delinquent after the city had cleared that drainage district of the water supply of this city. It is remarkable what vitality the proposal to risk the pollution of the city's drinking water possessed. It would seem that such defiance of sanitation would only need to be described to revolt those in public authority having discretion upon such subjects. Yet for five years the proposal was pressed with approval after approval by officials who afterward reversed themselves. Even the Legislature repented and repealed the bill, but the repeal was vetoed by Governor GLYNN, upon the advice of Health Commissioner GOLDWATER. He and Mayor MITCHEL were among those who reconsidered their hasty approval, and by that time Mr. WHITMAN had become Governor.

The substitution of park beauties for the deflements of a hospital sewer system is the happy ending for which the city is indebted to the Governor. Work on the public institutions was actually proceeding when he took office, but he stopped it pending the action of the Legislature, now reversing itself. The city's obligation to the Governor is not small, for he acted against political pressure from his own party, and success was not possible without his signature. In fact, the bill would never have reached him except for the vigilance of the Merchants' Association aroused by the activity of its Chairman on Pollution, Mr. HATCH. It is now possible to dismiss the displeasing subject. There seems no room for another chapter.

THE CANDID CORRESPONDENT.

German poisons are many and subtle, but now and then they carry their own antidote with them. How often has the painstaking work of spy, saboteur, or propagandist been disarranged by the habit of keeping meticulously detailed records, so that when one was arrested the others of the connection could be exposed or allowed to thrust their own heads into the noose! German journalism has served the rulers of the nation with a servility hardly to be matched elsewhere, but now and then it achieves a naïveté which goes a long way toward nullifying any influence that it might have.

Before the war this country was more maligned and misrepresented in the German press than any other, and of late a great deal has been published about us among the enemy. But such an incidental detail as the reference to the "Tom Hopkins University" betrays a carelessness that goes a long way toward mollifying any chagrin that might be felt at what they think of us. And now comes Dr. GEORG BARTHELME of the Kölnische Zeitung, a journalist whom Germans appear to regard as an authority on this country. It will be remembered that just after we had broken relations with Germany Dr. BARTHELME sent a wireless message, ostensibly to his paper, but apparently in reality to the German Government, which insisted that, despite its bluster, the American Government really did not mean to fight. "From high sources, whose identity cannot be disclosed," Dr. BARTHELME was "urged, almost implored," to tell the Germans that we wanted to talk it over, that we would rather do anything than go to war.

That the "high source" in question was the President might have occurred to any one reading the dispatch and unacquainted with the methods of German journalism. As a matter of fact, Mr. BRYAN got the blame for it at the time, and now Dr. BARTHELME, in his own story of the incident, lays it at the door of Mr. TUMULTY. It was Mr. WILSON's emotions as reflected through his secretary that inspired the journalist of Cologne to tell his Government that he was urged and almost implored from the highest sources.

But did Mr. TUMULTY urge him? Did Mr. TUMULTY implore him? Not at all. The best that Dr. BARTHELME can say for himself (and Mr. TUMULTY has emphatically and effectually denied even this) is that Mr. TUMULTY represented the President as inconsolable to "a friend of TUMULTY "who was by chance also a friend of "mine." Which somewhat tenuous connection leads Dr. BARTHELME to insinuate that the President "really stood behind the message"—that is, the President is responsible for gossip about what his secretary is supposed to have said that he said.

Not less frank is the Cologne correspondent as to his authority for the strange tale of Senator STONE sent to tell the Stock Exchanges of New York, Boston, and Philadelphia that we were not really going to declare war, and of the Senatorial tears when the declaration followed. "So I was "told at the time by one who certainly "knew."

Let us not deride the Doctor—he sets a worthy example for some of his German and Austrian colleagues; indeed, other foreign journalists might make their accounts of American affairs more reliable by an equally exact ascription of authority. Instead of "I "learn from high sources, whose "identity cannot be disclosed," read "I am told by an acquaintance who bought me a drink this afternoon." For "I am able to state on unimpeachable authority" substitute "I "hear from a genial gentleman who "borrowed a match from me in the "club car." Mr. BRYAN has suffered a grave injustice if any of his fellow-citizens, misled by his unfortunate attempt to reassure Dr. DUMBA on a previous occasion, thought that he had put ideas into Dr. BARTHELME's head. Consultation with an ex-Secretary of State was unnecessary for a correspondent who was content to base a dispatch of the highest importance on what he heard from the friend of a friend of somebody else.

A DREAM OF "AUNTIE VOSS."

A queer story the Budapest correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung, "Auntie Voss," as the Berlin humorists call it, sends that respectable ancient journal. To counteract the agitation for a South Slav State, Count CZERNIN's successor, Baron BURIAN, is said to have determined on the union of Bosnia and Herzegovina with the Hungarian Monarchy, to which Dalmatia is to be transferred by Austria. Thus an old dream of the megalomaniac Magyar chauvinists is to be fulfilled, and Baron BURIAN is to show himself a good Magyar, a worthy pupil of TISZA, and a bad Austrian, if there be such an entity as an Austrian.

On Hungarian coins the Emperor CHARLES is described as CHARLES, "by the Grace of GOD Austrian Em-"peror, and of Hungary, Croatia, "Slavonia, Dalmatia, Apostolic King." Dalmatia happens to be a part of Austria, but according to the Magyars it belongs to them as a matter of historical and constitutional right. As spinners of shadowy constitutional law or claim the Magyar jurists are unsurpassable. To Bosnia-Herzegovina they allege some antique title. Those lands, they say, were part of the domains of old Hungary of some ghostly King and Kingdom, whose ensign is part of the show when the King of Hungary is crowned. To make Dalmatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina Hungarian is, or was, the Magyar settlement of the South Slav trouble. That settlement implies a singular meekness on the part of Austria. By consenting to it she would surrender her away over the Adriatic and its littoral, at the southern end of Istria.

The acquisition, technically the "occupation and administration," of Bosnia-Herzegovina in 1878, was acridly opposed by the Magyars, who saw in this large addition to the Slav population a danger to themselves and to the Dual System. Neither then nor when actual annexation took place, Germany bullying Russia in 1908, did the Magyars and the Germans of Austria trust one another or consent to the real incorporation of the two provinces in the Hapsburg Monarchy. Their administration was handed over to the Austro-Hungarian Ministry of Joint Finance, which accounted to neither Parliament, but to the joint Parliamentary Delegations. Thus Bosnia and Herzegovina, though made autonomous in 1909, may be said to be neither Austrian nor Hungarian. Economically, most of the time before the war, and by every means since it began, the Southern Slav regions of the monarchy, Austrian Dalmatia, Hungarian Croatia-Slavonia, Austro-Hungarian Bosnia-Herzegovina, have been systematically oppressed. The Magyar minority in Hungary has enough to do in keeping down the Slav majority without adding to that majority. The tale of "Auntie Voss" seems fantastic in the extreme, but there is no limit to Magyar arrogance, even on the edge of national ruin and the collapse of the motley Empire and Kingdom.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

He Adapted Speech to Audience. When a speech produces the effect on its hearers that the speaker wants and intends to produce—when it changes antagonistic doubts into approbative certainties and turns threatened defeat into brilliant victory—then to call such a speech a poor one would be the wildest of absurdities and a confession of utter ignorance as to the purposes of oratory and the ends that can be attained by it. Just the same, if one's standards of parliamentary eloquence are based on the recognized masterpieces of the past as they are recorded in the books, the answer of DAVID LLOYD GEORGE to General MAURICE's accusation of unveracity meets none of the tests. It is simple only in the sense that it lacks rhetorical ornament of any kind. It is repetitious and meandering, it lacks construction—a definite beginning, middle, and end, that is—and no small fraction of its sentences, however they may have sounded, shock the grammarian by their failure to work out into the orthodox subject, predicate, and object. Yet in the oldest and deservedly most famous Parliament in the world—in the chamber that has echoed to the voices of statesmen and politicians whose speeches have become the classics of the English-speaking races, alike for eloquence and force—Mr. GEORGE's words were heard with unwearied attention, and so convincing was he that the Commons rendered its momentous verdict without waiting to hear the other side. It decided, in effect, that there could be no other side.

But the mystery is not as dark as it seems. What Mr. GEORGE did was what any skilled orator of any age would have done—he adapted his speech to the taste of his hearers; he knew what they wanted, and gave it to them in the form they like best. Well aware that Parliament, like our own Congress and most other legislative bodies of this time, will not listen patiently to laboriously polished and elaborately embroidered oratory, he spoke in a carefully careless and conversational way and gave his words the air—and many of the faults—of extemporaneous discourse. It was not because he cannot command the other and older style. That, too, he has, but he uses it on the stump, in addressing audiences less sophisticated—audiences that demand eloquence of the sort they find in their school readers.

In other words, Mr. GEORGE knows his business.

A Grievance Left Undefined. Why did not MORRIS HILLQUIT, in addressing the group of indicted friends whom he so much admires, take advantage of the fact that the new sedition law is still awaiting signature, and reveal, while he could do it in comparative safety, just what it is that he will soon be deprived of the right to say? He had a sympathetic audience, and all of them had learned from recent experiences in court, through which some of them had gone, that at present there is not much danger in denouncing and antagonizing the Government's settled policies. They would have heard gladly, therefore, whatever he may have had to say about our participation in a war against Germany, and especially keen would have been their delight had he protested against militarism in general and conscription in particular.

But Mr. HILLQUIT confined himself—unfortunately, from a sporting point of view—to vague complaints about a coming ban on abusive criticism and the lending of aid and comfort to the public enemy. That is what it amounted to, anyway, though, not improbably, he would deny the accuracy of this interpretation of his words.

It is a curious fact that only a single small group of all the people in the United States is at all seriously alarmed by the new law. The rest of us realize well enough that it has teeth, and sharp ones, but we have no apprehensions that we are to be bitten, and we expect to go on saying and doing about what we say and do now, and when we don't like a thing we expect to make our displeasure known with considerable freedom. That may be because we see more in war than "horrors" and "madness," and that, while we all wish perfection might be substituted for imperfection in the conduct of our military operations, we know that to err is human and recall a mistake or two that we have made ourselves in the days when we were younger and less wise than we are now.

Mr. HILLQUIT and his friends have no such recollections. Not only are they right now, but they always were—let them tell it—and naturally they are impatient with weaker brothers who hear their professions of superiority with impatience.

He Forgot It Is a War Measure. A report made to the Federal Department of Labor presents numerous reasons for disapproval of the employment of women as conductors of street cars. While some of the reasons seem more than a little far-fetched, many of them have more or less of force. The women themselves, however, have made no complaints, which can be taken as indicating, though, of course, not as proving, that the work is neither seriously distasteful nor seriously injurious.

But the department's investigator might have given more consideration than he seemingly did to the fact that this enlargement of woman's industrial domain has the large excuse that we are at war and that women of necessity must do not a little work which in peace we all prefer to have performed by men. The change probably will not be permanent. For one thing, the labor unions can confidently be expected to prevent that, if they can—and their influence is large—and for another thing, in the case of street cars they will have public sentiment on their side to an extent sufficient to help them regain this particular monopoly.

Women obviously are not as well fitted to be conductors as are men, or as competent to meet the occasional emergencies that confront the holders of these jobs. It is rather beside the point, however, to say that the hours are too long for women. For that there is another remedy than dismissal of the women. There are other ways, too, by which the conditions of the service could be readjusted to feminine capacity without decreasing its efficiency.

A BETTER UNDERSTANDING.

A Message from a Departing Member of the British War Mission.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On the eve of leaving this country after four months' strenuous war service, I ask the hospitality of your columns to discharge my debt to the American people who have welcomed me so kindly, listened with patience and consideration to my message, and filled a war-weary heart with fresh courage, hope, and confidence for the future.

Through the kindness of Mr. Hoover, who asked me to go out West to speak for his administration regarding the internal conditions of England, I came in touch with all sorts of people, and was afforded a wonderful opportunity of grasping some of the problems which render the war tasks of the United States more delicate and difficult than those of any other country. Most of the misunderstandings which embitter life and render futile so much of human effort are based upon ignorance. I have in certain sections of this great country found considerable ignorance of Great Britain and her aims.

Part of my business has been to try to remove that ignorance. A further part of my business, when I get home, will be to inform my own people of the splendors of America's heart, the quickening of her patriotic fire, and the deepening everywhere of her will to win.

I have seen it grow of late like the matchless miracle of your blossoming Spring.

The great union of English-speaking peoples will not only see this war to a victorious conclusion, but one in love and faith and ideal safeguard the new dawn so that there shall be no repetition of this monstrous wrong and insult again her peoples.

A Result of Prohibition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Nearly three weeks ago in response to an urgent appeal for wine prescribed for an invalid relative by a noted physician of Birmingham, Ala., we sent a gallon of the kind desired. We had to go before a notary, take an oath, show the doctor's certificate, insure, and pay largely for transportation. Three days ago we learned the wine had not yet arrived. Meantime the invalid has grown weaker, the possibility of benefit from the tonic of the wine lessened. All this, the result of prohibition laws of Alabama.

Can fanaticism further go? If prohibition is desirable, is there to be no discrimination in such cases as the above?

PAINTERS' WAR WORK.

Recent Statements That They Have Not Done Their Duty.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

After reading an article in the press on the subject of the American war art show postponement I feel it my patriotic duty to make protest against the following statements:

> A member of the National Arts Club is quoted as saying that the painters were not apparently aware of the war and seemed perfectly satisfied "to paint the same old interior, the same old pretty brook, the same old snow as of yore."

At the end of the article:

> A man who in his early days was an illustrator is quoted as saying: "It may be said to the everlasting shame of the majority of the American painters that they have not done much to help win the war. The illustrator has. There are only a few painters who have raised their hands to paint a pictorial visualization of our part of the war, which the Government could use to spread the message broadcast through reproduction. The brain of the illustrator is working, the painter is asleep."

These statements are designed to create dissension between the various artist forces now united as never before in doing all they can, each according to his abilities, to help win the war. Does this man wish to disrupt the combination and deprive the Government of the full use of the imagination, ingenuity, enthusiasm, and energy the various artist forces are bringing to the aid of our country? I am not afraid of any success of any such scheme should it exist.

But what about the impression these unpatriotic and slanderous remarks make upon the public? The most insidious and poisonous German propaganda could not delight the Kaiser more, or accomplish his ends better, than this sort of subtle breeding of disagreement and disruption of any kind in our midst.

Permit me just to add a few notes concerning the painters' activities in this world war since its beginning, even before we got into the fray. In the first place, they raised for the Appui des Artistes about $100,000, and they have been painting and selling and giving these "same old interiors, same old pretty brooks, &c.," for war relief funds of every kind and description ever since. Wherever pictures can be turned into money, the painters are giving. The land camouflage and marine camouflage corps are officered largely by painters. The large "Designation Targets," so invaluable for the intensive and speedy training of officers and men are being produced by the painters in considerable numbers, and many a painter who never in his life had painted a large landscape bravely does his best for the country on a 5 by 12 foot canvas. Not every painter is able to do this or make posters. The illustrator is more especially fitted for the latter work, and so has done it, just as the painter has done what he could do best. Some painters have served on the Legal Advisory Boards during the draft, some have helped in doing experimental work for the Government, &c. In other words, the painter, as well as the illustrator, or any other professional artist who is a loyal American, is doing whatever he can to help win the war, and the less he talks about it the better.

When I showed the article in question to my friend Charles Dana Gibson he used good, strong language in condemning the remarks made by these unnamed men, considering them as dangerous as real Prussian propagandists, whether they had spoken in ignorance or otherwise. He was most anxious that I should make this public statement, which he heartily indorses.

A Well-Behaved Army.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Many are the pros and cons in regard to universal military training for the youth of our country, but the verdict of mothers, friends, workers, and spectators seems to be universal improvement in manners, character, and naturally (by no means the least beneficial effect) carriage. A worker in France, a college graduate, (a composer of songs,) an ex-Judge, a man of mature judgment, refinement, and intelligence, writes: "I cannot say enough about the splendid morale of our men. They are the best disciplined, best behaved army ever gathered together, and the change in men which we noticed after they put on their uniforms is only intensified after they arrive here. They seem to realize their responsibilities and obligations, and they are dignified and ennobled thereby."

Sacrifices for Victory.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was very pleased to see the article entitled "Economize for Victory" in your paper today, and want to say that if the people in this country only knew how easy it is to do "their bit" they would be amazed. We are asked to economize in this and that article of food, but there is undoubtedly a tremendous amount of waste still going on. I am going without breakfast three days a week, and am feeling fitter than ever I did in my life. If only 50 per cent. of the people followed suit, or even cut out one or two meals, just think what a saving there would be, and how we would help our allies. At the same time prices, instead of soaring, would drop.

German Names for Ferryboats.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At this time, when all things German have come to be detested by patriotic Americans, how is it that the names Bremen, Hamburg, &c., are tolerated on the D., L. & W. ferryboats? Being a daily traveler on this line, I would be glad to see these names supplanted by American ones.

AN AMERICAN WOMAN.
New York, May 9, 1918.

THE BATTALION OF LIFE.

("Save the babies of the Allies!" is the slogan adopted by the women doctors of the country, through the American Women's Hospitals, which act as the clearing house for sending them abroad.)

When Death, like a giant Thinker, broods o'er a butchered host,
Who sees, in the lurking shadows, a baby's frightened ghost?
When War, the spoiler of nations,
shrieks to the blood-red sky,
Who hears, through the clamor of battle,
the children's wailing cry?

It comes to the woman doctor—vigilant,
steadfast, brave,
Strong in the age-old instinct that the giver of life shall save,
She matches her strength with the spoiler's,
her woman's heart with his lust,
And flings him the ringing challenge—
"The children shall be my trust!"

Facing the sterner conflict, well armed with love and skill,
The Battalion of Life goes forward, to save where others kill—
To stem the tide of death's advance, to win back gain from loss.
They fling us the ringing challenge,
"We're ready—put us across!"

THE TENSE SITUATION IN IRELAND.

An American Observer Thinks We Might Do Something to Relieve the Strain.

By HENRY SEIDEL CANBY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just returned from Ireland, where, as an American, I was able to talk freely with leaders among all Irish parties, a privilege denied in the present heat to either Irishmen or Britishers; for the Irish, disagreeing among themselves in many things, are united in their regard for America.

It is far from my intention to present the usual "solution" of the Irish question to readers of THE TIMES, but the misconception of the situation current in some American editorial writing is so apparent in the extracts now being published in the English press that a few first-hand observations may not be taken amiss.

First, then, Ulster has a case and a strong one. It fears an attack upon its economic efficiency by a southern majority, which may have more concern for its own conception of an Irish Commonwealth than for the rights of a hard-working industrial community, and it fears Roman Catholic domination. But Ulster is stiff-necked. Ulster is still living in the days of 1913, when the requirements for "good business" were the world's chief anxiety. Ulster is not yet willing (at least at this writing) to trust to such checks and safeguards as, for example, our American system affords. It rests its case on the status quo.

The south of Ireland has also a strong case. It is inspired just now with a nationalism whose intensity cannot be overestimated and which it will be perilous to neglect. It is convinced that there is a better civilization for Ireland than the one which has been imposed upon her, and that only Irishmen can guide and establish it. But the south of Ireland is so aflame with grievances, some very real, some fancied, that she cannot look beyond her borders. She is politically as well as internationally short-sighted. What she charges against "the tyrant England" is frequently better charged against Ulster, and if Ulster is recalcitrant it is not England's fault now but her own.

Hence the difficulty over conscription. It is not an unwillingness to fight that makes the trouble. It is an unwillingness to fight for England, (Ireland still needs to be taught that this is not England's war,) and, more reasonably, a deep and well-grounded fear that such ruthless conscription as was indicated would be imposed by the English Army without regard for the peculiar conditions of a country with a waning population and (in the south) very few war industries by means of which the population could meet resulting exigencies. Under the circumstances, it is not surprising that the Irishman should see much more clearly the hand of England crushing his country into a slave State than the necessity to battle for civilization everywhere and oppressed small nations on the Continent. I do not defend him. I am merely stating the case. Put yourself in his place, with a race history of 700 years of almost constant misfortune vividly present, and consider how readily your broader judgment would overcome the odium of compulsion from without.

The function of America is clearly, then, not to execrate the "cowardly Irish," or to abuse them for selfish particularism. It is to educate them in international far-sightedness. They distrust and misunderstand England. They trust America. Let them understand more clearly our position and purposes in the world war. If they have our moral support in their attempt to realize an Irish national existence they will take from us (and from no other nation) the criticism and enlightenment that they undoubtedly need.

And when it comes to home rule, let Americans remember that this is no simple term like "food" or "clothing." A home rule offered to Ireland which would give her independence of the English system and our own would be a new provoker of wars, however it might please certain among the now powerful Sinn Fein Party. A home rule which retains the leading strings of Irish affairs in English hands and makes it possible for Ulster to continue to use the British Government as its catspaw, while Southern Ireland expends in hatred of England the energy which should be employed in conciliating the north, should be regarded as a mockery rather than as a gift.

ROOSEVELT FOR RUSSIA.

The Suggestion is Welcomed by a Traveler Back from Siberia.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was much interested in reading the letter of Peter J. Popoff in this morning's TIMES, with its suggestion that Colonel Roosevelt be the "Lafayette for Russia." Even with allowance for the obvious unknown factors in developing such a suggestion, it is certainly worth thinking about. It is a definite proposal in a field where definite proposals have been greatly longed for, but sadly lacking. Russia must have help if she is to be saved from Germany, and the way for us now to help is not through European Russia, but through Siberia. If money or material help alone were to be sent it would be wasted and lost. If any man is to be sent and be successful he must have not only consummate ability, but certain qualities which will serve to rally round him a multitude of men who can be reached only through some of the few enthusiasms which remain to them undispelled by recent events. No other nation has the hold on Russia—perhaps we had better say now, on Siberia—that America has, and no American is known and admired and trusted there as is Colonel Roosevelt.

I returned last Fall after a year and a half in the district north of Vladivostok. The Russians there used to ask to be informed about other Americans whose names are household words with us, but they knew about Colonel Roosevelt, just as every one else in civilization knows about him.

There may be grave political obstacles to be overcome—but one way to start overcoming political obstacles is for those who are in favor of something to say so.

GEORGE P. CONGER.
New York, May 9, 1918.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I be permitted to urge a further appeal to our President, as well as to our nation, to press the immediate need of sending our able Roosevelt as a Lafayette to Russia? It is a dire necessity to save her from the Prussian death grip! He is the one great man who could resuscitate her and thereby help win the war. Pass the word along—make it a nation-wide call. Mr. Roosevelt's work and personal influence would aid in shortening the war.

For a Manx Society.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As one of several Manxmen resident in this city, my compatriots have suggested my writing to ask if THE TIMES will kindly aid us in calling together any natives of Manxland here to consider the project of forming a little Manx society.

Besides the merely social aspect of such a gathering of the clans, which of itself has much to recommend it, there are other directions in which it would be of great practical advantage. For instance, the Manx are great sailors. Perhaps no other nation under the sun has so large a percentage of its sons that go down to the sea in ships. Hardly a British ship comes here without one or more Manxmen among her crew. Only last Saturday night the writer, among others, enjoyed entertaining a delightfully bright young man of that ilk, one of the crew of a large liner from the other side. He declared such a nucleus as that proposed would be a great blessing to many like himself—a corner where every Manxman, resident or passing through to the West or Canada, or just Jack on shore leave from his ship, the gentle or simple, soldier or sailor, or poor man or rich man—can shake the hand of a countryman of his own and feel that he is among friends.

Most men passing through New York are prone to take a few days to see the sights, and many of these, among them several Manxmen personally known to the writer, have grievously paid the piper for want of a friend who knows the ins and outs of little old New York.

Any Manxmen inclined to take a kindly social interest in a simple, inexpensive plan of meeting and fraternizing in this way, can meet others of like mind by addressing Manxman, 320 East Fifty-fifth Street, New York.

Lessons from the War Stamp.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A great many men and women may have a slight feeling of uncertainty as to the benefits to be derived from the War Savings Stamps campaign, and may be somewhat annoyed at repeated solicitations on the streets. May I take the liberty of urging upon your readers that they consider the matter not only from the point of view of the direct money benefit to the Government, but also the great and lasting good it does the young people who are selling the stamps? This morning I was solicited by perhaps a dozen children, markedly of foreign birth. I felt that buying from them was very important, because of its effect in making them feel that they are part of the war winning force of this country. Success on the part of these children will be an enduring element in making them patriotic through life.

SATISFACTION IN SERVICE.

Letter from a Man Who Gave Up a High Position to Become a Private.

A young Baltimore man, President of a manufacturing company, earning a large income, who entered the army as a private, has written to his family:

"Somewhere in France.
"April 12, 1918.

"* * * Am feeling great, and the harder it is to get the creature comforts the more I thank myself for having been more or less of an outdoors man. The days spent in the Michigan woods and in fishing and motoring trips gave me many valuable lessons in taking care of myself under camp conditions. We are a long way from the front, and are anticipating only hard work here, in danger chiefly from loss of appetite or sleep. So be assured we will be permitted city liberty from 5 P. M. until 9 P. M. each day, with permission to drink in moderation, and that, together with the opportunities passes give to see the life of the French, will be a welcome change for us, who have been denied all leave of absence since we got to the port of embarkation. * * *

"The city is quite large, and our information leads us to believe a fine and interesting place. I certainly will be glad to get to work and really feel that I am doing something. Am still a private and doing my duty as such. There can hardly be any promotions looked for over here until a time when a man can be assigned certain duties. I am contented because I feel that I am doing my share as much as the limitations of rank permit, and I feel sure that no man has made a greater sacrifice for his duty than mine. Leaving a business with over 200 employes and divers vital enterprises and coordinated work in the hands of only two others, knowing full well that these represent all accomplished after years of effort, is not a mean sacrifice, and my heart is light when I know within myself that I answered the call of duty rather than relegated myself to the dollar chasers who refused it. And if I come back home, as please God I shall, and find you, my dearest ones, all safe and sound, even if my affairs should have suffered—why, I can start in again and work things up to the place where we left them. * * *

"The sun is shining today, and France smiles through her tears. I have a feeling that we are going to see the end soon, and certainly we boys are going to be the happiest mortals in the world when it's all over. We have some really interesting discussions in the 'gloaming' before we retire, and the amount of brains and individual reasoning ability that crops out is amazing."

A Weakness of New York Buildings.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the discussion of the zoning system of the city's real estate which recent events have occasioned there is one consideration often neglected which even a person of no estate at all may be permitted to urge. It is the extreme desirability, from the point of view of the public, that City Government control should encourage the building of whole blocks as units. If a building is complete all around, finished on every side, it may be a better neighbor, and almost certainly it will have a better effect upon the appearance of the city, than a building even of intrinsically better character which is sliced off at the sides to conform to the limitations of a building lot and shows the raw edges and amputated cornices that are the usual result.

The worst aspect of New York's real estate, as of many another American city, is not that it is skyscraping, nor even that its height is irregular, but that so many of its buildings are constructed as if they were to be seen only upon one or two sides, when in fact they are quite as conspicuous upon the other two or three; and these are too often constructed with entire architectural indecency. The speculative builder will lavish cut stone and expensive brick work upon the facade which follows the street line of his building lot, and leave the equally visible sides or ends as crude as if somebody had sliced through a complete structure and then closed up the wounded sides with a retaining wall. It really seems an unintelligent distribution of his resources. Sometimes, of course, there is a prospect that the next lot may presently be built upon with a contiguous structure that will conceal the unpresentable side of the first, but the same thing is often done when there is no such excuse whatever—when the offensive wall is on a side court which is evidently intended to be open as long as the building lasts.

There has been in recent years a considerable improvement in these respects, particularly in the more important buildings downtown, but the fantastic, conventional notion still generally persists that a building is to be considered visible only on its street fronts. Perhaps the City Government cannot oblige builders to take sufficient account of the plans of their neighbors, but if it can encourage the building of structures such as to cover a whole block with a single complete design, it should be done, even at the risk of seeming to favor the big builder rather than the little one.

ALSACE-LORRAINE PLEDGED TO FRANCE

Half a Million Americans Now Fighting with Freedom of Lost Provinces as One Aim.

TARDIEU FINDS HOPE HERE

Tells Blue Devils to Let the People at Home Know of America's War Preparations.

At the dinner of the Association Générale des Alsaciens-Lorrains d'Amerique last night a thousand persons, including the Blue Devils, Pershing's veterans, and military and civil officials of practically every allied nation, were witnesses to the renewal of America's pledge to France that one of the results of this war shall be the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine.

"A half million young Americans are in France today," said Assistant Secretary of War Frederic Keppel, who was present as Secretary Baker's representative, "and it is hoped and expected that they will soon have the pleasure of visiting those two fair provinces of Alsace and Lorraine. They are held up for the present by a little difficulty at the frontier, but it is to be hoped that in due time all such difficulties will be triumphantly overcome."

M. Daniel Blumenthal, former Mayor of Colmar, Alsace, President of the association, read cable messages from President Poincaré of France, Prime Minister Georges Clemenceau, and Stephen Pichon, Minister of Foreign Affairs, which were received yesterday by André Tardieu, High Commissioner of the French Republic. President Poincaré's dispatch read:

"I am informed that you will preside at a great reunion organized by the Association Générale des Alsaciens-Lorrains in honor of the Alpine Chasseurs now in America. No one knows better than yourself the valor of those splendid battalions with which you have so brilliantly served.

"Permit me to remind myself today that I also have been a Captain of Chasseurs, and to send from afar to the organizers of the meeting of the Alsatians-Lorraines of America to our Alpine comrades and to yourself my most cordial compliments and warmest wishes. The splendid American troops will henceforth co-operate with the French and allied armies for the liberation of oppressed peoples. Alsace-Lorraine, the symbolic victim of violence and injustice, will be avenged by the triumph of righteousness."

Commissioner Tardieu's speech was in the main addressed to the "Blue Devils," whom he urged to study the stupendous war program of this country so that they could tell France when they returned that America was coming to the fight with all her resources. He said, in part:

"To me, a delegate of the French Government, and formerly, for many months, a Captain in one of the battalions of Blue Devils, whose representatives we honor tonight, to me it is a joy to thank at the same time the organizers of this meeting and our comrades whose presence is adding lustre to the occasion.

"I want first to pay my tribute to the American soldiers sent over from the front by General Pershing a few days ago. I want first to greet with fraternal cheers their khaki uniforms and their French war crosses.

"Officers, noncommissioned officers, and men of the French detachment of chasseurs in America, in the name of the Government of the French Republic, I extend to you a cordial welcome, and in my own name as a former Captain in the 44th Battalion, I greet you as brothers.

"When you are back in France tell your comrades what you have seen here; their manly faith in the holy victory of liberty and right will thereby grow stronger.

"Let your heart respond to the affection by which you are surrounded and besieged. If France is worthy of America, America, which I have seen at work, is worthy of France."

The remainder of M. Tardieu's remarks were addressed to the Alsace-Lorrainers. He dwelt upon the history of Alsace-Lorraine since 1871, and told in detail of atrocities practiced by the Germans upon the residents of that province and upon soldiers in the German Army from that province.

Assistant Secretary of War Keppel said a few words in French, welcoming the "Blue Devils," then, speaking in English, told of the magnificent spirit of self-sacrifice displayed by the Allies in voluntarily relinquishing command of their own armies to General Foch.

Henry Morgenthau, former Ambassador to Turkey, referring to the putting supreme command in the hands of General Foch, asserted that the allied troops would be invincible, and added that none realized it better than the Germans.

William D. Guthrie and M. Justin Godart, former Assistant Secretary of War for France, also spoke.

LIGHTNING STARTS FIRES.

High Wind Also Does Damage in Heavy Rainstorm.

Although a high wind preceded the heavy rainstorm last night while many workers were on their way home, little damage to shipping in the harbor or to other property was reported. There were several fires from lightning, but the damage was slight.

While Max Lunk was sitting with his feet on the window ledge in his home, at 300 Oliver Street, Newark, lightning struck the rear of the house and ripped one of Lunk's shoes off. He was slightly stunned, but it was not necessary to take him to the hospital. Lightning also demolished the flagpole on the Bergen Street Police Station in Brooklyn, and startled a Lieutenant so badly that he called out the reserves.

During a lapse in the storm about 8 o'clock many persons were attracted by the gray and yellow tints of the sky as the sun went down in the mists. The glow of gold remained in the sky for several minutes, causing many persons to believe there was a large fire in New Jersey, but the color faded to gray as the mists became heavier and the sun descended.

Red Cross Fete at Fort Hamilton.

In aid of the American Red Cross a lawn fete, supper, and hop has been arranged for Friday, May 17, from 2 until 11 P. M., by the officers and their wives of Fort Hamilton. Tickets are $5 each. This is the first time the grounds of Fort Hamilton have been opened for such an entertainment.

Mr. Malone Explains Telegram.

Dudley Field Malone, who sent a telegram of regret to the dinner given to the indicted staff of The Masses at the Central Opera House on Thursday, denied yesterday that he had stated in the telegram that he could not attend the dinner because his absence from Washington might mean that the Federal Suffrage amendment would be defeated.

SUSPICIOUS FIRE BURNS SUPPLIES FOR ALLIES

Investigation Started Into $100,000 Blaze in N. Y. Dock Company Plant.

A fire, the origin of which is being investigated, started in three places in the new Baltic terminal of the New York Dock Company at Columbia and Harrison Streets on the South Brooklyn waterfront shortly after midnight this morning, and the greater part of a large shipment of allied war supplies, valued at $100,000, was destroyed. Deputy Fire Chief O'Hara, who directed the work of the apparatus and fireboats that responded to three alarms of fire, said that, while he had been unable to learn the exact cause of the fire, a preliminary investigation caused him to believe that it was started by an incendiary.

The building was of brick construction and ran about 600 feet from Columbia Street to the waterfront between Harrison and Baltic Streets, and the firemen were able to pour streams into the building from four sides. Watchmen who were in the building said that the fire sprang up suddenly in three places near the waterfront side, and almost before they could turn in the alarm it had reached the middle of the building, after burning through burlap and other inflammable materials.

Police reserves from the Amity Street Station at once threw a cordon around the zone and the nearby warehouses at other piers, and all suspicious persons were questioned. No arrests were made, and the police reported that no one had seen men running away from the fire.

About twenty pieces of apparatus responded on three alarms, and two fireboats were also summoned from the harbor.

GERMAN FACTORIES IDLE.

Textile Workers in Desperate Plight, Says Reichstag Deputy.

AMSTERDAM, May 10.—Herr Kraetzig, a Socialist member of the Reichstag, asserted in Wednesday's debate on the appropriations for the Imperial Economic Department that four-fifths of the textile industries of Germany were completely paralyzed and that the position of the idle textile workers was rapidly growing desperate.

He demanded that adequate provision be made for them, so as to keep skilled textile workers in readiness for a resumption of the industries after the war. At present, he said, they were being compelled to accept menial employment from the authorities at starvation wages.

Herr Kraetzig also complained that attempts were being made by a small group of capitalists, with the knowledge of the Government, to monopolize the cellulose industry, which promised to be extremely important in the future. He attacked Dr. Karl Helfferich, formerly Vice Chancellor, saying that Helfferich had a mania for creating syndicates, which was fatal to industries and calculated especially to ruin the textile industry.

BAKER NAMES PRESS AGENT.

Will Centralize Distribution of Information to the Public.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Secretary Baker announced late today that he had appointed Marlen E. Pew of the Committee on Public Information as his personal press representative, "for the purpose of centralizing the distribution of information to the public with regard to the activities from the War Department."

The appointment of Mr. Pew marks the beginning of Secretary Baker's new policy of handling publicity. Just what changes in existing practices there are to be has not been indicated, and it is understood various problems involved still are under discussion with General Pershing. In discussing Mr. Pew's appointment the Secretary said:

"He will have an office in the War Department, and will submit to me for decision all questions of policy with regard to publicity. He will also submit all questions of military propriety to General McIntyre before any information is given out, the publication of which might by any possibility give aid to the enemy or embarrass the military efforts of the United States."

URGE UNITED HIGH SCHOOL.

1,000 Girls Appeal to Mayor for One Great Building.

About 1,000 girls, representing the pupils of the Julia Richman High School, made a plea to Mayor Hylan on the steps of the City Hall yesterday to have all the girls' high schools of the city united in one great building. The girls, attired in "middy" costumes, marched to the City Hall, and the Mayor, accompanied by Arthur Somers, President of the Board of Education, greeted them.

Miss Adeline Eldridge acted as spokesman for her schoolmates. The Julia Richman High School, she said, had led all the girls' high schools in gathering subscriptions for the Second and Third Liberty Loans, and she asked that their plea go not unheeded. The Mayor promised to give the matter attention.

WED TO REV. D. B. VAN DYCK.

Miss Anna F. Booraem Richardson Married in Athenia, N. J.

Mrs. Harriet Booraem Richardson of 424 West Twentieth Street, this city, has announced the marriage of her daughter, Miss Anna Foster Booraem Richardson, to the Rev. David Bevier Van Dyck, a son of the Rev. E. D. Van Dyck of Greenville, N. Y. The wedding took place on Tuesday in the Dutch Reformed Church at Athenia, N. J., the pastor of which, the Rev. Henry J. Scudder, an uncle of the bride, and recently returned from missionary work in India, performed the ceremony, assisted by the bridegroom's father. The reception followed at the parsonage.

Mr. Van Dyck was graduated from Rutgers College in 1914 and from the Princeton Theological Seminary last year. He has taken a church at Dunmore, Penn., for a year, during the pastor's absence in France, after which he and his bride hope to go to China to engage in missionary work. Mrs. Van Dyck's mother is a member of the old Booraem family of New York.

Miss Buffum to Wed Lieut. Fisk.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Albert Buffum of Easthampton, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Buffum, to Lieutenant Archibald Fisk of the Ordnance Department, O. R. C., and a son of Mrs. Henry Fisk of Englewood, N. J. Lieutenant Fisk received his commission several months ago, and is stationed at Rock Island, Ill. No date has been set for the wedding. Miss Buffum has been in New York the past Winter.

Wed Embassy Secretary Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Wilbur Grover of Spring Lake, N. J., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Augusta Grover, to Thomas Hart Anderson, Jr., Third Secretary of the American Embassy in Rome. The wedding took place at the embassy on April 2. Secretary of War Newton D. Baker was in Italy at that time and was to have attended the wedding, but arrived a day later in Rome.

POINTS TO AMERICA'S DUTY IN RUSSIA

Mrs. Florence Harper Tells How That Country Can Be Saved.

WORK OF GERMAN AGENTS

Their Propaganda Must Be Overcome If Russian Resources Are to be Kept from Germany.

Just as the French are looking to America to reconstruct their devastated lands, the Russians are depending upon us to lift them out of their present chaotic state, and much encouragement and help must be given to the millions of people in that country if they are to be restored to a place of trust among the important nations of the world, according to Mrs. Florence Harper, a Canadian, who was in Russia during the most perilous days of the revolution. Mrs. Harper has come to this country to impress upon the people of the United States the importance of aiding the chaotic nation, and will soon return, hoping to carry with her a message of courage from Americans. For several months she nursed the wounded at what was formerly the Czar's Hospital, and she also ministered to wounded soldiers along the different fronts.

"Since returning from Russia many persons have asked me if I considered the situation of Russia hopeless," said Mrs. Harper, who is stopping at the Holland House. "When I reply that it is far from hopeless, they always seem astonished and ask me what can be done to help Russia and improve our own situation in doing so.

"One thing that Russia needs above all others at the present time is the help, sympathy, and moral backing not only of President Wilson, but every man, woman, and child in America.

"Russia needs more than copies of the wonderful speeches of the President, she needs the support of the whole nation. The only way Russia can be helped is by propaganda that is nation wide. The peasants and all those who are sincere in their Bolshevist tendencies are suspicious of everything that comes either from the Government or from the big industrial interests. The only way to overcome this is to show them that not only the capitalists, many of whom are sincere in their desire to help, but every American, who is a real American, from Wall Street to the miners and farmers and the day laborers, sympathizes and is willing to help.

"It will take many men and much money and time, but no matter what the cost the result will be well worth it. It means the saving of the youngest democracy in the world and the winning of the war. There is no peace possible until Russia is organized. Russia today is at the mercy of Hun agents and the pernicious propaganda they have been spreading unchecked for the last year.

"Some patriotic Americans despise the use of weapons similar to those Germany used. I cannot understand why they feel that way. Germany used gas; we use it, too. As her guns became bigger, ours increased in size. Step by step we have had to fight her with her own weapons, and step by step in Russia we will have to do the same thing. Germany used propaganda in Russia that worked well. We must use the same weapon, but instead of using a few well-paid agents we must go further.

"The whole American Nation must be roused to the importance of the surreptitious occupation of Russia by Germany. The greatest treasure house in the world, with the richest market and untold resources, is at the mercy of Germany's agents, who are now preparing the way for a commercial campaign greater than the Central Powers ever dreamed of. No matter what the peace terms are this influence can only be counteracted by us. No peace terms can prevent the underhand exploitations of Russia such as Germany is now planning and undertaking. Month after month in Russia I could see the work that was being done by the agents of Berlin. Nothing was done to stop them. We despise their weapons and methods.

"The time has come to use common sense; there is only one way to save Russia, and that is for the American Nation to rise as one man and say: 'We will send men over who will tell you the truth and we will show you what America is. If you need supplies we will give them to you. If you need money it is here for you; don't be afraid to take it. It is not the money of Wall Street, but a donation from every man, woman, and child in America. We do this to prove to you that you are our brothers and have our support in your greatest struggle for freedom, the same fight that we fought ourselves 150 years ago.'

"Such a movement would win Russia and make her strong enough to stand on her own feet. There are a few persons in America who are beginning to realize the necessity of such a plan. When they are ready they must have the support of the whole nation."

NEIL M'DONALD, POET, DIES IN THE BOWERY

Body of Former Editor of The Scottish-American and Once Rich Miner in the Morgue.

The body of an aged man, who was fond dead in a lodging house at 4 Chetham Square on Wednesday, was identified at the Morgue yesterday as that of Neil McDonald, a poet and essayist, who had once been editor of The Scottish-American. Mr. McDonald, who was 75 years old, had become wealthy through mining operations in Canada, and during a long residence there had been distinguished both for the quality of his verse and as an authority on Canadian political history.

His parents back in Scotland had been wealthy, and after graduation from the University of Edinburgh the young man went to Canada, where mines yielded him a large fortune. Years ago he came to New York. Generosity and strong leaning to bohemianism were his greatest faults his friends said yesterday, and these made steady inroads on his fortune until at last it was completely dissipated. Mr. McDonald was wont to pass much of his time with the odd lots of humanity found on or near the Bowery, where his verses found many an applauding audience.

A chance reference to the St. Andrew Society in a letter found among the dead man's effects by Detective Callahan of the Missing Persons Bureau, resulted in an identification by the Rev. Donald McDougall of the society, who gave the facts concerning Mr. McDonald's life. A brother, it was learned, lives at Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada. He was notified. Mr. McDonald's latest verses, "A Plea for Immortality," will be published as a posthumous offering.

DR. MARTIN FLEMING DEAD.

Old New York Physician Had a Notable Violin Collection.

Dr. Martin Fleming, a member of the old school of New York physicians, retiring from active practice ten years ago, died on Thursday at his home, 56 Jerome Street, East New York, in his seventy-second year. During his career Dr. Fleming practiced at 132 Lexington Avenue and later at 911 Park Avenue. His collection of violins, bows, violin music, and literature on the instrument was probably the most complete in the country.

Dr. Fleming was born in Canada. He came here in his youth and attended St. John's College, Fordham University, a member of the class which numbered among its members Cardinal Farley and ex-Supreme Court Justice Morgan J. O'Brien. Dr. Fleming was a close friend and in later years attended the Cardinal. He was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and for many years was an attending physician at Bellevue Hospital.

During his practice he had been associated with the late Dr. Edward Janeway, father of the late Dr. Theodore C. Janeway. In his violin collection are many notable pieces, including a Bergonzi violin, a Tourte sapphire bow, and an Ernst bow made by Tourte, as well as a collection of rare books on the violin. Dr. Fleming was a member of the Academy of Medicine and the County Medical Society. He is survived by his wife, a brother, Dr. Edward Fleming of this city, and two sisters.

KILLED IN NOSE DIVE.

Cadet Myers Crashes to Earth Near Hicks Field, Texas.

FORT WORTH, Tex., May 10.—Cadet Harry J. Myers, of Bucyrus, Ohio, crashed to instant death late today when he lost control of his plane while making a spinning-nose dive from an altitude of 1,000 feet about two miles east of Hicks Fields, near here.

It is believed the accident was due to Myer's continuing the dive until too near the ground to right the machine. He had been at the field since March 17, and was credited with twenty hours of solo flying. The nearest relative is Mrs. C. R. Myers of Bucyrus, Ohio, stepmother.

HOUSTON, Texas, May 10.—Second Lieutenant Louie Eddy Davis died late tonight from injuries received earlier in the day, when his plane crashed to earth after having been thrown into a tail spin by engine trouble. Second Lieutenant A. Lawrence, who was in the rear seat, was uninjured.

Lieutenant Davis was from Bloomington, Ill., his wife, father, and mother, are all here, the parents having come to visit him a few days ago. He was stationed at Ellington Field.

NEW AUTO RULES IN THEATRE ZONE

Waiting Chauffeurs Will Be Called According to the Numbers on Their Cards.

IMMUNITY FOR PHYSICIANS

Deputy Commissioner Harriss Tells Association His Plans to Remedy Traffic Evils.

Some new methods about to be put into effect by Dr. John A. Harriss, the Deputy Police Commissioner in charge of traffic, to remedy certain traffic evils were explained by him last night at a well attended meeting of the Highway Traffic Association of the State of New York at the Automobile Club of America. Dr. Harriss, in addition to outlining the benefits which he believes his plan of an overhead structure on Sixth Avenue for through traffic from Fortieth to Fifty-ninth Street will bring about, told of three other plans recently worked out to be put into operation within a few days.

One is directed to a regulation of vehicular traffic at night in the Forty-second Street theatre district, between Broadway and Eighth Avenue. Special numbered cards have been prepared which will be given to automobiles or carriages as they arrive at the theatre. After the performance the vehicles will be lined up in groups of ten in the order of their numbers, and between every ten private vehicles five taxicabs will be allowed. The car owners will be notified as they leave the theatre that the group from 1 to 10 is ready. Then those who wish taxicabs will be permitted to use the five cabs. Following them will come the second group of ten private vehicles, and so on to the end.

The second plan is the punch card system to simplify the work of the traffic policeman in issuing summonses for violations of traffic rules and to prevent his frequent attendance at court for minor complaints. All car drivers will have cards with places for five punches. At the fifth punch the driver will be arraigned in court. If he can prove that he has not been greatly at fault he will receive another card, but when that is fully punched, meaning ten directions in all, application will be made to the Secretary of State for the cancellation of his chauffeur's license as evidence that he is not a careful driver.

The third plan will relieve physicians from a summons for court appearance on the charge of allowing their cars to stand unprotected in the streets for too long a time, provided the physician has a special card, about to be prepared by the Police Department. To enjoy its benefits he must either lock his motor or anchor one of the wheels by a chain, and a metal tag designating that it is a physician's car must be attached to the vehicle.

General Francis V. Greene, ex-Police Commissioner, commended Dr. Harriss's plans very highly for the relief of city traffic. He thought that many things might be done at once at less expense than the building of the Sixth Avenue viaduct for immediate relief, especially in respect to street widening and an extension of the one-way street traffic system.

William P. Eno, former Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, and Arthur H. Blanchard, President of the association, also spoke.

DR. GARFIELD SEES WIGGIN.

Urges Him in Vain to Reconsider His Resignation.

Dr. Garfield, National Fuel Administrator, visited New York yesterday to speed up the laying in of the city's coal reserve supply against next Winter. He also said he wanted to persuade Albert H. Wiggin to reconsider his resignation as New York State Fuel Administrator. Dr. Garfield held a conference with Mr. Wiggin and Deputy State Fuel Administrator C. E. Robertson in the office of the administration at 61 Broadway. After the conference Mr. Wiggin said:

"The call of Dr. Garfield was, I think, one of courtesy on his part to give me one more chance to reconsider my decision. I told him my reasons for resigning, and I told him that in view of these I felt it my duty to resign, as I could not do the office justice with my other work."

Following the conference it was announced that John F. Birmingham of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Coal Company, had been appointed to represent the anthracite coal interests in connection with the Fuel Administration's Committee on Distribution. The members of this committee, which was appointed some weeks ago, are J. B. Dixon, F. D. Warner, and W. J. Richards. Mr. Birmingham will act as an intermediary between the anthracite interests and the Administration, and will aid in the distribution of coal through the city.

ROOSEVELT GIVES FACTS TO BURLESON

the damage done by the conduct of the New York Postmaster. On March 12 the editor of The Metropolitan wrote to Mr. Burleson, saying, among other things, 'You must remember that there are a great number of pacifists and pro-Germans in this country who would willingly put The Metropolitan Magazine out of business because it is the most strongly pro-Ally and anti-German publication in the country,' calling attention to the fact that a statement attributed to the Solicitor General of the department was obviously not in accord with the facts, and that The Metropolitan could not accept newspaper statements without confirmation from the Postmaster General, and asking for a written statement from the Postmaster General in the matter. He has received no such statement, nor has any attempt been made by the Post Office Department to remedy the wrong it did by the Postmaster at New York.

Says Advertiser Was Approached.

"At the same time one of the advertisers in the Metropolitan, E. M. Mansur of Floral Park, N. Y., received a letter from a man in Chicago suggesting that he withdraw his advertisement, because of the editorial in the Metropolitan Magazine. Mr. Mansur declined to withdraw it. On April 3 he notified the Metropolitan that a special agent of the United States Department of Justice, whose name, shield number and address he gave, (all of which I will give in my formal letter to the Senator,) called on him with copies of the letters of this Chicago man to him and of the replies and asked if Mr. Mansur had stopped advertising, and wanted to know if he was going on advertising next year, and then if he were an American citizen. The last query taken in connection with the first two contained, of course, an implication that was in effect a threat. This shows that the Department of Justice had knowledge of the attempt, and lent its official power to further it, unless the man in question had stolen the special agent's shield which he possessed and forged his name and address. The above facts Mr. Burleson cannot truthfully deny, and they absolutely demonstrate the exactness of my statement, so far as the Administration's effort to punish the publications which uphold the war but have told the truth about the Administration's failure to conduct the war efficiently.

"Now for the second part of my statement. The prime example of failure by the Administration to proceed against newspapers which opposed the war or attacked our allies or directly or indirectly aided Germany is afforded by a failure of the Administration to deal with Mr. Hearst's papers as it has dealt with certain other papers. Mr. Hearst is a very wealthy man, reputed to be much more than a millionaire, owning a dozen newspapers, more or less, and a half dozen magazines in different parts of the country. At the very beginning of the war the Government proceeded successfully against Tom Watson's publication in Georgia. Yet Tom Watson had done nothing that was anything like as dangerous to this country and our allies and as helpful to Germany as Mr. Hearst had done.

"It is interesting to remember that the Administration had full warning about Hearst's probable attitude by his previous editorials attacking Germany's foes and defending Germany. I have before me at the moment a copy of The New York American editorial of June 6, 1915, signed by Mr. Hearst himself, saying that we have no right to ask Germany to refrain from submarine warfare against the commerce of her enemies and that the Lusitania was an English vessel and was properly a spoil of war, and that its destruction by the German submarine was in accordance with the authorized and accepted rules of warfare.

"After we went into the war, on April 11, 1917, Mr. Hearst wrote: 'Stripping our country of men, money, and food is a dangerous policy. Our earnest suggestion to the Congress is that it imperatively refuse to permit the further draining of our food supplies and our military supplies to Europe.'

"Effort Against Our Ally."

"This, of course, was equivalent to a demand that after going to war we should turn around and help Germany more than if we had continued to remain neutral. On April 24, 1917, The New York American said: 'The painful truth is that we are being practically used as a mere reinforcement of England's warfare and England's future aggrandizement.' This, of course, was an effort against our ally and an effort to pander to anti-English prejudice in the interest of our foes, and nothing else. On May 17 it advocated our spending all our money on preparing our army and navy here at home 'and so compelling Germany if she wants to fight to come to us,' which was, of course, equivalent to answering that we would render no aid to defeat Germany until she had defeated our allies and was prepared to attack us single-handed.

"On May 25 the same paper said of the efforts to float he Liberty Loan: 'If you want our food and wealth sent abroad to help suffering England, buy a Liberty bond, furnish the sinews of war.' In view of Hearst's continued effort to excite hatred between the United States and England, the implication of this sentence cannot be mistaken. In the very next sentence he subtly attempts to appeal to all men with a feeling of affection for Germany by intimating that whoever purchased a Liberty bond desired to see Germany not merely defeated but 'dismembered.' On July 27 The New York American spoke of our soldiers being sent over 'to be offered up in bloody sacrifice to the ambition of contending nations on foreign battlefields.' On Nov. 22 it spoke of our 'interfering in Europe's quarrels.' It is absolutely impossible to reconcile the Government's action in proceeding against Tom Watson's paper with its failure to proceed against Mr. Hearst's papers on any theory that justice was to be done alike to the strong and to the weak.

"All of these quotations and many others like them may be found in recent issues of The New York Tribune. The Government had full notice about Hearst, because the Allies had barred him from the cable service, and only through the good offices of this Government have these privileges just now been restored to Mr. Hearst. Mr. Hearst's papers have upheld Mr. Baker, have apologized for the war program and have even denied such breakdowns as that in the aircraft program. It is true that since we entered the war Mr. Hearst has at various times issued editorials professing great patriotic zeal, at the very time when in other editorials he was attacking the allies of America, England and Japan, in the most offensive way, and thereby doing his best to weaken the effect of our war against Germany and at the very time when he was upholding the Russian Bolshevists. Such action represents mere camouflage. At this moment in France the Bonnet Rouge is being tried for treason, although in every issue it was blatant with pretense of patriotism.

Praised by Germans.

"By turning to The New York Tribune of May 8, 1918, Postmaster General Burleson will find an ardent tribute made by the former German correspondent of the Koelnische Zeitung to Mr. Hearst, and Mr. Hearst's editor in chief, Arthur Brisbane, for having been 'auxiliaries of valued influence' to Germany, especially because of 'the editorials in the Hearst newspapers.' I commend this to Mr. Burleson and also to his Cabinet associate, Mr. Daniels, in view of their recent telegrams of congratulations to Mr. Brisbane, these telegrams having been published in Mr. Hearst's paper, The Evening Journal. Mr. Burleson says of Mr. Hearst's alter ego that he congratulates the people of Chicago because they are to have the benefit of Mr. Brisbane's 'able and unselfish efforts for justice and freedom and true democratic Government.' And Mr. Daniels goes Mr. Burleson one better in expressing the belief that Mr. Brisbane will preach patriotism and civic righteousness.

"The quotations above given deprive Mr. Burleson and the Administration of which he is part of any shred of justification in this matter. I have a good deal more to say, especially about one or two English and German newspapers in the West, which Mr. Burleson left unmolested at the very time of the action of his department against the Metropolitan; it will be said in my letter to the Senator for permanent record."

HERMAN ROBINSON DEAD.

Labor Leader Was Commissioner of Licenses Under Gaynor.

Herman Robinson, who was Commissioner of Licenses in the administration of the late Mayor William J. Gaynor, and long identified with labor organizations in this country, died on Thursday at his home, 807 Cauldwell Avenue, the Bronx, in his fifty-third year. Mr. Robinson was the Eastern representative of the American Federation of Labor for thirteen years and was followed in that office by Hugh Frayne, a member of the War Industries Board, the present incumbent. Mr. Robinson was connected with trade union organizations for thirty-two years.

In his career Mr. Robinson had represented the United Garment Workers of America in the Central Federated Union, and in 1898 and 1899 served as general executive board member. When he was appointed Commissioner of Licenses he resigned the secretaryship of the Central Federated Union.

Mrs. Owen Johnson's Funeral.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Funeral services attended by French Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand with a score of French and American officers and a small circle of intimate friends were held in St. Matthew's Church this afternoon for Mrs. Owen Johnson, wife of the novelist. Monsignor Lee, the rector, officiated.

Mrs. Johnson, prior to her marriage less than a year ago, was Mlle. Cecile de Lagarde of France, a daughter of Mrs. Theodore Davis Boal of Washington, Paris, and Boalsburg, Penn. For two years she assisted in maintaining a military hospital in Chambery. She returned to America last June, and her marriage took place shortly afterward.

Daniel J. O'Conor Dies.

Daniel J. O'Conor, one of the founders of the Catholic Club, the Xavier Alumni Sodality, and one of the organizers of the Catholic Summer School on Lake Champlain, died on Thursday at his home, 194 Riverside Drive, in his seventy-third year. Mr. O'Conor never actively engaged in business, but devoted much of his life to charitable and lay religious work. His father, Daniel O'Conor, was a leading architect and builder in this city years ago.

Miss Winifred Ives.

Miss Winifred Ives, the eldest daughter of the late General Brayton Ives, who was President of the Metropolitan Trust Company and an art collector, died last night at her home at 32 West Forty-ninth Street of angina pectoris. When General Ives died, in 1915, he left the bulk of his estate to Yale University, cutting off his daughter Winifred and leaving only small sums to his wife and other members of the family. The estate was estimated at more than $1,000,000.

WOMEN ON CARS DENY WORK IS TOO HARD

Say Labor Report That They Are Unsuited for Conductors' Jobs Is in Error.

GET SAME WAGES AS MEN

General Manager Hedley Says Women May Even Be Employed as Motormen.

Nothing brought out by inquiries yesterday at the New York Railway Company's offices or of the women conductors themselves seemed to verify the conclusions drawn by Benjamin Squires of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, published Thursday, that the women were doing unsuitable work that was likely to injure them permanently or that they were keeping down the wages of men.

Frank Hedley, Vice President and General Manager of the Interborough Rapid Transit, said that the work was easier and much more congenial than many kinds of employment which women left to work for the railway company; that they received an even more rigid physical examination than the men before they were employed; that there was every convenience for their health and comfort at the different stations; that they were able to get off one, two or three days to rest if necessary; that their pay was the same as the men with the exception of certain bonuses for long service, and that there were no complaints from the women. Mr. Hedley said that the scarcity of men might make it necessary for the company to put women on the front end of the cars as motormen.

Mrs. J. E. Barry, a conductor on one of the Broadway cars, was one of the first women asked by a TIMES reporter about the difficulties of the work. Mrs. Barry is not one of the younger girls and she spoke with great decision.

Find the Work Healthful.

"It's a pelted job," said Mrs. Barry. "I don't know what the men make such a fuss about it for. I've been at work for a month and on the cars with end doors before I came on to Broadway. I wasn't very well when I began, but people tell me I am getting fat. It's healthful work. There is no more reason why a woman shouldn't stand on her feet than any one else. The women don't have exercise enough, and if they had more they would have stronger children. I have to stand up every little while on these Broadway cars. Sitting all the time is not good for you; you don't exercise your muscles.

"If the weather is cold it won't do the women any harm if they put on warm clothes. Fresh air is good for them. The hours are pretty long. If I go on at 12 I get off at 12, that is, with the two hours' layoff, and any woman can stand it if she has a good constitution. As for going home at night, there is no trouble about that. I went around this city at all hours as a nurse for eight years and never had trouble. If a woman doesn't expect she is going to be molested she will not be."

There are notable crushes on the Twenty-third Street crosstown cars, and Miss Margaret Travers, who is one of the young women conductors on that line, says that it is hard work. "It is hard when there is one of those awful crushes, and standing on your feet all day. It is pretty bad on a hot day. I think that would be worse than the cold weather. But I like the money."

Miss Travers left a sedentary place as a dressmaker to become a conductor. She says she cannot wear low heel shoes, though she is going to try, and those she was wearing yesterday were tight, high heeled, and pointed toes, which may have had an effect upon her point of view. The girl conductors had to stand some jeers when they first took up the work, and Miss Travers let slip the reason why some of them have given up the work.

"They were ashamed to be on the cars," she added.

"I like it fine," said Miss Mary Robson on an Eighth Avenue car. "It's the best job I ever had, and I have cared for children and done different things. This is healthy work. Of course it's a little hard being on your feet all day at first, and you get sore swinging the door, but you get used to standing and get over the soreness."

Get the Same Wages.

"Of course, it is hard for any one to stand all day," said Mr. Hedley. "We wish the women did not have to do it. We wish the laundry women did not have to. Some of our women come from the laundries, and they find the work much more agreeable, as do the women who have been doing housework. This Department of Labor report does not agree with the State Industrial Commission report that was made. The women have every facility that the men have and have the same pay, with the exception of bonuses. We know we do not pay the men large wages, but while expenses in all supplies have gone up the rate of fare is the same, and we cannot do better. The women have rest rooms, with toilet facilities; there are trained nurses to visit them, dispensaries, and arrangements for hospital treatment if they are ill. They have rather more layoffs than the men, for there are women to take the other women's places, and there are not now enough men to take their jobs.

"We are not criticising the report. We have not seen it as a whole, merely the newspaper extracts. There is one statement that, while it is true, is misleading. That is where they say that '46.6 per cent. of the women employed by the New York Railways Company begin their work between midnight and 8 A. M.' Of the 450 women conductors only ten work all night. Others begin at 5 and 6 A. M., which brings them in between the hours mentioned, but it is day work. We have jobs open for 400 men, but we can't get them."

J. J. Dempsey, Vice President of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, said:

"From results we do not agree with the statements in the report. A few of our women prefer to work at night, because their husbands are also employed at night. Competition has not lowered the wage scale, which, on the contrary, has been raised. It is increasingly difficult to get men and we must employ women. The women in our employ are sound physically and have been accustomed to doing much harder work than is now required of them. We expect to employ more and more of them."

READS OF HIS OWN DEATH.

Pilcher Hastens Home to Find His Funeral Had Taken Place.

After he has read a collection of clippings from newspapers telling about his melancholy end, George Pilcher of Flatbush may take a day off and go down on Long Island to have a look at his grave. George is grateful for the fine funeral which was given to him, and wishes to extend his thanks to the faithful friends who, by their presence and otherwise, contributed to make the obsequies a success. In justice to Pilcher, however, it should be said that he did not himself know that he was dead and buried until a few days ago. He was down South then, and when he heard of it he hastened back to Brooklyn to learn how much truth there was in the report.

Mr. Pilcher is an expert in the building of organs. He is 51 years old and his home is at 421 East Fifteenth Street, Brooklyn. In December last he left home on a business trip, expecting to be away some months. He was so busy on his travels that he found no time for writing home. In February the body of a man was picked up on the beach at Fire Island, L. I. Both the dead man's legs and one of his arms had been cut off.

Reading of the finding of this body, members of the Pilcher family noticed that its description tallied exactly with that of George Pilcher. As they had not heard from him since his departure, they became alarmed and journeying out to Sayville identified the body as that of Pilcher. With the sorrowing relatives and friends present there was a Masonic funeral at Sayville, and the body was buried in a nearby cemetery.

While all this was going on up North, Pilcher was traveling through the Sunny South diligently pursuing his business of building organs. A few days ago he was in a North Carolina town when he encountered a friend from up home. The friend took just one look at George, turned pale and ran. With some difficulty, George overhauled him. It was then that he learned that he was dead. Pilcher took the first train north, and there was not a little surprise in East Fifteenth Street when he walked into his home with a cheery "Hello, folks."

STRAUS REPLIES TO MAYOR.

Says Subway "Blunder" Will Save the City $439,000.

Chairman Straus of the Public Service Commission wrote again to Mayor Hylan yesterday calling him to account for alleged misstatements. A few days ago the Mayor asked the commission why 1,000 lineal feet of "overhead subway structure" on the White Plains Avenue extension was being removed and who was "responsible for the engineering blunder." Mr. Straus said the Mayor had either been misinformed or was misinforming the public. The whole tenor of the Mayor's complaint, he said, seemed to have the purpose of leading the public to believe that $100,000 of public money was being wasted because of the incompetence of the commission's employes.

"Had you written to me for the facts," wrote Mr. Straus, "in advance of your making an accusation without merit, I could have saved you from committing yourself to this error in giving the press misleading information."

Mr. Straus explained that the structure referred to cost only $37,000 and that a change in the original plan was made because it was deemed wise to build a storage yard for both subway and elevated trains and to eliminate danger to life by removing a crossing at grade. Altogether, the change would save the city $439,000, Mr. Straus said, instead of being a waste of $100,000.

Mr. Straus told the Mayor a good deal of public money could be saved if he would promptly approve the modification of the rapid transit route through the Bushwick section of Brooklyn, which has been pending before the Board of Estimate for a long time.

MASONS PLAN WAR WORK.

Propose to Have Recreation Centres for Members in France.

A resolution suggesting that a fund be raised for recreation centres in France for members of the Masonic order with the American Army in France was adopted yesterday by the Grand Masters of Masons in conference here. It was suggested that every Masonic lodge contribute 5 cents a year for each member in its jurisdiction.

Consideration of the plan is recommended in all the districts of the order, and a copy of the resolution will be sent to all lodges. It was suggested that the workers to maintain the centres be drawn from all districts. Other questions of administration are to be considered after the War Department has ruled upon the proposal.

NEW AID FOR WAR THRIFT.

Democratic and Republican Organizations Join in Propaganda.

The War Savings Committee announced yesterday that it had completed arrangements looking to the enlistment of the Democratic and Republican organizations in this city in the war savings movement. It was stated that the party organizations would begin work immediately on a campaign to spread the gospel of thrift in every election district.

The co-operation of the Republican organization was secured through Samuel S. Koenig, County Chairman, and Benjamin Bulmer, Secretary of the County Committee, while the Democrats were approached through Charles F. Murphy, Congressman Thomas F. Smith, and President of the Board of Aldermen Alfred E. Smith.

INDICTS 3 CONCERNS FOR BUSINESS FRAUD

Federal Grand Jury Also Accuses Eight Individuals of Anti-Trust Violations.

HAD MARKET CORNERED

Finding Says Ironite and Master Builders' Companies Were in Collusion.

A new plan to make effective and prosperous a business combination, to prevent prosecution under the anti-trust laws and to establish the validity of a patent, both in law and in practice, was revealed yesterday when three companies and eight individuals were indicted by the Federal Grand Jury on charges of violating the Sherman law, and for an alleged criminal conspiracy to commit offenses against the United States by devising artifices to defraud.

The defendants are the Ironite Company of Chicago, The Master Builders' Company of Cleveland, and the United Products Company, a holding concern for the other two; Edward I. Bucklin, and William O. Belt of Chicago, Sylvester W. and Sidney L. Flesheim, Solomon M. Hexter, Louis F. Body, and Harold E. Smith of Cleveland, and Richard E. Bishop of this city.

The defendants are engaged in the business of pulverizing iron, which is used with cements, and as a coating for cement for the purpose of hardening surfaces subject to heavy traffic. It is a business which has grown with the increasing use of heavy vehicles, and, it is said, that the defendants, by using alleged illegal methods, have cornered about 90 per cent. of the business in this country.

Complaints against the defendants were received by the Department of Justice last Fall and since that time Special Assistant United States Attorneys Henry A. Guiler and Ryland W. Joyce have been gathering testimony and material to lay before the Grand Jury, which began studying the case a week ago. The basis for the indictments under the Sherman law is the usual one of seeking to restrain trade by monopolizing and restricting output and in fixing prices. It is alleged that the plan to accomplish these purposes was made some time subsequent to July 1, 1916.

The criminal conspiracy indictment tells in detail the new method resorted to. It is alleged that the defendants agreed that a suit should be brought by the Ironite Company against The Master Builders Company and the City of Rockford, Ill., for infringement of a patent for rendering cement blocks waterproof. The suit was filed in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. The City of Rockford, having shown a disposition to fight the suit, was relieved from liability in the matter.

Thereupon The Master Builders Company came to an agreement with the Ironite Company which resulted in the court permanently enjoining the former company from further infringement of the patent, and charged it with costs. Later a license was granted to The Master Builders Company to use the method covered by the patent, on payment of a royalty, which the holding company thereupon undertook to collect from all of the other thousands of concerns in the United States using the same method.

Concerning this scheme the indictment says:

"It was further a part of said scheme and artifice that defendants should falsely and fraudulently represent, pretend, and promise to said manufacturers of said material that said patents were valid, and that any manufacturer not licensed by said defendants who manufactured or sold the material was an infringer of said patents and was liable to pay defendants damages.

"It was further a part of the scheme to falsely and fraudulently represent that the collusive decree was a bona fide decision rendered by the United States District Court on the merits and after a full and complete examination of the evidence. The collusive consent decree was not a decision rendered after examination, but was part of the scheme and artifice, with the object of making the decree appear to the victims as a bona fide decision and for the purpose of leading said victims to believe that the Ironite Company had been successful in a bona fide litigation, contested in good faith by the Master Builder Company, and thereby inducing and coercing said victims to submit to license agreements rather than engage in expensive litigation for the maintenance of their rights."

The indictment said that the patent claimed by the defendants was invalid, and that the process of using powered iron in cement work has been known and used for more than sixty years. Notice was served upon the defendants of the indictments, and all of them promised to appear in court on Wednesday to plead.

CENTRE FOR ENLISTED MEN.

Recreation Building Open to All the Allies to be in Bryant Park.

A recreation building for the use of American soldiers and sailors, as well as the fighting men in all branches of the allied service, will be opened in Bryant Park on May 15 by the Y. M. C. A. The centre is to be established on the idea of the Eagle Hut, built on the Strand in London for American soldiers and sailors and open to all the Allies.

The building will contain writing and rest rooms, a restaurant, amusements, reception rooms, where relatives may be entertained. Y. M. C. A. Secretaries will have desks there to furnish information about the city, hotels, and amusements. It is announced that it is intended to make the centre a "home for the enlisted man as often as he desires."

DEMANDS ON JEWELERS.

Government Is Seeking Platinum, Iridium, and Palladium.

Government requisitions covering platinum, iridium and palladium, which had been expected by the trade for the last two or three months, following the issuance of an order by the War Industries Board, at that time requiring all stocks of unmanufactured metals to be held subject to Government call, were received by the trade here yesterday. With the actual requisition notice came an inventory sheet and several forms providing for waivers of one kind or another. Roughly, the letter accompanying the requisition shows that, under certain conditions, manufactured articles of the metals in question will not be taken over by the Government; that manufacturing jewelers will be permitted, also under specified conditions, to retain 25 per cent. of these metals that they now hold, and that further releases of the metals will be considered by the War Industries Board if made on forms that will be supplied on request.

The letter also asserts that jewelers are to submit, within thirty days of the receipt of the requisition, an estimate of the amounts of the metals in question included in manufactured articles upon which the labor has exceeded 20 per cent. of the value of the metal. Failure to comply with the demands of the requisition renders the offender liable to seizure of his entire stocks of these metals by the Federal authorities.

By way of compensation the Government will pay $105 a Troy ounce for pure platinum, $175 a Troy ounce for iridium, and $135 a Troy ounce for palladium. Compensation for aloys, sweeps, scraps, &c., containing these metals will be determined upon analysis.

FREDERIC MAY ART, $48,433.

Sale of Collection of Japanese Prints and Oriental Objects Ends.

Returns for the final sale of the Frederic May collection of Japanese prints at the American Art Galleries last evening were $4,644, making a total for the entire sale of prints and Oriental art objects of $48,433. "Samedare: The Fifth Month: Street Scene on a Showery Day," by Harenobu, went to a buyer giving the name of Fox for $240, and "Kikuzuki: The Ninth Month: Liberating Caged Birds at Kasamori Shrine," went to the same buyer for $170. Six prints, different scenes in "The Marriage Ceremonies," by the same artist, went to M. Ainsworth for $400.

"Two Tall Women," by Kionaga, went to West for $270, and F. E. Osborne paid $270 for "Yumi Hari Tsuki," "the bow-shaped moon seen through a rocky gorge spanned by a rustic bridge," by Hiroshige. "A Crane Standing on a Rock, Against Which Surf is Breaking," by Hiroshige, went to F. W. Gookin for $150. A book with fifteen double-page color prints and insects, the work of Utamaro, with a preface by Sekien, a publication which helped to make the artist famous, went to R. Tischner for $210.

GAIN IN DRY GOODS SALES.

Shipments Exceed Those Made at This Time Last Year.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade says:

"Current wholesale shipments of dry goods for the week are ahead of the heavy volume of the corresponding week last year. Road sales for both immediate and future delivery show a marked increase over the same period of 1917.

"The number of customers in the market during the week has been about the same as the same week a year ago. Collections are running strong."

Children's Clothes Sought.

Business in children's clothes for Summer wear is said to be very active. Though early orders placed some time ago by retailers were large, it seems that many of them are already back in the market looking for additional supplies of one kind or another. Rompers of various types for both boys and girls seem to be among the most widely sought lines, and it is said that the best and most durable materials are the ones most in demand. Soldier and sailor suits for youngsters are also having a heavy sale.

Phonograph Trade Continues.

Considering the time of the year, the phonograph trade is experiencing considerable activity, according to reports from a number of manufacturers with offices in this city. Installment business in the medium priced instruments is said to be holding up very well in most sections, and in many cases is increased over the same period in former years. The demand for very high priced phonographs in elaborate cabinets seems not to be particularly heavy just now, but the Third Liberty Loan and the season are held to be chiefly accountable for this fact.

Two-Color Leather Novelties.

Two-material combinations in women's garments, which usually entail two different shades if not two different colors, have had their effect on designs for leather belts and leather shopping bags for women. One belt seen was made of black patent leather and white buckskin in rather a large flowered design. It was to be worn with a sports dress of white silk jersey cloth. Soft suede leather is frequently used for the shopping bags, which are large, and battleship gray and red are among the popular color combinations in these articles.

Further Advances in Paper.

The strong buying movement in the local paper market which set in several weeks ago is continuing with considerable vigor, and further increases in quoted prices have been recorded. Bond paper, which went from 9 to 12 cents a pound a short time ago, is now selling at 13 cents. Manila wrapping in rolls and in sheets is very active around 6½ to 7 cents a pound, and news print rules at 4½ cents. With the market in its present state, practically no mills will accept anything but open orders. Though they have been trying hard to catch up on deliveries, it seems that orders are still coming in faster than the goods can be turned out.

Large Ribbon Dress Hats Worn.

Well-dressed women are seen in this city wearing hats, suitable for dress or tailored use, with brims from six to eight inches wide and with high crowns. The brims of these hats are made of heavy body ribbon and the crowns are of lisere or milan. Some models show the use of a double brim, which separates at the edge and produces a puff effect. The trimmings consist of small wooden beads, sewed at intervals over the entire crown. In another type of ribbon hat seen here the brim is doubled and wired so that it will hold its shape, and the crown is made of straw. A wide grosgrain ribbon sash, with a beaded edge, completes this hat. It is seen in navy and navy combined with white.

Fall Shoe Orders Large.

Orders already placed for Fall shoes of the better grades are said to be unusually heavy. A number of factories, in fact, report that they have already booked about all the business which they can take care of under present conditions, and that they have practically withdrawn their most popular lines from the market. Others expect to be in the same position very shortly. It is thought that the early buying for Fall this year is due in great part to the situation which developed just before Easter, when so many retailers found it impossible to get their supplies. What happened then is said to have forcibly impressed retail merchants everywhere with the necessity for early buying.

Sailor to Get His Commissions.

Something new in the way of compensation for employes who have entered the national service has been devised by the Majestic Neckwear Company of this city. The first of the company's salesmen to answer the call was Walter B. Epstein, who joined the navy, and in appreciation of his services and patriotism the company will pay him, during the period of his enlistment, the regular commissions on orders coming from his territory during that time. In Mr. Epstein's absence his territory will be taken care of by the sales manager of the company. Traveling expenses incurred by the latter will be deducted from the commissions, but as these expenses would have to have been paid by the salesman-sailor if he had "gone out" himself, the net return to him will be the same. It is expected that other manufacturers may follow suit.

Drills in Place of Denims.

That temperamental engineer who could not run his train because his overalls were brown, instead of blue, is due for another shock. The weights of the denims used in these garments since the price went up on them so sharply have been principally 2.20s and 2.40s. Only recently, however, the Government ordered 85,000,000 yards of denims of this weight, half of which are to be indigo blue and the other half brown. This means that there is going to be a marked shortage of denims of any color for use by the civilian trade, and it is understood that there is a movement on foot to substitute for them drills running from 2 to 2.50 yards in weight. Inasmuch as the Government and the Red Cross have been big drill buyers also, especially on 2.40s, the suggested substitution may be possible only in part.

Like the Cat, They Came Back.

Apropos of mention in yesterday's TIMES of speculation in piece goods in this market, particularly in the case of serges, this incident is related in the dry goods trade: A—, who is a prominent jobber, about four months ago sold some serge of a certain quality to B— at $2 a yard. B—, in turn, sold them to C— at an advance over that price. This action was duplicated by C—, who got a nice profit when D— bought. D— "hung on" a little too long and, when he was ready to sell, found the goods harder to dispose of than he figured on. Thinking of the great outlet for serges of this kind that A— was, D— brought them to the latter's office and tried to sell them to him at $2.60. Unfortunately for D—, his prospect had duplicated from the mill, under that figure, only a day or two before the goods were tendered to him.

Gray Goods Prices Firmer.

Largely due to a rumor that the Government was again coming in as a buyer of Eastern 38½-inch 64-60 printcloths, prices on this construction stiffened somewhat yesterday in the local gray goods market. Nearby deliveries sold at 18 cents, against 17½ cents on Thursday for Southern goods, and it was reported late in the day that Fall River was asking 18½ cents for them on the strength of the Government buying rumor. From second hands May-June lots of this construction, Southern make, were sold at 17½ cents, while from the same sources Eastern cloths were sold for the last quarter of the year at 17. Second hands also did business yesterday on 5.50 sheetings, for June-August delivery, at 15½ cents. Twenty-five cents was paid to first hands for May-July lots of 39-inch, 64-104, 4.20-yard sateens. Mill prices on printcloths closed this way:

39-inch, 80-80s	22c	38½-inch, 64-60s	18c
39-inch, 68-72s	19c	38½-inch, 60-52s	15¾c
39-inch, 56-44s	14¾c	38½-inch, 60-48s	15¼c

LEPER'S LEGACY RECEIVED.

President Will Devote $140.95 to the Cause of Peace.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—A sum of $140.95, bequeathed to the United States Government by Jesus Y. Garcia, a native of the Philippines, who died recently at Salinas, Cal., of leprosy, reached President Wilson today. The leper's will said the money was "bequeathed to the Government of the United States in order that President Wilson, with powers larger and greater than mine, might succeed in bringing everlasting peace."

President Wilson acknowledged the gift by writing those through whom the money came, saying that "the facts recounted in your interesting letter have touched me very deeply. I wish that the poor fellow who left the little sum of money might be accessible to a message from me, but since he has gone I can only express to you the deep feeling which the incident has caused, a feeling of gratitude that the simpler people, as well as the better informed, in the Philippines should have acquired in this short time such a friendly sentiment toward this country.

"I shall not know exactly what to do with the money, but you may be sure I shall try to apply it to the object that Garcia had in mind."

COMMODITIES PRICES.

The Changes During the Week Were of a Minor Character.

While Dun's list of wholesale commodities prices again showed an excess of advances over declines this week, as compared with last week's showing, both the total number of changes and the number of advances were smaller. Only 51 revisions were shown this week in the 325 articles quoted on, against 66 last week. The respective advances were 30 and 43. About the only features were the added strength of some of the leading provisions at Chicago and the increases in hide and leather prices.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on forty-one standard commodities this week at this city, unless otherwise specified. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and for the corresponding week a year ago:

*Nominal. †Government basis.

Aside from a slight rise in the best Western eggs and a similar drop in the undergrades of cheese, the dairy products list was without change this week. The drop in cheese brought it well below last year's level, but the price of Western eggs is about 1½ cents a dozen higher than at this time in 1917. Live beef and live sheep did not change in the market for provisions at Chicago, but live hogs, mess pork, Middle Western lard, and short ribs all went up. There were no declines. Bacon was higher at this city, but there was no change in the quotation on hams.

In the vegetable list there were fewer changes than for a long time. The only revisions were declines in cabbage and choice medium beans. Advances were lacking. No changes either way were shown by the fresh and dried fruits for the second week in succession. Brazilian coffees again took the downward trail, but no revisions were recorded in the tea list. Spice changes were lacking for the first time in several months. In the grains all the changes were declines, and they took place on corn, malt, oats, and malting barley.

Every item in the hide list, save for No. 1 country steers and No. 1 calfskins, was quoted higher than last week. The former did not change, while the latter fell off. In the leather list advances were recorded on hemlock sole, union backs, and scoured oak backs. The changes in the metals list were again negligible, consisting only of a further rise in tin and a drop in antimony. In the combined list for the drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs, and oils only five of the thirteen variations were advances. The only feature to this part of the list was the further recession of values in the case of narcotics, especially morphine sulphate in bulk. Despite the decline this drug is still $2 an ounce higher than at this time a year ago.

Advances in turpentine and resin were the week's only changes in the naval stores. In the paints there was a rise in white lead, in oil. Tallow went down. Raw silk advanced. Further rises were shown in news boards and chip boards in the paper list. In the textiles the burlaps showed less snap and price variation than for quite a while, and the same was true of cotton goods. In the latter there was a further softening in brown sheetings, but, taken from the basis of second-hand selling prices, some of the unfinished printcloths went up. These prices, however, are now quite generally below those asked by the mills a couple of weeks ago.

ACTIVITIES TURNED TO WAR.

Reserve Board Reports Abandonment of Nonessential Industries.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The rapid readjustment of business and industry to meet specialized war demands and the abandonment of activities not contributing to the war are shown by the Federal Reserve Board's monthly summary of business conditions issued today, based on reports from all Federal Reserve districts.

One report said the transition to war production "is being accomplished with little loss of momentum, and business generally may be said to be broadening and settling on a satisfactory basis."

A note of concern is expressed, however, over the slowness of consumers to economize on food, clothing, and other materials needed for maintenance of the army. Despite the big Government requirements, demand from usual sources for goods of all kinds continues stronger than supply, and consequently the mercantile and general business situation is described as one of intense activity, with war needs receiving first consideration.

The labor supply continues much below the demand, and the scarcity of workmen is now increased by farmers' needs of laborers for Spring planting. The trend of wages is upward nearly everywhere, and few labor disturbances are reported. Construction work and all lines of business depending on it are suffering severely as a result of Government curtailments. Bank clearings generally are increasing and money rates continue firm.

ISAAC GOLDBERG, a painter and builder, 1,418 Forty-sixth Street, Brooklyn, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $5,000 and no assets.

Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 211 business failures during the week in the United States, against 171 for the previous week and 281, 347, 344, and 281 for the corresponding weeks of 1917 to 1914. The Middle States had 47, New England, 33; Southern, 51; Western, 48; Northwestern, 17, and Far Western, 15. Canada had 12, against 19 for the preceding week. About 88 per cent. of the failures had less than $5,000 capital, and 9 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Enjoy Another Big Day, with Irregular Changes—New 4¼s Decline.

The volume of trading in Steel common alone yesterday would have constituted a fair day's activity for the entire list while the last loan campaign was under way, and with the help of a broadening market for other industrial shares the day's total closely approached the biggest turnover of the year to date. For the most part the same tendencies that have shown themselves in preceding sessions controlled yesterday's vigorous fluctuations; the Street was bullish without being able to explain clearly why prices should suddenly advance so rapidly, and watchful for a reaction which ought to make its appearance at about this stage of the movement. Yet the day's changes were mostly on the right side, despite the receipt of some heavy selling orders from traders who figured that the advance could not maintain the gait it has exhibited.

Steel made a new high record for the year at 109⅞, thereby disappointing a number of holders who had orders in to sell at 110, and ended the day with a net gain of a point, but the selling in this issue was matched by renewed strength in some of the other speculative favorites. Distillers moved up 3 points from its low for the day and retained a net advance of 2⅜, while its companion issue, United States Industrial Alcohol, was showing a reactionary tendency. Baldwin Locomotive was in greater demand and closed 2 points higher, while American Sugar and Sumatra surpassed this gain. In other parts of the list there were declines that emphasized the concentration of the big operators upon a few issues in which they have been able to obtain quick results. Brokers reported some increase in commission business, but with the public participation still very small in the light of the volume of transactions.

The first day's dealings in the new Liberty 4¼s, which was limited to actual certificates bought for cash, were disappointing from the investor's standpoint, but closely in line with the predictions that were so freely made by bond men when the Secretary announced his terms. As a matter of investment mathematics the probable selling price of the new issue was fixed at 98 by the market for the second 4s, and yesterday's offerings quickly carried the price close to that basis. From the fact that most of the bonds were sold on behalf of out-of-town customers offering them in large blocks it was assumed on the floor that they represented liquidation by banks which found a smaller sale for the definitive bonds than they had expected, and which wanted to release the capital represented. Other bonds, particularly the New York City issues and the underlying railroad liens, have been advancing in price and the demand for the foreign issues has improved.

Call money did not go above 6 per cent., but nearly all of the borrowing was done at that rate. Time money continues scarce, with 6 per cent. being paid for sixty days.

GOOD TONE IN LONDON.

Naval and Military News Causes Demand for Securities.

LONDON, May 10.—There was a good tone to the stock market, due to naval and military news which encouraged a demand for investment securities.

Interest in mining shares centred in speculative tins. Industrials were firm and active in spots. Oils irregular. Rubber shares were heavy on unsatisfactory outlook for the industry.

Money in better demand. Discounts steadier.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 10.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 58 francs 75 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 25½ centimes. Five per cent. loan, 87 francs 60 centimes.

CURTISS CO. TREBLES SALES

Business Increases from $6,158,440 to $19,826,772 in a Year.

The report of the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motors Corporation for the year 1917, issued yesterday, shows the expansion of this company in response to the airplane program of the Government following the declaration of war. In 1916, the first year of the company's organization, for practically the entire year—it began business as a corporation on Jan. 24, 1916—its gross sales were $6,158,440. Last year they were $19,826,772.

The consolidated income account shows a gross profit from sales of $4,724,561, and net profits of $3,321,355. The gross income was $3,473,862, and net income of $2,420,996. From this sum $1,696,071 was written off for patent valuations and other minor charges, leaving a profit and loss surplus for the year of $730,024. This is equivalent to $1.42 a share on the 217,540 shares of common stock of no par value outstanding, after deducting preferred dividends. The surplus on Dec. 31, 1917, after payment of preferred dividends, was $945,973.

War Affects a Trade Barometer.

With the pressure of steel buying for Government purposes greater than anything the trade has ever seen before, fluctuations in unfilled orders of the companies are of little value as a gauge of business conditions. The decline of more than 300,000 tons in the Steel Corporation's bookings during April had no more reference to future earnings of the organization than would an increase of similar amount. The corporation is assured of all the business it can handle for many months to come. The scope of the Government and allied steel requirements, as outlined at the meeting of steel manufacturers recently, showed that the departments of all producers which turn out steel needed for war, shipbuilding, and railroad work are in the same situation as the plants of the largest unit of the industry.

City Bonds Strong.

New York City 4½s of 1967 were reported sold yesterday at 97 1-16. This price compared with a bid of 93⅝ on April 25. The 4¼s of 1966 changed hands at 91, in contrast with a bid quotation of 87¼ on the April date.

Offerings of Foreign Bonds.

Bond men reported yesterday a dearth of offerings of Anglo-French and United Kingdom bonds at the close of business. Brokers who canvassed the Street for these bonds attained small results for their labor. The Anglo-French 5s advanced about a half point on the Stock Exchange, and the French 5½s, which were also in moderate supply, moved forward the same distance.

Help from the Government.

Word reached Wall Street late yesterday afternoon that Director General McAdoo had extended a helping hand to the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, which was thrown into receivership by the judgment for $38,000,000 or so obtained by the Equitable Trust Company on behalf of the Western Pacific bondholders. Since most of its assets had been attached by the Equitable Trust, and its earnings since the first of the year had been Government property, the Denver had, perforce, defaulted the interest on its bonds. Now, however, it receives a sufficient advance from the Government to meet these overdue interest payments, but the real settlement of its affairs is not hoped for now until the Government contract is completed.

Resigns from the Denver Board.

It was reported late yesterday afternoon that J. Horace Harding of the firm of Charles D. Barney & Co. had resigned as Director of the Denver & Rio Grande. The resignation is understood to have no significance beyond Mr. Harding's wish to relieve himself of some of his extensive responsibilities.

Du Ponts and Baldwin Stock.

The Street heard yesterday that du Pont interests were accumulating Baldwin Locomotive stock. In the big war markets of 1915 and 1916 it was reported on several occasions that the du Ponts were heavy buyers, and it was rather generally believed in stock market circles that a substantial interest had been acquired in the company by the powder makers. Yesterday's story appeared to stimulate buying which carried the Baldwin quotation forward for a gross gain of 3½ points. A rumor that a merger of the Baldwin and Midvale Steel and Ordnance properties appeared in commission house comment, and was upset in official circles of the latter concern.

Curtiss Company's Growth.

Big as was the expansion in the business of the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motors Corporation during 1917, as told in the annual report issued this morning, it does not, according to men in touch with the company's affairs, begin to tell the story of the rapidity of growth of this company in response to the war needs of the country. The real story is partly hinted at in the statement that the company, which early in 1917 was doing a business of around $600,000 a month, is now shipping at the rate of $5,000,000 a month. The Curtiss Company, moreover, succeeded to a very large extent in financing this tremendous and rapid expansion itself, until the Aircraft Production Board decided that it would be preferable to finance it on lines somewhat similar to those under which the Shipping Board is financing new shipyards.

Confidence in Shipbuilding.

American Shipbuilding continued its spectacular rise yesterday, closing at 135, with a gain of some 23 points in less than two weeks. The stock is rather closely held and the transactions small, but the price reflects confidence in the profitableness of the cost-plus contracts under which the concern's Great Lakes yards are all working for the Shipping Board.

Hints of Discouragement.

Unlike the shipbuilding stocks, the distinctively shipping issues were dull, a melancholy exception to the buoyancy around them, yesterday. Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies receded nearly two points, and not all the "pool" talk could keep Marine from losing fractionally in a rising market. The general dissatisfaction of shipping men with the terms on which the Government is demanding that they run their own ships for it, is more and more percolating through the optimism which followed the news that terms of some kind had really been determined upon.

Royal Dutch Petroleum Dividend.

The participation of the American subshares in the 15 per cent. dividend recently declared by the Royal Dutch Petroleum Company amounts to $2.40 a share. The dividend will be distributed by the Equitable Trust Company on May 31 to stock owners of record May 21. This payment will bring the total disbursements on the American shares up to about $4.50 each since Jan. 1.

Maxwell Declares Scrip Dividend.

The Maxwell Motors Company continues to conserve cash for working capital, declaring yesterday its second dividend of the year on the first preferred stock in scrip. On July 1 owners of the stock are to receive dividend certificates at the rate of $1.75 a share, with 6 per cent. interest on the paper. The certificates are redeemable at any time at face value and interest, but mature on July 1, 1920. Stockholders of record June 14 will get the dividend.

Cotton Fireworks Resume.

The cotton market yesterday had apparently had sufficient repose, and resumed its gyrations about where it left off. "Anybody can make his guess come true in this market—for a minute or two—if he guesses hard enough," said one cotton man yesterday, "but it won't stay guessed long enough."

Commodity Prices Still Soaring.

Bradstreet's index number of commodity prices for May 1 stands at $18.9133, a new high record since the compilation of this method of estimating the cost of living. It represents an advance of 2.4 per cent. in prices since April 1 and 25 per cent. since May 1, 1917, while the advance since July 1, 1914, is 118 per cent. The percentage advance in prices in this country in April was just double that in England, where prices advanced only 1.2 per cent.

START TRADING IN NEW LIBERTY BONDS

Active Buying Follows Opening Quotation of 99.10, with Minimum at 98.40.

TOTAL SALES $3,538,000

Financial Circles Not Surprised by Result of Loan's First Venture Into the Open Market.

The initial trading in the new Liberty 4¼ per cent. bonds on the Stock Exchange yesterday brought a result quite different from the first transactions in the two preceding loans, in that all sales were made below par. The ticker carried the report of the opening sale fully twenty minutes after the start of business on the board, a number of individual transactions being lumped together for a total of $407,000 bonds at 99.10. Thereafter trading was active, with a declining price scale, until the minimum quotation of the day was touched at 98.40.

The activity in the new Government issue helped to swell the day's turnover of all bonds to the second largest of the year. Of the aggregate sales reported, amounting to $10,174,000, the 4¼s supplied $3,538,000. The tape recorded numerous large sales. One block of $670,000 went at 98.80 in the first hour of trading, although it was possible that this transaction, like the opening sale, was made up of several separate lots at the same price. After reaching the minimum level of the session toward noon, the price rallied slightly, but the final sale was $25,000 at 98.40 again.

The failure of the bonds to command a price of par in their first venture into the open market did not excite much surprise in financial circles. Bond men had predicted that, on a relative income basis, the new 4¼s would be influenced by the position of the Liberty 4s under 96 to gravitate to a level under par. In some quarters it had been assumed that the sinking fund provision of the loan, whereby a sum equal to 5 per cent. of the issue would be available to support the market, would be put into operation to stabilize the price. As far as could be learned, however, the market was permitted to take its natural course. There was no talk in banking quarters of possible German influences behind the selling, as was the case when the other loans were subjected to heavy pressure in past months, and the market did not attract any unusual attention. Most of the offerings were reported to come from out of town banks and were put out by numerous Stock Exchange firms.

In "making" the opening price, a committee of Governors in the bond crowd examined the buying and selling orders just before the gong sounded. As most of the selling orders called for the best bid price at the start, the committee struck an average of the bids and established the quotation.

The addition of the new bonds to the trading list had little effect on the other Liberty Loans. The 3½s opened at 98.94 and closed at the same figure. The first 4s started off at 95.84 and ended the day at 96.00; the second 4s, from an opening quotation of 95.86, eased to 95.84. The second 4s were more active than the 4¼s, with a turnover of $3,653,000, and trading in the others was light.

The market appraisal of the new Liberty bonds had no dampening effect on the stock market, which again pushed forward to new high levels for a number of issues in the morning. The day's sales amounted to more than 1,200,000 shares, making the fourth million-share session of the year.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

Both Dun's and Bradstreet's this week emphasize the favorable crop report, the success of the Liberty Loan, and the strong stock market as features making for optimism. "The best news of the week," Dun's Review says, "and with a highly significant bearing on the war situation, has come from the great grain-producing regions, and there is perceptible strengthening of confidence as agricultural prospects grow more promising. Not only have the cereal crops made gratifying response to almost ideal weather conditions, but the manner in which retail trading, especially in the East, has broadened under the stimulus of higher temperatures indicates that the most extraordinary prices of modern times have not generally or seriously impaired the nation's purchasing power.

"The notable success of the Third Liberty Loan affords a measure both of the patriotic spirit and the strong financial position of the people. Yet the fact is not obscured that economy and retrenchment are being practiced in many quarters, either through necessity or from a disposition to conserve resources in anticipation of future Federal borrowing, and the movement to promote thrift is spreading. That the country is getting more completely on a war footing each week's reports make clearer."

"Improvement in weather conditions, crops, trade, especially at retail; industrial outputs, general rail and water transportation, and last, but not least, in stock market sentiment and dealings, constitute a sextet of favorable features in the week's reports," Bradstreet's Journal says. "With the Third Liberty Loan largely oversubscribed, the business world seems to have turned its attention back to trade and industry."

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Overseas Marine Insurance Company, Ltd., of London announced yesterday that the company had taken over the English business and assets of the Volga Insurance Company of Petrograd, increasing its paid-up capital to $450,000, with assets of $1,462,000. Lord Balfour of Burleigh has been elected Chairman of the Board of Directors, and Sir Henry Lowther has been elected a Director.

Directors of the Atlas Powder Company have declared a special Red Cross dividend on the common stock, payable May 18, to stockholders of record May 10.

Felix T. Hughes & Co., Inc., investment bankers, have opened offices at 37 Wall Street. They have purchased control of Fellsmere Company. Felix T. Hughes, formerly Vice President of the Engineering Securities Corporation, is President.

THE COTTON MARKET

Day of Violent Fluctuations Out of Proportion to Volume of Business.

Another of the double-jointed reversible markets, to which the local cotton trade has apparently become partial, with some variations, which proved that all possibilities of novelty had not yet been exhausted, was staged at the ring of the New York Cotton Exchange yesterday. It was very largely a trader's market, and the violence of the fluctuations was consequently somewhat out of proportion to the volume of business.

The market opened briskly, on a continuance of Thursday's late buying, with quotations up from 3 to 12 points, and promptly advancing 10 to 20 points more. There was a little flurry of realizing from the long side just here, but it did not last long, and prices went up until they were from 90 to 101 points, at the very top, higher than Thursday's close. This was in the early afternoon, and as soon as it had reached this point the market fell apart and receded as fast as it had advanced. By the time the closing gong sounded, virtually all the gain had been lost, and though final quotations were still from 19 to 27 points higher, except May, which was 3 lower, the tone of the market was distinctly weak.

The responsibility of internal conditions for the upset was indicated by the fact, among others, that perhaps the most bullish piece of news of the day—the definite statement that Ostend was closed to the submarines—came just when prices were starting downhill, and availed little or nothing to start them. In the early morning there was renewed pessimism regarding the Texas and Oklahoma crop, which induced active short covering against relatively few offerings. There were some May notices out, which were in comparatively little demand, but in the later months bidding was brisk. The effect of this condition, with the later decline, was, like the big recent declines, virtually to wipe out the premiums on the near months.

Then, when the market turned soft, all the talk was of the surplus stock of cotton goods in New England, not taken up as expected by Government orders, of possible strikes in English cotton mills over the new wage scale, and similar matters. Southern spot markets continued unaffected by any weakness here, remaining unchanged or 50 points higher, some of them doing a fair business on the rise. Exports yesterday were 15,856 bales.

COPPER EARNINGS LOWER.

Utah and Chino Companies Report Declines for Last Quarter.

The Utah and Chino Copper Companies showed in their reports of earnings for the March quarter, issued yesterday, substantial declines of production and income, as compared with the same period last year. The Utah Company's total net profit was $3,810,064, a recession of $3,435,035, or nearly 50 per cent. As dividends amounting to $4,061,225 were paid out, the result of the quarter was a deficit of $250,561, compared with a surplus of $1,560,604 a year before.

The Chino Company's profit was $1,124,254, compared with $2,992,072, and the deficit after dividends amounted to $180,716. In the first quarter last year a surplus of $817,122 was reported. The company's output of copper totaled 20,721,217 pounds, compared with 20,260,715 pounds in the three preceding months.

The Utah Company's production totaled 40,788,171 pounds, a decline of more than 10,000,000 pounds from the output in the final quarter of 1917. Cold and stormy weather in the first two months of the quarter worked to reduce operations of both companies and increase costs. The Utah Company reported that the amount set aside for the quarter's taxes was equal to 3.213 cents per net pound of copper.

SEABOARD EARNINGS DROP.

Line's Net Income $720,641, Against $1,389,808 in Previous Year.

The report of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company for the calendar year 1917, issued yesterday, shows a net income for the year of $720,641, equivalent, after payment of regular dividends on the 8 per cent. preferred stock outstanding, to $3 a share on the 4 per cent. preferred stock, of which $23,894,100 is outstanding. In 1917 the company's net income amounted to $1,389,808, sufficient to pay dividends on both classes of preferred stock, with a surplus amounting to $1.17 a share on the common stock.

The company's gross operating revenue amounted to $30,345,146, an increase of $4,160,659 over 1916, but net operating revenue remained practically stationary at $8,627,968, against $8,652,580. Increases in taxes and interest charges and a loss of about $70,000 in outside income, resulted in the large decline in net surplus for the year.

STEEL BOOKINGS DECLINE.

Unfilled Orders on April 30, 8,741,882 Tons, a Loss of 314,522.

The Steel Corporation's unfilled orders on April 30 amounted to 8,741,882 tons, a decline during the month of 314,522 tons. The recession was interpreted in the financial district yesterday as an indication that shipments, owing to better weather, had expanded considerably faster than the flow of incoming orders. Domestic buying was light in April and has since dropped to a still lower level.

On Jan. 31 the corporation's order books showed 9,477,853 tons, and on April 30 last year the record total of 12,183,083 tons was reported. An inflow of new Government orders during the current month is expected to be reflected in the next monthly statement.

HAVE UNTIL NOV. 9 TO CONVERT BONDS

Terms on Which Old Issues Can Be Turned Into Third Liberty Loan Are Announced.

McADOO ASKS FOR TIME

Deliveries Cannot Be Made Before July 1, and Owners Are Urged to Withhold Applications Till Then.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Secretary McAdoo announced tonight the terms on which bonds of the First and Second Liberty Loan may be converted into bonds of the Third Loan. Under recent legislation, holders of bonds of the two previous issues may convert their holdings and receive the higher rate of interest of 4¼ per cent. a year, dating from June 15, for the bonds of the first issue, and from May 15 for those of the second issue without adjustment of interest.

Secretary McAdoo asks that those who desire to convert bonds withhold their applications until July 1. Those who prefer to present bonds for conversion before that date will be accommodated with an adjustment of interest. If presented before June 15 the adjustment will be in favor of the holder; if after that date, in favor of the United States.

All applications for conversion must be presented by Nov. 9, and after that date no rights of conversion will be recognized in favor of bonds of either of the three issues. Secretary McAdoo's statement follows:

"Three and one-half per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan, 4 per cent. of the First Liberty Loan converted, and 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan may be converted into 4¼ per cent. bonds during the six months' period beginning May 9, and ending Nov. 9, 1918.

"It will not be practicable to make deliveries prior to July 1, 1918, of 4¼ per cent. conversion bonds, and, as under the act approved April 4, 1918, holders of 4 per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan converted and of 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan presenting their bonds for conversion after July 1 but not after Nov. 9, 1918, will be entitled to the benefit of the increased interest rate from June 15 and May 15, respectively, without adjustment of interest, it is hoped that holders of such bonds will not present their bonds for conversion until after July 1, 1918.

"In the case, however, of holders of such bonds who prefer to present their bonds for conversion on or before July 1, 1918, an adjustment of interest will be made. This interest adjustment in the case of bonds of the First Liberty Loan converted will be in favor of the bondholder, if such bonds are presented for conversion before June 15, 1918, and will be in favor of the United States if such bonds are presented for conversion after June 15 and on or before July 1, 1918.

"In the case of bonds of the Second Liberty Loan this interest adjustment will be in favor of the bondholder, if such bonds are presented for conversion before May 15, 1918, and will be in favor of the United States if such bonds are presented for conversion after May 15 and on or before July 1, 1918.

"Bonds presented for conversion on or before July 1 will be retained and a non-negotiable receipt will be issued therefor, and adjustment of interest will be completed at the time of delivery of conversion bonds. After Nov. 9 no further rights of conversion will attach or accrue to 4 per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan converted or to 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan, and after that date 3½ per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan will have no further conversion rights with respect to the conversion privilege now arising, but any unconverted 3½ bonds will have a recurrent right of conversion in the event of any further bond issue at a higher rate than 3½ per cent. before the termination of the war. All 4¼ per cent. bonds, including bonds issued upon conversions are non-convertible.

"Bonds may be presented and surrendered for conversion at any Federal Reserve Bank or at the Treasury Department. Registered bonds presented for conversion must be assigned to the Secretary of the Treasury for conversion. Such assignments, however, need not be witnessed.

"On conversion of registered bonds registered bonds only will be delivered, neither change of ownership nor delivery of coupon bonds on conversion of registered bonds being permitted. Registered bonds, however, may be delivered upon conversion of coupon bonds if request therefor is submitted. Coupon bonds presented for conversion must have May 15 or June 15 coupons detached and coupons maturing Nov. 15 or Dec. 15 and all subsequent coupons attached. Interest on registered bonds will be paid on May 15 or June 15 without regard to conversion. The coupon bonds issued upon conversion will have four interest coupons attached and on and after the final interest payment date covered thereby such bonds must be exchanged for new bonds with all subsequent interest coupons attached.

"Bonds issued upon conversion of 3½ per cent. bonds and of 4 per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan converted will be dated May 9, and will carry interest at 4¼ per cent. from June 15. Bonds issued upon conversion of 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan will be dated May 9, and will carry interest of 4¼ per cent. from May 15.

"The registered and coupon bonds issued upon conversions will be issued in the same denominations as the bonds of the Third Liberty Loan and, except for the dates of maturity of principal, the dates for payment of interest and the terms of redemption, which will remain the same as for the original issues, the terms of such 4¼ per cent. issued upon conversion will be identical with the bonds of the Third Liberty Loan, including tax exemptions, nonconvertibility, and receivability for Federal inheritance taxes. They will not carry the circulation privilege, they will be receivable as security for public deposits and may participate in the benefit of the bond purchase fund."

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 7,271 packages. Very limited receipts of desirable fresh creamery were picked up quickly, and the market had a strong tone, but without further change in price. Secondary grades are plentiful enough, but more of them are being used in the absence of finer qualities. Ladles and packing stock weaker. Creamery, higher than extras, a lb., 46½@47c; extras, 92 score, 46c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 43@45½c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 38@42c; thirds, 35@37c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 48½@49c; extras, 47½@48c; firsts, 44@47c; seconds, 40@43c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 45½@46c; good to prime, 43@45c; common to fair, 36@42c; renovated, extras, 39½@40c; firsts, 38@39c; lower grades, 34@36c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35@35½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 35½@34c; seconds, 32c; lower grades, 30@31½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 32c; No. 2, 30½@31c; lower grades, 28@30c.

EGGS.—27,532 cases. Only a moderate trading is reported, but there is still a fair call for high grades of fresh gathered stock, and such rule firm, with the tendency still slightly in sellers' favor. Good medium qualities are meeting a fair demand. The range of prices shows little change, although very fine qualities of Northern graded eggs, passable as extra firsts, are now selling at prices fully equal to those obtainable for storage packings, the demand being chiefly for immediate needs, and the quality of requirements being practically equal. Dirties quiet, unless quality is unusually prime. Checks in light supply, and good stock sells promptly. Nearby white eggs plentiful and of irregular quality, showing only a small proportion of strictly fancy goods; such meet a moderate demand at sustained prices. There are accumulations of average good and ordinary qualities, which have to be sold at comparatively easy prices. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 38@38½c; storage packed firsts, 37@37½c; regular packed extra firsts, 37@37½c; regular packed firsts, 35½@36½c; seconds and poorer, 33½@35c; fresh gathered storage packed dirties, 34c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, regular packed, 33@33½c; No. 2 and poorer, 31@32½c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 30@31½c; under grades, 25@29c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 41@42c; ordinary to prime, 38@40c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 38@40c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 37@39c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 39@40c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 36@38c; duck eggs, 29@45c; goose eggs, a dozen, 50@60c.

WHEAT.

The wheat trade is living on hopes that this season's crops are going to be of very liberal proportions, in fact private crop advices continue of a most promising nature. The Spring wheat is growing rapidly in the Northwest, and the recent rains have assured sufficient moisture to carry the crop for a considerable period. It seems probable that the Food Administration may use extreme means to dislodge holders on the farms, and advices from Washington said the indications are that a commandeering program is slated to start next week and may be conducted on a large scale, as every bushel of wheat available is needed for export.

RYE.

The local rye market was unsettled and unchanged at $2.36, cost and freight, to arrive for export. In the West Minneapolis was 3c higher, at $2.33.

CORN.

The action of the corn market on Friday was thought to demonstrate the fact that Thursday's advance was due more to technical conditions than to any real fears of damage by cool weather. The weather map showed temperatures as low as 34 degrees as far south as Dodge City, Kan., but no frosts were reported in the sections where corn is up. The market started firmer, but soon developed weakness, and at the close the July position in Chicago was 2¼c net lower. In the local cash market kiln dried No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.60; No. 4 yellow, $1.50, cost and freight, New York.

OATS.

The oats market lost part of Thursday's advance, closing with net losses of ¼@1¼c. The May position was relatively steadier than the late months and reflected some improvement in the Western cash situation. The Eastern cash position showed weakness, with a very poor demand, natural quoted at 84@85c, and clipped white 85@88c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

An advance of 5@10c in the hog market brought about a higher opening in the provision list on Friday. The demand was again small, however, and subsequently the market developed weakness under liquidation prompted largely by the decline in grain. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 23,000; estimated for Saturday, 15,000. Kansas City received 5,000 and Omaha 7,800 hogs.

COFFEE.

Yesterday's coffee market was usually dull and without feature of any kind and September was the only month in which there was trading. The market opened unchanged from the previous close and closed net unchanged to a decline of 1 point. Under present Government restrictions the market is in an unnatural position and there is little incentive to trade either way, buyers and sellers holding off awaiting developments.

SUGAR.

The recent arrival of some 70,000 bags of Porto Rico raw sugars has tended to help refiners somewhat, but Government and other outside orders have prevented more than very small allotments of refined sugar to local brokers for their trade. The demand, however, is less urgent than for some time past. A satisfactory volume of tonnage has been arranged and the International Sugar Committee continues to make liberal purchases of raw sugar, yesterday announcing purchases of 101,000 bags Cubas, May shipment, at 4.985c., cost and freight; 8,000 bags St. Croix at 6.005c, cost, insurance, and freight, prompt shipment, and 89,000 bags Santo Domingos, at 4.749c, cost, insurance, and freight, (for Canada,) afloat, and prompt shipment to New York.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Stocks were irregular in movement in an active market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Prices at the close were steady, but off from the day's high. Gains from a fraction to more than a point were registered in the majority of issues, though the railroad stocks had fractional losses. New Haven alone excepted with a half point. The volume of business during the session was exceptionally heavy. Profit taking was much in evidence after the first half hour, when the day's high levels were reached.

Rochester, N. Y., May 10, 1918.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

In pursuance of a resolution passed at the special meeting of the stockholders, held on February 25, 1918, the Main Office of the Vacuum Oil Company will be moved on or about the 16th inst., from Rochester, N. Y., to the City of New York, where it will be located at No. 61 Broadway.

The Transfer Office of the Company will be moved at the same time from Rochester to New York and will be located in Room 617, on the sixth floor of the same building, where it will be open for business on and after the 20th inst.

Due to the time required to prepare for the removal, stock cannot be transferred at Rochester after the 13th inst., and in view of the probable delay, under present conditions, in the delivery at 61 Broadway of the Transfer Office equipment, it will be impracticable to make transfers there until the 20th inst. Accordingly it is suggested that Stock for transfer after the 11th inst. be held and sent to the new location on the 20th.

By Order of the Board of Directors of VACUUM OIL COMPANY.

W. M. SMITH, Secretary.

GOVERNMENT TO USE COURT HOUSE SITE

Negotiations Begun with City Authorities for Taking Over Land for War Purposes.

MAY BUILD GREAT BARRACKS

Relief for Camp Merritt Needed—Quartermaster Department Also Wants More Room Here.

The United States Government, it became known yesterday, is negotiating with the city authorities to take over the Court House site in Lafayette Street for use during the war. A proposal has already been put forward by the Federal authorities that the site be used as a concentration camp to take care of the overflow of soldiers now being handled at Camp Merritt, N. J. The accommodations at Camp Merritt have become so crowded, it was said, that the authorities are seeking relief and are considering the advisability of erecting barracks on the proposed Court House ground for use while the war lasts.

At the same time negotiations are under way for the use of the ground by the Camp Community Welfare. It was suggested that the ground be utilized for barracks for the accommodation of soldiers stationed in and about the city or who come to the city from military camps on leaves of absence. The plan is to provide entertainment there for the soldiers while in the city. This proposal, however, has reached only the early stage of negotiation. Colonel George B. McClellan of the Quartermaster's Department has also taken up with the city authorities the matter of utilizing the site for his men. Colonel McClellan said last night that nothing definite had been determined upon, and that the matter was entirely in the hands of the Quartermaster. He said he had another building in mind for use as barracks, and that nothing may come of the Court House site proposal. In some form or another, it was said last night, the site will be used for military purposes.

Work on the erection of a court house was temporarily abandoned after America entered the war because of the high price of materials and labor. On April 10, 1917, the Court House Board adopted resolutions notifying the Board of Estimate that the commissioners waived all compensation until it should be advisable to erect the building, and that the city was at liberty to use the site for war purposes. These resolutions read, in part:

"Resolved, That, in view of the conditions brought about by the entry of the United States into war, it is the opinion of the Court House Board that it is inadvisable at this time to invite bids for the construction of the new court house; and

"Resolved, That the Court House Board tenders to the Mayor and to public authorities of the city, for purposes of defense or other military purposes for the present, the site purchased by the city for the new Court House, including the Hallenbeck Building, now vacant, or any other buildings that may become vacant upon the said site."

The Committee on General Welfare of the Board of Aldermen has under consideration a resolution to rent the site as the Aldermen may "deem proper and advantageous to the city." The resolution provides for improving the site for the purpose of temporarily housing some of the city departments or to lease it for private use. L. Laflin Kellogg, Chairman of the Court House Board, said yesterday that he understood that Governments officials were planning to use the site and that the matter had been referred to Colonel McClellan. He said the Aldermanic resolution was in full accord with the previous action of the board.

"Under the original acts of the Legislature and the acts amendatory thereof," he said, "the following work has been accomplished:

"The land and buildings on the site chosen have been condemned by the city and paid for.

"Most of the buildings on the site have been razed.

"An architect and plans have been chosen by competition.

"The contract, plans, and specifications have been drawn and approved by the Corporation Counsel.

"The contract, plans, and specifications have been approved by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, by the Court House Board, by a majority of the Justices of the Supreme Court, and by the Art Commission.

"Prior to April 10, 1917, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment by a resolution of that board authorized a tentative appropriation of $7,500,000.

"As far as I am concerned, I fully approve of the proposed action of the Board of Aldermen and the resolution. The Court House Board, so far, has only been too willing to comply with the requests of the public authorities for using and renting the buildings upon the site in order as much as possible to meet the carrying charges of the property until the building of the Court House can be commenced."

CHANGES TAX REGULATIONS.

Made Because of Diversity of State Laws on Partnership.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Owing to a diversity in the statutes of different States in regard to limited partnerships, where some, like the Pennsylvania law, actually limit liability of partners, and others, like that of New York, do not, and in both States partnership certificates may be bought and sold like stock company shares, it has been necessary to make an amendment of the income, excess profits, and capital stock tax regulations. Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper announced today that hereafter his bureau would hold that limited partnerships of the Pennsylvania type, with limited liability of partners, are corporations or joint stock companies, while limited partnerships of the New York type are partnerships. The text of the ruling follows:

"Section 10 of the Income Tax act of Sept. 8, 1916, as amended, provides for a tax upon the net income of 'every corporation, joint stock company, or association or insurance company, organized in the United States, no matter how created or organized, but not including partnerships.' Section 4 of the War Income Tax act of Oct. 3, 1917, and Section 407 of the Capital Stock Tax act of Sept. 8, 1916, contain language similar in effect. Section 200 of the War Excess Profits Tax act of Oct. 3, 1917, specifying that when used therein, 'the term corporation includes joint stock companies or associations and insurance companies,' provides for a tax 'upon the income of every corporation, partnership, or individual.'

"Article 62 of the income tax regulations classes limited partnerships as corporations for the purpose of the income tax and requires income from the earnings of such partnerships to be treated like dividends on corporate stock. Article 2 of the excess profits tax regulations extends the term 'corporation' to include limited partnerships.

"So far as limited partnerships of the type of partnerships with limited liability or partnership associations authorized by the statutes of Pennsylvania and of a few other States are concerned, no reason exists for changing the regulations. Such so-called limited partnerships, offering opportunity for limiting the liability of all the members, providing for the transferability of partnership shares, and capable of holding real estate and bringing suit in the common name, are more truly corporations or joint stock companies than partnerships.

"But the regulations require revision with respect to limited partnerships of the type authorized by the statutes of New York and of most of the States. Such limited partnerships, which cannot limit the liability of the general partners, although the special partners enjoy limited liability so long as they observe the statutory conditions which are dissolved by the death or attempted transfer of the interest of a general partner and which cannot take real estate or sue in the partnership name, are so like common law partnerships as to render inadvisable the differentiation hitherto existing in the regulations.

"The same considerations apply to the classification of limited partnerships for the purpose of the capital stock tax. It is immaterial that partnerships with limited liability of the Pennsylvania type may not issue stock. They have capital stock and the interests of the members are shares within the meaning of the statute, stock certificates being mere evidences of ownership.

"Therefore, for the purpose of the income tax, the war income tax, the excess profits tax, and the capital stock tax, limited partnerships of the Pennsylvania type of partnership with limited liability are corporations or joint stock companies, and limited partnerships of the New York type are partnerships. Article 62 of the Income Tax Regulations and Article 2 of the Excess Profits Tax Regulations are modified accordingly. However, in doubtful cases limited partnerships will be treated as corporations unless they submit satisfactory proof that they are not in effect so organized."

CRAIG DENOUNCES ANOTHER PIER LEASE

Says Company Making Application Had $300 Paid In Cash Toward $500,000 Capitalization.

ASKS HULBERT TO DELAY

The Sinking Fund Commission, He Asserts, Should Reconsider Its Award to Pawtucket Concern.

Controller Charles L. Craig sent a letter yesterday to the Sinking Fund Commission protesting against the action of the commission at its meeting on Thursday in voting to lease to the Pawtucket and New York Transportation Company part of the pier at the foot of East Fifth Street. He requested the commission to reconsider its action at its next meeting, and in a letter to Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert the Controller requested that the Commissioner refrain from executing the lease.

The Controller and President Alfred E. Smith of the Board of Aldermen, who is Chairman of the Committee of the Sinking Fund Commission, which passed favorably upon the Pawtucket Company's offer of $8,400 for 200 feet of the East Fifth Street pier, clashed over the matter at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Estimate, the Aldermanic President defending the Sinking Fund Commission's action in voting for the lease.

Craig's Letter of Protest.

Controller Craig's letter to the Sinking Fund Commission is as follows:

To the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund:

Gentlemen: At yesterday's meeting of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund I opposed immediate action upon the proposal to lease to the Pawtucket and New York Transportation Company part of the pier at the foot of East Fifth Street, upon the ground that sufficient information was not before the commission with respect to the identity and financial responsibility of the proposed lessee. The commission, however, determined upon immediate action, but, before voting, accepted an amendment offered by me to the communications and reports submitted by the Commissioner and the Committee on Dock Leases of Waterfront Property, so that a good and sufficient bond would be required from the lessee in twice the amount of one year's rent to secure the payment thereof. Thereupon the commission, the Controller not voting, approved the lease.

I had stated to the commission that I was awaiting information from the Secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts with respect to the incorporation and status of the proposed lessee, and that it had not been received. Such information was received by me at 9 A. M. today, and it appears therefrom that the $500,000 of capital stock heretofore represented as having been paid in full was paid for in the following manner:

	Preferred.	Common.
Cash	....	$300
Good-will and options	$262,500	212,400
Services in securing options	10,000	10,000
Expenses of incorporation and securing options	2,500	2,500
	$275,000	$225,000

So that of the entire $500,000 of capital said to have been paid in, $300 only was paid in cash and $499,700 has been issued for good-will and options, services in securing options, and expenses of incorporation and securing options.

The three persons whose names appear as the incorporators of this company are shown by the Massachusetts records to be the holders of one share each of common stock. The fair inference from this is that they are dummies.

The form of pier leases now made forbids the assignment or subletting of a lease without the consent and approval of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund. Such a provision is nullified if leases are made to corporations having a nominal capital because the entire capital stock of such a corporation can be sold to any one. This would carry with it all the rights under the lease.

At the next meeting of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund I intend to move that the approval of this lease be reconsidered and that the facts above referred to be placed of record, so that the policy may be determined definitely whether leases of this character are to be made hereafter.

Some weeks ago a lease of Pier 69 to the Hudson Dock and Terminal Corporation was approved after I had expressed my desire, in the face of conditions disclosed, to have the matter laid over. Under the plea of urgency, however, I did not persist in this request and voted on the approval of the lease. The experience that has been had in reference to that lease ought not to be repeated hereafter.

I have sent a copy of this letter to the Dock Commissioner and requested that he refrain from executing and delivering the lease until the matter can be considered at the next meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission. Yours very truly,

CHARLES L. CRAIG, Controller.

Company Organized in March.

The incorporation papers of the Pawtucket Company show that the company was organized on March 19 last, and that its officers are John L. Casey of 122 Elton Street, Providence, President; William W. Staples of 41 Freeman Street, North Attleboro, Mass., Treasurer, and Everett W. Crawford of 88 Copley Street, Boston, clerk. Mr. Crawford's place of business is given as 15 Beacon Street, Boston, and his business that of Notary Public. The three incorporators are mentioned as Casey, Staples, and Louis H. Schneider of 1 Beverly Road, Brookline, Mass. On the Sinking Fund Commission's calendar Schneider's address is given as 1 Beverly Road, Chestnut Hill, Mass. On the calendar is also printed that the paid-in capital stock of the company is $500,000, and that the principal office of the concern is at Pawtucket. The incorporation papers give the company's place of business as Boston and its principal office as outside the State. The company was organized at 15 Beacon Street, Boston, the business address of Crawford, the Notary Public. The incorporation papers show that each incorporator held one share of common stock. Dock Commissioner Hulbert in a communication to the Sinking Fund Commission requested that the lease be approved.

The dispute in the Board of Estimate occurred just as the regular calendar of the board had been finished. The Controller produced a document saying that he had just received a report from Massachusetts showing that the Pawtucket concern, which was represented as having a paid-in capital of $500,000, had actually a paid-in capital of $300, and had $499,700 in capital stock, representing good-will, options, and services, and he added:

"I shall move at the next meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission that this action in making the lease be rescinded, and I am going to notify the Dock Commissioner that pending that action he is not to execute the lease."

"I don't see what anything you have read has to do with the lease of a dock to the Pawtucket company," said President Smith. "I fail to see what the question of a lease with the Pawtucket Steamship Company has to do with the Board of Estimate. Nevertheless, while we are on the question, I will say that this company has offered to use 200 feet of a pier that the city has apparently no use for at a rental of $8,400 a year.

"The company will construct a shed and put up a surety bond for the rent. If they don't pay the rent we can pull the boats out of the water, take the shed off the dock, and put them all in the marginal way for the kids to play with. I move we adjourn."

The motion to adjourn was carried.

ACTRESS FILES DENIAL.

Adele Rowland Answers Alienation Suit of Roberta Menges Tearle.

Adele Rowland, actress, who has been sued in the Supreme Court for $100,000 damages by Mrs. Roberta Menges Tearle for alienating the affections of Conway Tearle, actor, filed a denial in the case yesterday. Tearle also filed an affidavit in which he declared that there was no truth in the charges. Miss Rowland said that statements concerning her which were made at the trial of the Tearle divorce case by "hirelings" of the plaintiff were "unqualifiedly false in every particular." She said further:

"Nothing could possibly cause more pain to a woman of respectability—on the stage as I am, or off of it—than to have such statements made concerning her. Roberta Menges Tearle will never get a verdict against me because I am absolutely innocent of wrongdoing."

OPPOSE GERMAN LANGUAGE.

Advertising Club Urges Suppression of Papers Using It.

Declaring that German language newspapers and periodicals constitute a menace to the United States and a serious obstacle to the successful prosecution of the war, the Advertising Club yesterday, through its Board of Directors, adopted resolutions urging that the Government either suppress the offending publications or force them to print their contents in English. A copy of the resolutions will be sent to the President of the United States and to the Senators and Representatives from New York. The resolutions say:

"The German-American press, published in the German language for circulation among German readers in America, discourages the study and use of English by residents of America and encourages the general use of an alien language. It tends to foster alien ideals instead of ideals of this nation, and provides a medium for the expression of disloyalty by innuendo even under the strictest censorship. In our opinion this is a menace to the people of this country and a serious obstacle to the successful prosecution of the war for the establishment of those ideals for which we are fighting."

Announcement was made yesterday of a public mass-meeting to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, Wednesday, May 15, at 8:30 P. M., under the auspices of the American Defense Society and the American Relief Legion, urging the President to forbid the publication of newspapers and magazines printed in the German language during the war. Henry G. Quinby will preside and make the opening address. Among the speakers will be the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady and Robert George Patterson.

Copies of the resolution of the Women's Organization petitioning the President to forbid the publication of German language newspapers have been circulated in this city and are being sent to clubs all through the country. These petitions are to be sent to the office of the American Defense Society, from where they will be forwarded to President Wilson. Mrs. Oliver Cromwell Field, President of the American Relief Legion, induced Scribner & Sons to abstain from publishing books printed in German during the war.

CUT RUBBER IMPORT IN HALF

Rubber Association Takes Account of the Scarcity of Tonnage.

According to a plan outlined at the meeting of the War Service Committee of the Rubber Association of America at the Waldorf yesterday, imports of rubber will be restricted this year to 100,000 tons, just half of last year's figures. More than 350 rubber men from all parts of the country were present when P. Chauncey Anderson, counsel of the Bureau of Imports of the War Trade Board at Washington, told of the great need for restricting imports, chiefly because of lack of tonnage.

The plan became effective on May 8, and it will have a complete trial for three months. During that time only 25,000 tons of rubber will be received from Singapore, Batavia, and Ceylon. At these points, which are the largest sources of the world's rubber supply, the export will be restricted by the Consular officials.

Bertram G. Work, President of the B. F. Goodrich Company at Akron, Ohio, and President of the Rubber Association of America, reported that the gross imports of rubber during 1917 amounted to 200,000 tons. Seventy per cent. of all rubber here is used in making tires, he said, and urged that pleasure driving be eliminated during the war, so that the present curtailed import of rubber may be adequate for work actually necessary at this time. Other speakers were Charles T. Wilson of New York, Chairman of the Rubber and Kindred Products Committee of the Rubber Association, who conducted most of the negotiations between the rubber industry and the Government; Charles Noave and James N. Gunn, President of the United States Tire Company.

GETS $55,000 FOR INJURIES.

Court Rules Railroad Employes Cannot Assume Personal Risk.

What is believed to be the largest verdict ever obtained in court for personal injuries received by a railroad employe was handed down by Justice Blackmar in the Appellate Division of the Second Department in Brooklyn yesterday in the case of Oscar Fried against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. Fried is to receive $55,000.

The decision also creates another precedent in ruling that employes cannot assume personal risk and that carriers cannot have employes assume that risk for the purpose of avoiding liability, under the Federal Employers' Liability act. William Travers Jerome, counsel for the company, introduced a contract signed by Fried, releasing the company from liability for accident or injury to himself. Apropos of this contract, Justice Blackmar said:

"The agreement is not a contract, for these three reasons, namely: First, it does not purport on its face to be a contract; second it is supported by no consideration, for it is not a part of the plaintiff's contract of employment. The plaintiff's signature was obtained long after he was employed; third, it is against public policy for an employing railroad company to contract with an employe to relieve itself from liability for negligence, imposed by law."

Fried had both arms burned off when 11,000 volts of electricity passed through his body while he was working on a telegraph pole in the Mount Vernon yards of the railroad company in December, 1913. The case has been tried three times.

NEW HAVEN ENGINES IN USE.

Denied That New Locomotives Are Too Wide for the Tracks.

An official of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company said yesterday that a report from Stamford, Conn., published yesterday, that new locomotives purchased by the company were so wide that they could not pass each other on the double tracks, was not true. It was reported among railroad men that the new locomotives were built for the broad-gauge Russian railroads and were so much broader than those of American type that they could be used only on single-track branches and could not be taken into some of the New Haven stations.

"The engines do not exceed the standard New Haven clearance, and they can be operated over all parts of the line for which they were purchased," the official said. "They are not Russian engines, but engines of American type, commonly known as the 'Santa Fé' type. Thirty-six of an order of fifty engines have been received, and they are operating between Hopewell, New Haven, and East Hartford, and from Midway to Boston."

APPOINT COLUMBIA MEN.

Students Accepted for Fourth Officers' Training Camp.

Secretary Frank D. Fackenthal of Columbia University has received notice from Adjutant General McCain that all Columbia men who were recommended by the university authorities for admission to the Fourth Officers' Training Camps have been accepted. These men are instructed to report to Camp Meade, Maryland, within a short time.

Among the men who have qualified is Professor John L. Crawford, who is at present Adjutant of the Columbia Student Battalion. All those accepted were in the Columbia Corps either this year or last and four of them attended Camp Columbia last Summer. Those accepted include: Mervin Ash, Jr., '17; Alan E. Burns, '19; Isadore Ginsburg, '19; Silvan Gottschall, '20; L. Monroe Mayhoff, '19; Nathaniel Ross, '19; John S. Sinclair, '19; Frank J. C. Weinberg, '17, and Gordon H. Williams, '19.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Warehousemen Buy Washington Street Building—Cash Sale on Third Avenue.

In order to capitalize the existing scarcity in warehouse space and assure permanent occupancy, the Coastwise Warehouses, Inc., purchased from John J. Burton, for a reported price of about $175,000, the eight-story semi-fireproof building at 466 to 470 Washington Street. The structure covers a plot 70 by 124 by irregular, and contains about 65,000 square feet of space. It is especially adapted for warehouse purposes, being equipped with automatic sprinklers and elevators, and having a carrying capacity of 350 pounds to the square foot. The Charles F. Noyes Company negotiated the transaction.

Resale of Third Avenue Corner.

A Third Avenue corner which recently figured in a large exchange transaction was resold yesterday in a cash deal. Alfred L. Anderson bought from the Gross & Herbener Company the five-story building at 991 Third Avenue, northeast corner of Fifty-ninth Street, on a lot 20.1 by 80, opposite the department store of Bloomingdale Brothers.

The property is leased to one tenant until May, 1929, at $5,500 net per annum. It was taken by the selling company recently in part payment for the block front on the east side of Broadway, from 157th to 158th Street, sold to Melville H. Bearns. Negotiations are now pending for the resale of the parcel at the northwest corner of Greenwich and Duane Streets, another of the properties taken by the Gross & Herbener Company in the same transaction. Byrne & Baumann were the brokers in all these deals.

Long-Term Lexington Avenue Lease.

Hornthal & Co., manufacturers and wholesalers of undertakers' supplies, who have been for more than twenty years at 10 East Twenty-second Street, leased for a term of sixty years from the Beckman estate, the five three and five-story buildings at the northeast corner of Lexington Avenue and Fifty-second Street, known as 595 to 599 Lexington Avenue and 137 to 139 East Fifty-second Street. The plot measures 51.7 by 90. The buildings will be remodeled for the use of the lessees from plans by Schwartz & Gross, and are expected to be ready for occupancy about Oct. 1, 1918. L. C. Cowen was the broker in the transaction.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Since Thursday night the Western disturbance has moved from Iowa to the lower St. Lawrence Valley, with somewhat decreased intensity, and showers occurred generally from the upper Mississippi Valley and central Tennessee eastward. No high pressure area follows this disturbance, and there is another of marked character over New Mexico, with rains and snows northward and northwestward into Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, and southern Nevada. Elsewhere the weather was fair.

It is decidedly cooler in the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys, the lower lake Superior regions, the Southwest, and western Colorado. Elsewhere temperatures were higher, although still considerably below the seasonal average in the Northwest.

Showers will occur Saturday in New England, followed by clearing weather and thunder showers in North Carolina. There will also be showers by Sunday or Sunday night in western Tennessee, the Ohio Valley, and the southern upper lake region, but with these exceptions the weather will be fair Saturday and Sunday over this forecast district.

It will be cooler Saturday in the Atlantic States as far south as South Carolina and warmer in the upper lake region and the lower Ohio Valley. It will be warmer Sunday in the lower lake region, the upper Ohio Valley, and the centre of the Middle and South Atlantic States.

Storm warnings are displayed along the Atlantic Coast from Norfolk to Eastport.

Winds for Saturday and Sunday along the North Atlantic Coast will be strong southwest to west, showers Saturday, fair, cooler Sunday; Middle Atlantic Coast, strong west to northwest, diminishing Saturday night; clearing; South Atlantic Coast, moderate southwest, except fresh off the North Carolina coast, generally fair.

FORECASTS TODAY AND SUNDAY.

Eastern New York—Clearing and cooler Saturday; Sunday, fair, warmer in the western portion.

Southern New England—Showers Saturday, followed by clearing and cooler; Sunday, fair.

New Jersey—Fair Saturday, cooler in the interior; Sunday, fair.

Western New York—Fair Saturday; Sunday, fair and warmer.

Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair, somewhat cooler Saturday; Sunday, fair and warmer.

Northern New England—Showers and cooler Saturday; Sunday, fair.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1917.	1918.		1917.	1918.
3 A. M.	43	52	4 P. M.	54	70
6 A. M.	48	55	6 P. M.	53	73
9 A. M.	50	58	9 P. M.	53	65
12 M.	53	68	11 P. M.	51	63

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 63; for the corresponding date last year it was 49; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 57. The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 55; at 8 P. M. it was 61. Maximum temperature 74 degrees at 1:30 P. M.; minimum 52 degrees at 1:55 A. M. Humidity, 88 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 94 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.79 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.65 inches.

FINDS PROFITEERING IN NONWHEAT FLOUR

Administrator Hoover Says Corn, Oats, and Barley Should Sell for Less Than Wheat.

GIVES SCALE OF FAIR PRICES

Fines Proving Ineffective, Dealers Who Violate Rules Will Be Shut Up Hereafter.

The Federal Food Board announced yesterday that it had received a protest from United States Food Administrator Herbert Hoover against the unjustifiable rise in the price of substitutes for wheat flour, such as corn, barley, and oats. According to Mr. Hoover, the price of these substitutes should now be considerably lower than wheat flour, and the public should be warned of that fact. In his message to the local Food Board on the subject, Mr. Hoover said:

"At present prices of corn, barley, and oats, the millers are or should be offering meals and flours from these grains at prices considerably below wheat flour; in fact, cornmeal should be selling from the mill door at 25 per cent. less than wheat flour, and oatmeal even less. Ratio white corn flour or barley flour should be selling at 10 to 15 per cent. below wheat flour. There is therefore absolutely no justification for present price levels in these substitutes.

"I would be glad if you would give wide publicity to these facts. Retailers should not take more than 18 to 20 per cent. on the sale price for handling these products. The wholesale maximum margins have been fixed as per our bulletin of April 6 at not over 10 per cent. in bulk; therefore, with these criteria to guide you, we would be glad to have you follow up any prices made at higher levels. Where dealers still have stocks bought at higher levels than there prices, every step in the chain of retailer, wholesaler, and miller should be prepared to justify their prices as reasonable, and any failure to so justify should be recommended to us for summary action. The time has now come when the readjustment to the prices of these grains should have taken place.

"We are requiring the principal corn millers to report to this office by telegraph weekly the prices at which they purchase corn and the prices at which they are quoting products and we are directing them to make duplicate reports to you. But without waiting for these reports you can take the above approximate levels as being indicative and instruct your county and city agents to make a drive on the reduction of prices to proper levels, as the maintenance by millers and dealers of the price levels which were due to shortage in railway transport last Winter has now become in many cases simple extortion. Where dealers have paid more than present prices they run risks of spoilage in endeavoring to hold material for prices at old levels, and the first loss of reducing prices is the smallest loss."

The Federal Food Board called attention yesterday to the fact that there was an abundant supply of rye flour on the New York market and very little demand for it. The board urges an increase of consumption of this flour. There are nearly 100,000 barrels of rye flour in New York stores and in transit. The Food Board presents to the housewife's consideration the fact that rye is the only flour that can be used with perfect satisfaction in wheatless yeast breads. It is the only flour other than wheat that has gluten in it, and it stands up in the yeast bread as barley flour and corn flour will not.

P. A. Johann of the Complaint Bureau had before him for preliminary inquiry yesterday the firm of Middendorf & Rohrs of 38 Ganseevoort Street, on a charge of selling more sugar to the individual consumers than the Food Administration rules permit. This is a wholesale firm, and it made a practice of selling sugar in 100-pound lots to immediate consumers. John Rohrs acknowledged that the firm had violated the regulations of the Food Administration, and offered to pay $1,000 to any war charity that the board would suggest. The board took the offer under consideration.

It was announced yesterday, however, that the Food Administration had decided that fines did not carry sufficient penalty to effectively enforce Food Administration rules, and that hereafter grave offenders will have their places closed.

Food Administrator Herbert C. Hoover has consented to speak at the National Milk and Dairy Farm Exposition, which will take place at the Grand Central Palace during the week of May 20. The exposition will be devoted to practical demonstrations of the use and manipulation of all forms of milk products.

THREE DUTCH SHIPS COMING

German Safe Conduct for Grain Carriers for Holland Promised.

ROTTERDAM, May 10.—It is announced here that the arrangements with Germany for guaranteeing the safety of ships to and from the United States to carry grain for Holland having been completed, the cargo steamers Zyldyk, Hector, and Delfland probably will sail on Saturday for America in exchange for the steamers Hollandia, Java, and Stella, bound here.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The announcement from Rotterdam that the Dutch Government will start three ships to America Saturday in exchange for three vessels on this side means that Holland has finally decided to accept the American offer to expedite grain to the Dutch population.

When Dutch shiping was seized by the United States and Great Britain the United States informed Holland that, to meet the immediate food needs of the nation, it would dispatch three vessels grain laden if Holland, in exchange, would start three for the United States. The demand that three ships start from the other side was to prevent the three set aside for the grain shipments being held after their arrival on the other side. It was feared Germany might demand that they not return.

Seven ships loaded with phosphate rock, oil, coffee, and rugs are on their way to Sweden, it was announced today, under the temporary agreement by which the United States will furnish supplies to Sweden in exchange for the use of 100,000 tons of Swedish shipping.

FRENCH CHECK A NEW GERMAN THRUST EAST OF AMIENS; AMERICAN TROOPS CHEERED ON PARADE IN LONDON; BERLIN RUSHES TROOPS EAST TO MEET UKRAINE MENACE

LORD READING WARNS AGAINST FALSE OPTIMISM

Undue Elation Over Victory or Depression from Defeat Decried by Ambassador.

TRIBUTE TO BRITISH RULE

Like American Democracy, It Is Founded on Justice, He Tells National Press Club.

TAFT FOR A GREATER ARMY

Should Be 5,000,000 Men, with Authority for as Many More as May Be Needed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—In a speech at the National Press Club tonight, the Earl of Reading, British Ambassador and High Commissioner, paid a tribute to the efforts of the United States in the war, particularly toward overcoming the submarine menace and in sending troops "rapidly and in increasing numbers" to take their part with the Allies in the great battles."

Lord Reading was introduced by William H. Taft, ex-President of the United States, who made a spirited speech in which he said that he "was sick and tired of hearing people in this country criticise Great Britain." Mr. Taft called for an army of 5,000,000 men and advocated giving the President authority to raise as many more as were needed.

Lord Reading said in part:

"In these times attention is arrested more by what men do than by what they say, except for the inspired utterances and declarations of the great leaders of thought and policy. Men turn to the realities and look to the deeds which are chronicled daily in your newspapers and present a mirror of the cataclysm through which we are living.

"Powerful as is at all times the influence of the press, it is vastly more powerful and fraught with deeper responsibility now, when the vast concourse of the peoples of the world are so vitally interested in the events in Europe. The public obtains its information from your newspapers, which were never so anxiously awaited as at the present day. Elation or depression may follow upon the news, emotions are roused, and the heart beats faster as the marvellous deeds of heroism are recounted in your columns.

"But to give this news is only one of the functions of the press. One of its chief duties is to stimulate patriotism and loyalty and devotion to the cause, to preserve that spirit which never doubts the ultimate victory, but never neglects preparation to secure it. When everything does not succeed according to expectation, there is a tendency in human nature to look into every nook and cranny, seeking to discover mistakes and disappointments that so often accompany the initiation of such a vast undertaking as war on the present scale.

Mistakes and Their Value.

"The only value of the discovery of a mistake, as you have found here, is to root out the evil and set to work with all energy to remedy the error with the greatest rapidity. In looking around, let us never forget the great and inspired achievements attained in face of difficulties that appear to baffle human endeavor. To you who are so familiar with all that has happened in your country, I will not dwell tonight upon the splendid services rendered to the allied cause by the United States of America, at a moment when the American Navy is contributing so largely to defeating the submarine attacks upon the world's shipping, and at a moment when reinforcements of your troops are being transported rapidly and in increasing numbers to take their part with the Allies in the great battles—notwithstanding all the boastings of Germany. America at the moment of call from the Allies responded swiftly and unhesitatingly with troops to the utmost of the shipping capacity, to be used as deemed best for the furtherance of the common cause, with the unselfish object of assisting to the best of her ability in the emergency.

"As time has passed and the vision has become clearer, it is apparent that this titanic conflict is one in which you must inevitably have borne your part, for the struggle is between two systems of government—the one where the individual exists for the greater glorification of the State or dynasty, which uses him merely as a pawn and makes him act in defiance of all moral and ethical rules that should govern human beings; the other where the State exists for the protection of the weak and oppressed, and the safeguarding of the rights and liberties of individuals, and is based upon those principles of morality which are the only safe guides for human conduct.

"The first is best illustrated by the words of Nietzsche: 'Life is in its essence injury, the overpowering of whatever is foreign to us and weaker than ourselves, suppression, hardness, the forcing upon others of our own forms, incorporation of others, or, at the very least and mildest, their exploitation.' The other is based, in the language of

General Maurice Punished; "Placed on Retired Pay"

LONDON, May 11.—The Army Council, having considered the explanations tendered by General Frederick B. Maurice, has decided that he shall be placed forthwith upon retired pay. The retirement of General Maurice was made known tonight by a brief statement from the War Office as follows:

"The Army Council, having considered the explanations entered by Major Gen. Maurice of a breach of regulations committed by him in writing and causing to be published a letter which appeared in the press on the 7th instant, have decided that he be placed forthwith on retired pay."

The retirement of General Maurice was fully expected. It is believed that the Army Council has made it impossible for him to write anything more regarding the controversy which he brought to a climax. His side of the case, however, has been circulated in army and political circles, although the public may not learn it until after the war.

BERLIN SCHEMES AGAINST HOLLAND

Claims Are Designed to Place Her Largely Under German Economic Influence.

SHIPPING QUESTION AS CRUX

Agreement on the Other Points Is Dependent on Giving of Ships After War.

LONDON, May 11.—Germany has made claims on Holland which are described in a Central News dispatch from The Hague as very serious stipulations that would bring Holland to a great extent under the economic influence of the Germans. These claims are in addition to the one respecting the Dutch tonnage which is demanded for use after the war as an offset to the tonnage which the Allies are now using.

"Germany is actually endeavoring to make a second Rumania of Holland," says the dispatch.

At a conference a few days ago between Foreign Minister Loudon and the Ministers of the United States, Great Britain, France, and Italy it was pointed out that the Entente was viewing with great apprehension the situation between Holland and Germany. Holland was told of the dangers which might befall from agreement with the German claims in connection with grain shipments from America. The Entente representatives promised not to put difficulties in the way of Holland, but made it plain that their Governments had not departed from their original viewpoint.

Germany now makes an agreement on the economic questions dependent upon acceptance by Holland of its claims regarding the shipping question. This might again give rise to serious difficulties.

Loudon Explains Negotiations.

AMSTERDAM, Friday, May 10.—Replying to a question in the second chamber today regarding the settlement between Holland and Germany, the Dutch Foreign Minister, Jonkheer Loudon, said:

"The Government's reasons for considering the relations which had arisen with Germany as strained lay in the emphasis with which the German Government made known what it demanded from the Dutch Government, some parts of which demands were immediately seen to be unacceptable. Through her Minister here, Germany gave both the Dutch Premier and the Minister of Foreign Affairs to understand that it was a matter which had not been decided without thorough consideration and must be accepted in its entirety as an irreducible minimum.

"The Dutch Minister at Berlin, in particular, was clearly told that if the German demands were not granted the consequences would be most serious for Holland.

"The question of the transit of sand and gravel had been regulated in a manner which encountered no fundamental objections on the part of the Dutch Government. On the other hand, the character of the goods to be transported over the Limburg Railway was in direct conflict with the actual wording of the Dutch proclamation of neutrality. The Government decided, therefore, unhesitatingly to oppose this. It was only when the German Government had accepted transport of provisions for the army as the fourth exception, and had agreed to the description of the term 'arms' in accordance with the Dutch conception, that the Dutch Government could drop its objections."

The Minister said he was sufficiently convinced that the arrangements now made with Germany respecting the transit, especially of sand and gravel, would not lead to the allied Governments putting fresh difficulties in Holland's way. He had informed the British and French Governments of the difficulties which had arisen with Germany, although it was not for a moment a request for their approval.

"These Governments," he continued, "showed that they fully understood the seriousness of Holland's position. By a joint step taken by their Ministers here, who were accompanied by their colleagues of America and Italy, they informed us that for this reason alone, but with absolute maintenance of their standpoint as regards the principle, they would place no difficulties in the way of the Dutch Government in the matter of the arrangements made."

BAVARIANS FOR UKRAINE

Cavalry Detachments Said to be En Route Through Belgium.

HATRED OF GERMANY GROWS

Even the New Ukrainian Government Has Some Strongly Anti-German Members.

FEAR IN REST OF RUSSIA

Mirbach's Demands Regarded as Presaging a Military Occupation of the Country.

LONDON, May 11.—The situation in the Ukraine has become so disturbed that the Germans have dispatched large detachments of Bavarian cavalry from Flanders to that region, according to the correspondent at Amsterdam of the Exchange Telegraph Company.

Word that fighting is to be resumed in the Ukraine has been received from Liège, according to the dispatch. The Bavarian cavalry detachments are said to have arrived at that city.

Russia has been suddenly faced with events that may again change the political outlook, the Petrograd correspondent of The Daily Express telegraphs. Germany, he says, has apparently found that economic dominion over Russian territory is insufficient and is seeking military occupation.

An extra session of the Bolsheivat Government council has been held in Petrograd to discuss the situation created by the ultimatum recently delivered by the German Ambassador, Count von Mirbach, which embodied demands of a character apparently calculated to turn Russia virtually into a German colony. Premier Lenine's speech at this meeting was extremely pessimistic, the correspondent reports.

According to the newspaper Podnia, the question of transferring the capital to Nijni-Novgorod was broached, as was the subject of immediate military measures for the defense of Moscow against possible nerial attacks.

A dispatch to The Times from Stockholm says the Finnish Government has summoned M. von Enkel, Finnish Minister at Petrograd, to return to Helsingfors for the purpose, it is stated, of discussing the suggested annexation of Russian Karelia by Finland.

M. von Enkel is quoted by the correspondent as reporting the situation in Petrograd still precarious, owing to the scarcity and dearness of food. The Lenine Government, however, is gaining in stability and power, he says, subduing the unruly elements and making an effort to reorganize the army. The number of unemployed is very great, and industry is completely at a standstill. The peasantry, who are the principal supporters of the Bolshevist Government, the Minister added, are still looking to that Government for a free distribution of land, most of which, in the meantime, has been left uncultivated.

M. Boichilier, a French economist, who has arrived at Stockholm on his way to France from Russia, confirms the statements of the Minister regarding the labor situation. Bolshevism, the French traveler says, has destroyed industrialism and disintegrated labor throughout Russia. Labor, he reports, is now gradually ranging itself against the Bolsheviki, the better elements among it becoming reactionary.

MOSCOW, May 8, (Associated Press.)—The Germans are continuing to make arrests in the Ukraine. A rigid censorship has been established by them at Kiev, but it has been learned that they have searched the residence of Professor Hruschevsky, President of the Kiev Central Rada. They did not succeed in apprehending him, as he had escaped from the city. They attempted to arrest Commissioner Salikovsky, who also escaped. A member of the Rada named Petoura was arrested, but subsequently was released, protests having been made by several local organiations.

Ukrainian Hate of Germany Grows.

STOCKHOLM, May 11. — Ukrainian newspapers which are reaching Stockholm contain articles showing how the German methods in the Ukraine are evoking opposition and hatred in all quarters. It is difficult to discover evidence of any pro-German party whatever. Even the new Government, which is chiefly composed of the owners of large estates, has among its members some prominent White Russians, who are known to be strongly opposed to German policies and who may be assumed to have accepted office for the present for purely material reasons.

One of the newspaper articles describes the disarming of what is known as the Ukrainian Blue Guard, in which a strong anti-German spirit had become manifest. The Minister of War told the Rada on the following day that the disarming of a portion of the troops was with the Government's consent, but that

Two American Fliers Are Probably Captured

PARIS, May 11.—Thomas Buffun of New York and Donald E. Stone of Mexico, N. Y., both members of the Lafayette Flying Squadron, are missing. Stone probably is a prisoner in Germany. His machine was seen by infantry observers to fall behind the German lines after a fight in which nine French airplanes and thirteen German machines were engaged.

The aviator referred to as Thomas Buffun may be Thomas B. Buffum of Ithaca. The Social Directory for 1918 states that Thomas B. Buffum, a son of Mr. and Mrs. David B. Buffum of 301 Dryden Road, Ithaca, is in the French flying service.

ALL GERMANS LAUD RUMANIAN TREATY

But Joy Over This "Petroleum Peace" Contrasts with Sharp Discussion Over Ukraine.

COURSE THERE ASSAILED

Authorities Said to be Anxious About Safety of Troops in Disturbed Area.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

AMSTERDAM, May 11.—It is interesting to note that not a single voice is raised in the German press against the application of the "Woe to the conquered" doctrine to Rumania and the merciless exploitation that the country has to submit to.

It is only natural that the conservative journals should lament that there is no indemnity in hard cash. Democratic journals like the Berliner Tageblatt register their approval of this use of force.

How completely the July peace resolution of the Reichstag has become obsolete is clearly shown by the fact that the liberal Frankfurter Zeitung, though admitting that the treaty is not in keeping with that resolution, greets it with satisfaction.

Germania sees in the economic arrangements preparations for defense in the economic war after war. "A land of bread and oil," it declares, "will be provided for Central Europe."

The petroleum peace is what Die Post calls the treaty, and it is clear that just as Germany made peace with Russia, so as to enable her to wage war more easily in the West, she forced peace on Rumania to enable Central Europe to arm herself economically after the war at the expense of that country.

It remains to be seen if things will work out so satisfactorily from the German point of view, but the Russian example scarcely suggests that they will.

The complete chaos of the eastern situation, indeed, is gradually dawning on the German mind. That was shown by Wednesday's debate in the Main Committee of the Reichstag, full reports of which are at hand.

Herr Noske, Socialist, showed that the German Government was completely under the thumb of the military party. When an agreement on anything was reached between those two factors, it was only achieved by the Government giving way, he said. There was no getting away from the impression, he added, that Germany was again under absolute rule, and that the powers that be were evidently trying to find out how much of that kind of thing the people would stand. The dream of all the reactionaries had been realized by the German action in Kiev, and the whole eastern peace was seriously endangered. The censor was suppressing the truth regarding the situation, and General von Eichhorn had simply made himself military dictator. It is useless to deny, he concluded, that the German action had caused disagreements between Germany and Austria.

Even the Centre Party, to which the Chancellor belongs, had nothing but reproaches for the Government. Baron von Recenberg denied that the German troops were received in Ukraine with joy, as had been stated.

Dr. Erzberger, too, said that the military doings in Ukraine amounted to nothing less than a military coup d'état, and were heaping up untold misfortunes for Germany. He warned the Government that there might

KING REVIEWS AMERICANS

LONDON, May 11.—Twenty-seven hundred stalwart infantrymen of the new United States national army marched through London today and were reviewed at Buckingham Palace by King George. Though no one knew until yesterday afternoon that they were coming, London rose to the occasion. There was no time to decorate streets, but public offices flew the Stars and Stripes, and if the crowds lining every inch of the long route—crowds which cheered and waved handkerchiefs—are proof of enthusiasm, their welcome was warm indeed. Officers and men, at any rate, were pleased.

"It was just fine. They cheered us right along, and the King returned the salute of every officer," said a young Lieutenant to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, as he rested in Wellington Barracks.

That the Britishers were satisfied was shown by their admiring comments.

"When Kaiser Bill sees that little lot coming over, he won't be half sorry he sank the Lusitania, eh, wot?" remarked one cockney youngster.

Cheers British Public.

As a matter of fact the parade came at a very happy moment. England has just woke up to the need of giving a real welcome to American troops as they land, and she has been cheered in the last few days by Secretary Baker's announcement that 500,000 Americans are now in France. It was good reading for a nation that realizes how hard its own gallant troops are being pressed in Flanders, but it was better still to see the long khaki column swinging steadily along and to know that these were a mere handful of the American forces. It was a visible realization of the Allies' hopes.

The regiment which had the honor of representing America's might had only landed in Liverpool ten days ago. On arriving in London the men marched to Wellington Barracks. Here is a big parade ground, and along it had been set up a long table divided into sections for each company. The men piled their arms, laid aside their packs, and received each of them a paper bag containing sandwiches and other refreshments.

The ceremonial march began at a quarter before 12 o'clock, and hearty cheers went up as Colonel Whitman and his staff on horseback were seen making their way at the head of the long line of men along Birdcage Walk. Across the Horseguards Parade into Whitehall they passed, and Lord Milner, War Secretary, had a distinguished party of guests in his office to see them go by. Every window of the War Office was crowded with clerks, and soldiers in Army Headquarters gazed curiously to see what sort of figures their latest allies were cutting. Trafalgar Square and every other point of vantage were packed with spectators, and hats came off and cheers were raised as Old Glory and the regimental banner were carried past.

Biddle Presented to King.

Meanwhile at Buckingham Palace the royal family were gathering to greet the Americans. General John Biddle was there early, and as soon as Queen Mary appeared in the court yard he was presented to her. Queen Alexandra drove up, the Duke of Connaught came afoot, and then the King in his khaki Field Marshal's uniform came out of the palace. He had a long chat with General Biddle before the time for reaching the reviewing point arrived.

The scene was really a brilliant one. Opposite the palace forecourt a guard of honor of the Grenadier Guards and a band were drawn up. Behind them rose a bank of people on the steps of

Foch Has the Responsibility, High Authority Warns, And None of the Allies Can Now Limit Its Support

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

PARIS, May 11.—Lord Derby's speech on Thursday was aimed at what is universally regarded as the bullseye of the present situation—the maintenance of unity of command on an efficient working basis. With the Germans preparing another attack similar to that of March 21, General Foch bears the greatest weight of responsibility that any one man ever had, and the highest duty of every allied Government is to hold up his hands.

An authority, commanding worldwide respect and closely in touch with the military situation, gives this statement for THE TIMES:

"General Foch has been selected by the Governments of France and Great Britain and the United States as General in Chief, directing all the strategic movements of the French, British, and American armies on the Franco-British front. He has been charged by those three Governments with complete and undivided and indivisible responsibility for success or failure on the western front.

"All three Governments concerned have, in effect, solemnly pledged themselves to place at the disposition of General Foch those elements of their military forces which he desires, and at the times and places where he desires to have them. His responsibility is absolutely indivisible except by rescinding the convention of Beauvais.

"When he asks one of these Governments to give him such and such part of its military forces, in order to enable him to carry out his plans and to bear the responsibility with which he is charged, if that Government says, 'No, your plan conflicts with some plan of our own and you must subordinate your plan to ours,' then that Government attempts to share General Foch's responsibility. This it cannot do.

"There is no provision in the convention of Beauvais for the responsibility being placed anywhere except with General Foch. Each Government is in honor bound to do its best to help him carry this responsibility. This responsibility can be divided only by rescinding the convention of Beauvais; by a reversion to the former order of things, which brought us so nearly to great disaster; by dividing the responsibility, as it was before, among three separate and independent nations, who wage three separate and independent wars and who vainly attempt to fight the common enemy with three separate and independent armies under three separate and independent Commanders in Chief.

"From such a reversion to the former order of things, God protect us!"

ATTACK AMERICANS ON LORRAINE FRONT

Berlin Says We Lost Heavily in Engagements Near Apremont and Parroy.

BY A "MINE BOMBARDMENT"

Lively and Successful Encounters with French and British Also Recorded.

BERLIN, May 11, (via London.)—Havy losses were inflicted on the American troops southwest of Apremont (east of St. Mihiel, in the "northwest of Toul" sector,) and north of Parroy (in the Luneville region) by a strong mine bombardment, according to the official communication from General Headquarters today.

The paragraph of the official bulletin dealing with this particular operation reads:

"By means of a strong mine bombardment we inflicted heavy losses on the Americans southwest of Apremont and north of Parroy."

The rest of the official communication, reporting considerable fighting at various points on the western front, is as follows:

In the Kemmel region the artillery activity was lively at intervals and we carried out mipor operatione successfully.

Local attacks by the French north of Kemmel and near Locre were repulsed.

On the Somme battlefield violent infantry engagements often developed. After artillery preparations extending over several hours English regiments attacked in vain our lines in Aveluy Wood. Their attacking waves suffered heavlest losses under our fire.

Night attacks by the enemy against Hangard also failed.

On the western bank of the Avre the enemy obtained a footing in Grivesnes Park. For the rest his attack broke down with sanguinary losses.

There were reconnoitring engagements on the Oise-Aisne Canal and in Champagne and northeast of Pont-a-Mousson.

In Apremont Wood we repulsed the advance of a French battalion, which was supported by pioneers and flamethrowers.

The official report from General Headquarters this evening says:

There were local infantry engagements on the southern bank of the Lys and the western bank of the Avre.

Otherwise there was nothing of importance.

From a Staff Correspondent.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 10.—Authentic reports show the German Army today numbers approximately 5,300,000 men, or almost twice the size it was in August, 1914, and 1,500,000 less than in August, 1916. This is exclusive of the Austrian Army, which in the calculations of military experts is a check-off against the Italian Army.

Careful calculations have convinced Allied military experts that from her own resources Germany cannot add more than 600,000 men to the army this year, and against this is chocked an annual German loss of 1,200,000. In calculations of the military manpower situation the potentialities of German activity in the Ukraine are always a factor. It is no secret that the Kaiser hopes to place a Ukrainian army on the western front before the end of the war.

The military situation as to man power may be summarized by saying that France, England, and the United States now face a German Army of more than 5,000,000 men. Calculations of the strength of the British and French forces show the size of the task confronting America as to raising military man power. Information from Allied sources shows that there are now on the western front from Calais to Belfort 208 German divisions. These divisions average in size 18,000 men, making a total of 3,654,000. This is 1,200,000 more than the Germans had on the western front one year ago, and of the 1,200,000 increase 75 per cent. came from the Russian front. The remainder represents recruits.

Rumania Not a Factor.

The signing of a peace treaty by Germany and Rumania will not add greatly to German military strength, for it is understood there were only five German divisions on the Rumanian front. There are on the eastern front sixteen regular German divisions, three reserve divisions, and twenty-two Landwehr divisions, a total of forty-one. These divisions are the poorest part of the Kaiser's army and only at two-thirds strength, making about 500,000 men. There are in German depots 300,000 soldiers, and on lines of communication 1,000,000 more. There is one German division in Palestine, but none

BATTLE AT MAILLY-RAINEVAL

Germans Gain at First in Drive Southwest of Hangard.

BUT THEY ARE PUSHED BACK

Heavy Losses Inflicted, Says Paris, in Sharp Engagement After Violent Gunfire.

FOE BEATEN AT ORVILLERS

French Make Considerable Progress in Wood Southeast of Montdidier.

PARIS, May 11.—The Germans today attacked the French lines southwest of Mailly-Rameval (between Hangard and Montdidier) and gained a small portion of territory, but by a counterattack the French retook the lost ground, according to the bulletin of the War Office this evening.

Heavy losses were caused to the enemy in this engagement, it is stated. Violent artillery fire preceded the assault, and, in fact, heavy gun action had been in progress from Mailly-Rameval southward to Grivesnes since late yesterday.

There has been renewed activity east of Montdidier also. Northwest of Orvillers-Sorrel the French troops made an appreciable gain of ground in Mareuil Wood.

The night bulletin reads:

After very violent artillery preparation, the Germans, with special assault troops, attacked this morning our positions in the Bois la Caune, southwest of Mailly-Rameval.

Favored by mist, the enemy gained a footing in the northern part of the wood, but was driven out by a brilliant counterattack by our troops, who completely re-established our lines. The Germans suffered very heavy losses and left in our hands about 100 unwounded prisoners, 15 machine guns, and material.

There was lively artillery action in the region of Orvillers-Sorrel.

The day statement of the War Office reads:

During the night very spirited artillery fighting continued all along the front in the region of Grivesnes and Mailly-Rameval. North of Grivesnes our troops carried out a raid and took fifteen prisoners.

In a local operation at Mareuil Wood, northwest of Orvillers-Sorel, we made an appreciable gain of ground. Thirty-nine prisoners and several machine guns fell into our hands. A German counterattack was broken up completely by our fire.

French detachments made several incursions into the German lines, especially southeast of Montdidier, northeast of Thiaucourt, in the sector of Sapignuel, and in the Woevre, taking prisoners and materiel.

There is nothing to report elsewhere on the front.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, May 10, (Associated Press.)—Grivesnes, on the front below Amiens, where the Germans suffered a sharp local defeat at the hands of the French Thursday, was under a most severe bombardment again today, but no infantry action developed, and the French organized themselves in their newly captured position.

Along the greater part of the front military operations were confined to small enterprises. The waiting attitude of the Allies is expected to compel the enemy to show his hand very shortly.

The Germans have brought a large number of fresh divisions into the line facing Amiens, indicating preparation for action in that locality, but they have shown few signs thus far of beginning an offensive.

General von Below's army remains quiescent in the vicinity of Arras. Each time the enemy has attempted to feel the strength of the allied forces recently, either north or south of the Somme, he has suffered a severe setback, causing him to hesitate to undertake a new operation on a large scale. He has learned by hard experience that the Allies are prepared.

General Foch's army is now absolutely unified, without distinction as to nationality. It is fully acquainted with German tactical methods and ready to meet them. Any German operation having the nature of a surprise is improbable, but it is felt the enemy must soon make another effort to reach the objectives for which he set out on March 21 and thus far has not attained.

FRENCH GAIN NEAR LOCRE.

British Carry Out Successful Raids West of Merville.

LONDON, May 11.—French troops advanced their line slightly last evening east of Locre, on the Flanders front, the War Office announced today.

The day statement of the War Office reads:

French troops advanced their line slightly yesterday evening east of Locre and captured several prisoners.

We carried out successful raids during the night west of Merville and brought back a few prisoners and machine guns.

A raid attempted by the enemy east of Ypres was stopped by our fire.

Field Marshal Haig's report from General Headquarters in France tonight says:

A raid attempted by the enemy in the neighborhood of Nenville-Vitasse (southeast of Arras) was repulsed.

There is nothing further of special interest to report.

GREATEST OF SHELL STORMS.

Germans on March 21 Fired Almost Three Times as Many as in War of 1870.

BERNE, April 21. (Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—German batteries, before the great assault on the British front on March 21, fired almost three times as many shells in three hours as the Germans fired in the Franco-Prussian war.

A German staff officer has informed a Swiss newspaper that the German artillery used more than 1,500,000 shells in the three hours' bombardment preceding the attack. This is over 8,300 a minute or, estimated on a front of fifty miles, about 160 a minute per mile.

The number of shells used by Germany in the war of 1870 was about 650,000.

WIDE ATTACK IS EXPECTED.

Prolonged Delay of Germans Is Thought to Indicate This.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 11.—(Associated Press.)—It seems strange that the enemy has not renewed his big drive before this, and it will be stranger still if many days pass without his beginning the offensive. There is no doubt that the Germans are anxious to begin operations as soon as possible, and the delay, if such it may be termed, indicates the probability of an extensive push being in preparation.

The completion of the enemy plans has been hampered greatly by the counterwork of the Allies, particularly in the aviation and artillery branches; but even this could hardly hold back an attack indefinitely. There are many signs that point to another violent attack, such as ushered in the offensive of March 21, and a large part of the battlefront would be involved if what seems to be the present plans of the Germans were put into execution.

The Germans have recently made some extravagant claims in their wireless dispatches regarding the British casualties.

The German statement asserted that the Fifty-sixth Division was "almost completely wiped out." This division lost 43 officers and 1,423 other ranks.

The Fifth Berkshire Regiment was "annihilated," according to the Germans. The Berkshires' casualties were 15 officers and 300 other ranks.

Berlin asserted that the Twenty-third Royal Fusiliers regiment was "among the regiments which have suffered most heavily." This unit lost 5 officers and 250 other ranks.

The Fourth Yorkshires, Berlin asserted, "were captured almost complete." The Yorkshires had 191 men missing.

French pollus last evening stormed and occupied a pile of brick which was once the hamlet of Bouloose, just south of Scherpenberg Hill, and they also smashed the Germans out of Bouloose Cabaret nearby, but an enemy counterattack during the night seems to have forced the French to retire to their previous line. Bouloose is on comparatively high ground which has been hotly contested in recent days.

The French this morning began a local operation on a little stream known as Vyverbeek, which empties into the southern end of Dickebusch Lake.

DISAVOW PEACE OFFER.

Prof. Quidde Had No Official Standing, Says Berlin Paper.

AMSTERDAM, May 11.—The German Professor who was recently reported by the Swiss correspondent of The London Daily Mail to have approached Professor Heron (Herron?), an American living in Geneva, with peace offers which he attempted to have sent to President Wilson, had not been officially deputed to make such offers, the semi-official North German Gazette asserts.

This Berlin authority says that it is authorized to announce that Professor Quidde of Munich, who was reported to have made the offers, was without any commission whatever from Chancellor von Hertling or the German Foreign Office.

ASSAILS SNIPING BY ARMY CLIQUE

J. L. Garvin Calls On Government to Take Firm Measures of Suppression.

BITTER AGAINST REPINGTON

Colonel's Writings Reviewed to Show the Danger of These Attacks to the Allies.

VALUE OF UNIFIED COMMAND

One of the Moves Assailed by the Clique Declared to be Salvation of the Entente.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sunday, May 12.—The Observer today publishes an article by its editor, J. L. Garvin, calling upon the Prime Minister and Secretary of War Milner to take action to put an end to what Mr. Garvin calls "the whole campaign of calumny by the unbridled military faction which has been fighting for seven months against closer unity of the Allies and working immeasureable harm in the army abroad, in the nation at home, and, above all, in America."

"On the eve of the worst crisis of the battle," continues Mr. Garvin, "when the utmost confidence should exist between the Government and the army, the whole nation is endangered by a demented and virulent clique, which sticks at nothing, which shrinks from no mischief that private passion can inflict on the public interests. It is necessary that what we have to say should be put before the Prime Minister, and especially before the War Minister, Lord Milner, in order that they may act."

Extracts from Mr. Garvin's article follow. It should be noted that the paper, which he calls the Naturalized News, is a Sunday publication with the name National News, edited by Alexis Marie de Beck, which recently undertook, in the words of The Daily Mail, "a mission to restore Asquith to the Premiership." The paper was financed by a naturalized Hollander, who withdrew his financial backing following an article in The Evening Standard dealing with de Beck. Mr. Garvin writes:

"General Maurice is a cipher. A source of far worse mischief is Colonel Repington, working in ill-omened association both through The Morning Post and that dubious sheet the Naturalized News. Since Colonel Repington entered into this latter connection he has wholly ceased, so far as any trust in his discretion is concerned—for we impung neither his morals nor his intentions—to be in a situation requisite for Caesar's wife.

A View of Colonel Repington.

"Every one knows the profound weaknesses of character and judgment which always have marred Colonel Repington's extreme ability and thwarted his career. When he was fined in February for having written a notorious article in The Morning Post the Magistrate, Sir John Dickinson, addressed him in the following grave words:

"'Colonel Repington, I regret that a distinguished soldier forgot momentarily, I hope, to be a good citizen. The lapse was a serious one.'

"The warning was not heeded. The hope that Colonel Repington would remember in the future to be a good citizen was not realized. He cannot help himself unless he is restrained in his judgment of war. He has oscillated between levity and pessimism. At the end of August, 1914, he guessed that the Russian steam roller ought to reach Berlin in two months. In his panic after the battle of St. Quentin he was for immediate conscription up to the age of fifty-five. His pet theory has been that men should be swept wholesale into the army.

"The cause of it all has been that fundamental want of balance and good sense, which has involved him in a thousand snares of self-contradiction. A famous instance was in the controversy upon the national service when Lord Roberts and Lord Haldane were as poles asunder, but Colonel Repington's versatility achieved the astonishing feat of supporting them both with equal vigor. That is typical. It explains why he has been able to induce himself to write both in The Morning Post, which is a reactionary but ultra-patriotic organ, and in The Naturalized News, which professes to be of extreme democratic tendency, which has been edited by a naturalized Austrian and financed by a naturalized Dutchman, which has been carried on at a heavy loss for no easily intelligible reason, and which has been attacking the British Government in these ambignons circumstances such as are not tolerated in any other belligerent country in the world. Colonel Repington clamored for Irish conscription in The Morning Post, which supports that policy. In The Naturalized News, which is, of course, against it, Colonel Repington sentimentalizes and hedges.

References to Italy.

"In this organ a British soldier has brought himself at different times to write monstrous comment upon Italy's misfortune in Isonzo and to advocate a maudlin weakness toward Italy's enemy. On Nov. 4 last he wrote:

"'It is not only the Italian front that crumbled, it is the military repute of Italy that has not survived the rough touch of German arms. Shameful retreats and wholesale surrenders are new facts in the general situation, and if this continues we shall have to consider the Italian Army as in a state of decomposition. Most of all we deplore the loss of spirit which is to the army what honor is to a woman.'

"With the misfortunes of our own Fifth Army in mind, what are we to think of a British soldier who, at such an hour, could bring himself to write this of Italy in an organ edited by a naturalized Austrian? Yet, in a few weeks, when he found his military judgment had been as bad as his manners, he was trying to mend the insult by effusive compliments to Italy and her troops.

"But that is not the worst. A few months later he was clamoring, like so many other shallow, shifting minds, for a separate peace with Austria. Still in the organ edited by a naturalized Austrian, Colonel Repington dared to write the following:

"'The English do not want to fight Austria, which is an ancient ally of onrs, and we have regretted that our troops have had to go to Italy to fight with her.'

"Imagine the effect of stuff like this on Italy and the Southern Slavs. Then judge whether a mind which could bring itself to write this in such a medium is not more mischievous from the point of view of allied intercsts than any Bolo known. Need we add, however, that within a few weeks the same man was writing, this time in The Morning Post, just the opposite tone. On most things Colonel Repington has the same automatic tendency to turn about and 'Jump Jim Crow.'

"When the war broke out he seemed first to regard the German power with almost facetious optimism and he regarded it afterward with exaggerated gloom. At first he thought the war would be soonest won in the east, and made the immortal comment, 'Russia, for her part, is performing the function of a steam roller. Russia should reach Berlin within two months.' At the end of August, 1914, when this fantastic delusion was exposed, Colonel Repington jumped the other way and became the blindest of extreme westerners.

"He was the most infatuated advocate of that policy which allowed Germany and Austria to pursue their work in the East until at last the Central Powers were able to turn with full force on the West to create the most formidable situation that could have existed. Serbia, Rumania, and Russia went down, and our naval blockade was largely thwarted by Germany's land extensions. We and others were true westerners who saw from the beginning that the way to bring about the best possible position if not the only possible position for a complete allied victory in the West was to keep up the Eastern pressure upon the enemy.

"The problem of problems for the Allies at the start was to link up solidly with Russia through the Black Sea. That was as clear as light. Colonel Repington could never see it. He could not think a hard problem clean out.

"He was even in favor of leaving Greece to King Constantine. 'Why did we go and terminate the neutrality which Greece wished and endeavored to preserve,' he asked in The Morning Post on March 16. He imagines he knows more about the true interests of Greece than does Venizelos, just as he proclaimed several times he knows more about food than Lord Rhondda.

The Campaign Against Lloyd George.

"All these things were venial by comparison with the campaign which he began seven months ago against closer military unity of the Allies, and which openly or covertly has been continued ever since. Nothing in the world could have been more directly destructive of allied interests or more welcome to the enemy.

"He has been carrying on attacks which give unmixed delight and encouragement to the enemy, but tend directly to sow dissension among the Allies, especially between Clemeneeau and Lloyd George, to weaken the moral position of General Foch, to breed distrust between our own forces and the War Office under Lord Milner, and Chief of Imperial Staff, General Sir Henry Wilson, to mislead and distort opinion in America, where these articles are reproduced, to strike at the foundations of army discipline and stable government, to weaken public faith and cohesion in the hour of crisis. We say that no man at this juncture could have set his hand to worse work, and what we say we shall proceed to prove.

"Everything else, even insult to Italy, kowtowing to Austria, cheerful anticipation of the Russian steam roller getting to Berlin in two months, was only foolish by comparison with the later unforgivable offenses which go to depress the fighting front, to disorder the home front, to disorganize the Allies and to strike at the very heart of their common interests and their common cause. This stage must be very carefully followed.

"The trouble began to come to a head last Autumn, when the life-and-death necessity for closer co-ordination of the Allies' forces and counsels became clear and when the Versailles Council was mooted. The essentials were again clear as light, but again it was the essentials that Colonel Repington could not see. He could only plunge into frantic exaggeration of the side issues and personal feelings. He determined to stake all upon backing Sir William Robertson, to the deep prejudice of that officer, against the British, French, Italian, and American Governments—nay, against the unavoidable imperative requirements of the case. There was now a stone wall in front of Colonel Repington, and to go butting at it blind was his only conception of political strategy.

"All cool considerations of principle and reason in this very large and serious matter were swept awsy by a growing fury of protest for or against persons. Colonel Repington was fairly stung by a gadfly. Rushing amuck and abroad he lost all sense of direction. He fought tooth and nail against the Versailles Council, against every notion of putting the British Army under French command. Last November he went so far as to write that as against Hindenburg and Ludendorff the Allies never could secure unified command. Again he wrote, still more culpably, 'No power of the Allies is prepared to accept a subordinate position in this war. Even if the field commanders did so, their Governments would not.'

"If that were true nothing could save the Allies from defeat, and they would deserve to be defeated. It was not true. The Versailles Council was set up and its importance increased. Still Repington strove blindly against it. He was baffled again and again by the force of facts, but still he worked on. By the middle of last February, when Colonel Repington returned from another visit across the Channel his confidence in the Prime Minister and the British War Board was finally gone, but, on the other hand, according to the new game now to be worked so hard with all the old futility, 'we have the greatest confidence in the French Prime Minister, Clemenceau, and in General Pétain.'

"The thing now is to flatter Clemenceau in order to play him off against Lloyd George, and by the same means, if possible, to sidetrack General Foch, the coming man. So we presently get this wonderful passage of military sagacity in The Morning Post:

"'I hope that the entire conduct of the war in France will be left to General Petain and Sir Douglas Haig, subject to Clemenceau's supervision.'

"Clemenceau, a civilian, is to be a sort of political generalissimo, now urges our fanatical stickler for military control. Will it be believed that Clemenceau, thus impudently exploited, held up to admiration by comparison with Lloyd George, was the great statesman who chiefly insisted on the extension of the British front for which our Premier and War Board are stupidly and falsely blamed while Clemenceau also was one of the most urgent advocates of the unified command against which Colonel Repington was fighting with feet and nails. What hotchpotch and farrago of childish folly and futility it all is! Of course, what we have quoted was still meant as a means of keeping out General Foch and, of course, the trick was too thin to bluff a baby.
